GLENN YOUNG AND ORA THOMAS SLAIN IN FIGHT AT HERRIN

CHARGES AGAINST JUDGE ENGLISH FILED IN HOUSE; INQUIRY LIKELY

Affidavits of Four East St. Louis Residents Allege "Tyranny on Bench and Bankruptcy Ring."

COMMITTEE ACTION EXPECTED SOON

Karch Asserts That Ex-Referee Thomas Obtained $3000 Fee to Get Prison Sentence Suspended.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Quick action by the House Judiciary Committee is expected on the charges of misconduct filed today with Speaker Gillett against Federal Judge George W. English of East St. Louis. Representative L. C. Dyer of St. Louis, ranking Republican member of the committee, said this afternoon that a meeting probably will be held Monday or Tuesday to consider the question of an immediate preliminary hearing which will determine whether a sweeping investigation shall be ordered.

There are now in progress two formal proceedings looking toward the impeachment of Judge English, each entirely independent of the other, but both having as their immediate object a searching investigation of the Judge's official acts. One consists of the Hawes resolution, which has been pending before the Rules Committee for nearly two weeks; the other consists of the charges filed today by four citizens of East St. Louis, which Speaker Gillett at once referred to the judiciary committee.

Effort to Block Inquiry.

For more than a week powerful influences have been in motion to block the proposed inquiry, but it will be remarkable if an investigation does not follow now. Such an investigation may, among other angles, disclose some of the methods which have been employed, and the influences which have been invoked, to prevent it from being held.

The charges received by Speaker Gillett were sworn and signed statements from Charles A. Karch, former United States District Attorney in Judge English's district; M. Paul Murray, a City Commissioner of East St. Louis; Thomas M. Webb, a prominent East St. Louis attorney, and A. F. Franks, a cigar manufacturer of East St. Louis.

Karch and Webb, both of whom were disbarred but later reinstated by Judge English, charge him with tyranny on the bench, and set forth the circumstances of their disbarment. Each charge that Judge English is unfit to hold the office he occupies, and declares that because of his conduct the court has fallen into disrepute with the general public as well as with the bar.

Irregularities Alleged.

They declare that the dignity and prestige of the court can only be repaired by his retirement.

In describing the facts attendant upon his disbarment, Karch accuses Judge English of saying that if Karch had approached one step nearer to the bench on that occasion, he would have shot Karch.

Irregularities in the handling of bankrupt assets controlled by Judge English and his then referee in bankruptcy, Charles B. Thomas, are alleged in three of the sworn statements, and Frank's charges that there existed a "bankruptcy ring," or clique, by means of whose operations the funds of bankrupts found their way into the pockets of relatives and friends of the Judge and referee.

Charge Made by Murray.

Murray states that, as trustee of an estate, he arranged with the bank in which the funds were deposited for the payment of interest. No interest ever has been received by the creditors, he declared, and he charges that he has reason to believe it is being paid to somebody else.

Karch alleges, in addition to the

Eclipse a 'Sight of Glory' To Those Standing a Mile High, on Top of Airship

Yellows, Purples and Grays Flashed on Ocean, Horizon and Clouds Below; Scientists Worked Battery of Cameras.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24. — Men reached toward the sun. A mile above the gray surface of the Atlantic, 18 miles out to sea from Montauk Point, the man-made dirigible Los Angeles was suspended like a bubble in the sky while the earth and the moon raced in their orbits to pass on the path of the sun.

It was man's gesture of awakening power, puny in comparison to an eclipse, but vast in comparison to the flight of the reindeer men, faces averted from the spectacle they feared because they did not understand, in the ages before there was history.

There were 42 men on the dirigible. They were naval officers in the control car watching the motors, naval scientists in the Pullman-like compartments staring at the receding sun with instruments, charts and specially prepared time pieces; naval photographers on the tiny platform on top of the gas bag itself, snapping cameras toward the sky, like dogs baying at the moon. And in one of the red-curtained cabins below, a young man, shivering with cold, dictating an account of the flight to a wireless telegrapher who was tossing it in the air to the Naval Air Station in Lakehurst, thence to be relayed by wire to cities throughout the country.

Airship One Mile Up

The Los Angeles traversed only one of the 240,000 miles between the earth and the moon. The results of this little thrust into the sky were largely unknown tonight, pending the development of the plates taken by the photographers.

The Los Angeles was returned to its hangar at the Naval Air Station in Lakehurst, N. J., without a mishap, at 5:22 in the afternoon, 12 hours and 22 minutes after it left. The record of observance of the eclipse from the dirigible was told in the story by Watson Davis, Assistant Editor of Science Service, dictated to the telegrapher while the dirigible was suspended under the shadow of the moon.

It follows:

"On Board the Los Angeles, Jan. 24.—Lifted a mile closer to the sun by the naval dirigible Los Angeles, the United States Naval Observatory astronomers had a perfect view of the total solar eclipse during the 2 minutes 46.10 seconds of totality. Not a cloud marred the magnificent spectacle. The coronal fringe of light purple and gray, and the ghostly radiance of the eclipsed sun turned the ocean, horizon, and the clouds below into a vivid picture in yellow, purples and grays.

"While observers drew pictures of the corona for science, a battery of four astronomical cameras obtained 18 photographs, and two motion picture cameras and a spectrograph were in operation. The latter instrument recorded the spectgrum line of helium gas which holds the Los Angeles aloft. Hydrogen, which helium superceded, was also recorded.

"Up until two minutes before totality high clouds threatened to spoil the scientific observations, but just before the critical moment a clear space of blue sky furnished a background for the eclipse.

"Fleeting shadows a few seconds before and after the totality were seen, and it may be that when the plates are developed it will be discovered that the shadow bands were photographed for the first time in the history of astronomy.

"The astronomers, under the direction of Capt. Edwin T. Pollock, Superintendent of the United States Naval Observatory, are jubilant at the results.

"A Celestial Glory."

After the Los Angeles had been returned to its hangar, Capt. Pollock added this:

"When you can describe a celestial glory, then you will have described the beauty of this eclipse. I believe we have accomplished what we set out to do, but of course you can never know for certain until the plates have been developed and studied."

Dr. C. C. Keiss, assistant physicist of the bureau of standards at Washington who was in charge of the spectroscope, said he had determined hydrogen and helium gas rings in the sun.

The returning party said they felt the cold severely.

Capt. S. B. Littell of the Naval Observatory said the corona had thrown off rays of about 1,700,000 miles, or twice the diameter of the sun.

Small Still Also Taken in Raid, But No Complaint Is Issued.

By the Associated Press.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Jan. 24.—Deputy Sheriffs early today raided the residence of Rev. M. F. Sheehan, rector of St. Patrick's Catholic Church, and seized 15 gallons of wine and a small still.

Up to late today no complaint had been issued against Father Sheehan, who said he held a State permit for wine and that the still was used solely for distilling water. No whisky was found by the officers.

WOMAN WHO SHOT HUSBAND ACCEPTED BY HIS PARENTS

Slain Man's Father Testified at Inquest in Wife's Behalf—Woman Is Acquitted.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 24.—Acquitted on a plea of self defense of murdering her husband, William D. Richmond, at Laramie, Wyo., Mrs. Richmond will be accepted as a daughter in the home of Richmond's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Richmond, here, the elder Richmond said today.

Mrs. Richmond is said to have admitted that she shot her husband a week ago when he attempted to force her to cash a check for their savings and then threatened her. She said he was intoxicated. The husband died Sunday afternoon. The father testified before a Coroner's jury in the wife's behalf. The father returned to Kansas City yesterday with his son's body.

RED BUD (ILL.) MARSHAL IS SLAIN BY MEN IN AUTO

Adolph Huck, City Marshal of Red Bud, Ill., about 40 miles from St. Louis, was killed yesterday morning when he attempted to learn the identity and business of the occupants of an automobile.

Huck was called from his home at 1 a. m. yesterday by a neighbor who reported that the occupants of a car which had just driven into town were acting suspiciously. The Marshal went to investigate. That was the last seen of him alive. Two hours later his body was found in the street with his skull crushed by the blow of a heavy instrument. No clew to the identity of the slayers has been found.

WHEELER CHARGES AND STONE O K LINKED IN SENATE

Vigorous Offensive Launched Against Effort to Indict Montana Senator in Capital.

CONFERENCE HELD AT WHITE HOUSE

Discussion of Confirmation of Supreme Court Appointee in Open Session Halted by Ruling.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—A vigorous offensive against the pending effort of the Department of Justice to procure the indictment of Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Dem.) of Montana, at the hands of a District of Columbia grand jury was launched at a secret session of the Senate this afternoon. The same session, which lasted for more than an hour, saw a new flare-up of the previously voiced criticism of Attorney-General Stone for the part he played as counsel for the executors of the J. P. Morgan estate in a suit against James A. Ownbey, a Colorado mining man.

Senators Overman of North Carolina, and Heflin of Alabama, both Democrats, expressed special interest in the Ownbey case, while the Wheeler affair engaged the attention of Senator Walsh (Dem.) of Montana, who is counsel for Wheeler, and Senators Caraway (Dem.) of Arkansas, Swanson (Dem.) of Virginia, Borah (Rep.) of Idaho, and Norris (Rep.) of Nebraska.

Pleading that to disclose the secret proceedings would bring them into "contempt" of the Senate, most of the Senators who were present declined later to throw any light on the discussion. It was learned, however, that the Senators who spoke on the Wheeler case regarded it as "highly unfortunate" that this affair should have collided with the current senatorial discussion of the fitness of Attorney-General Stone for the Supreme bench.

Conference at White House.

After the Senate discussion, Senator Curtis of Kansas, Republican leader, and Senator Watson of Indiana; Butler of Massachusetts; Sterling of South Dakota, and Reed of Pennsylvania, called at the White House to acquaint President Coolidge with the situation. All but Senator Butler had left this conference, when Stone was summoned. The Attorney-General, who was closeted with the President and Butler about a half hour, would make no comment as he left the White House.

There was general agreement among the speakers in the Senate, it was said, that the Wheeler case and the proposed elevation of Stone to an associate Justiceship, which is now before the Senate for confirmation, should be treated as entirely separate questions, to be settled each on its own merits. It was manifest, however, from the trend of cloakroom comment, that, in the minds of some Senators, the course which is being pursued by the Attorney-General has a direct bearing on the question of his confirmation.

Senator Walsh of Montana has declared that the action of the Department in seeking an indictment of Wheeler in the District of Columbia when it already has a case ready for trial against him in Montana smacks of persecution, and it is understood that Senator Borah, who was chairman of the committee that exonerated Wheeler of the original charge, concurs heartily in this view.

Borah and Walsh, as well as Norris, Overman and Caraway, are members of the Judiciary Committee, and it is this committee to which the Senate looks for guidance in the matter of the Stone confirmation. It is significant that the nomination of Stone, after having been reported out by the committee, was passed over in today's executive session of the Senate, the same fate which it suffered at two previous executive sessions.

Practically Same Charges.

It was brought out in today's session that the Department of Justice relies on a conspiracy

HEAD OF CLOSED BANK HELD FOR $40,000 FRAUD

CASHIER KILLED HIMSELF LAST WEEK

Inquiry Made About Death in Colorado of Promoter Said to Have Borrowed $10,000.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 24.—Beth M. Meservey, Excelsior Springs banker, is under arrest.

He surrendered at 2:40 o'clock this afternoon on a warrant charging misapplication of funds, false entries and false reports to the Comptroller of Currency. The complain was signed by C. S. Walden, First Assistant United States District Attorney, and L. K. Roberts, Chief National Bank Examiner. He pleaded not guilty here and was released on $20,000 bond to await action of the April grand jury.

Merservey had waited this afternoon in Excelsior Springs for the Deputy United States Marshals in the office of L. B. Bates, Counsel for the closed First National Bank, of which Meservey was president.

A large crowd was at the bank, where it was expected the Deputy Marshals would appear with Meservey.

Talks on Predicament.

Meservey sat in Bate's office nervously discussing his predicament. He spoke of his falsifications and manipulations at the bank, but declared he had practiced them only with the hope of saving the bank, which was in a bad way from overdrafts and "frozen" paper. "I spent yesterday and last night going about Excelsior Springs trying to get help from many persons who might reorganize the bank," he said. "I failed in this."

"I feel that the only persons I have wronged were my wife and daughter," Meservey said. "As to others, I did everything I could to save the bank—and failed. Technically I am guilty and I am ready to take my medicine. I did not profit by any of my misdeeds. I have put my own money into the bank. So did C. E. Brasher, the cashier. But that was not enough to stem the tide of overdrafts."

Planned to Make Up Shortage.

Brasher, he said, had kept a book of the transactions of which the Government now charges are illegal. He and Brasher intended to wipe out all of the defalcations and restore the books to order. Brasher killed himself several days ago.

The complaint alleges the bank records show irregularity in the entry of a $9000 deposit by William McKee in 1922. Other counts were that Meservey falsified reports of liabilities. In April, 1924, the complaint charges, the bank reported liabilities of $311,169.97; Oct. 13, 1924, $314,095.93, and Jan 5, 1925, liabilities of $322,795.31.

The District Attorney's office is in possession of facts indicating the irregularities, Roberts said. The amount of fraudulent transactions at this time exceed $40,000.

After asking for information concerning Henry Hyder, an oil promoter, who was killed in an automobile accident in Colorado, Jan. 8, and buried here, Lufkin, Tex., authorities tonight announced they were convinced the man buried was Hyder, for whom they held a warrant in connection with a loan from a bank in Lufkin which later closed.

Hyder, it was shown, borrowed $10,000 from the First National Bank in Excelsior Springs, which is listed as unpaid. According to friends of Meservey, however, the bank collected all of this loan except a small amount.

IOWA REPUBLICANS ASK SENATE TO VACATE BROOKHART'S SEAT

By the Associated Press.

DES MOINES, Ia., Jan. 24.

THE Republican party of Iowa today officially repudiated United States Senator Smith W. Brookhart and moved to have the seat to which he was elected as a Republican candidate, last November, declared vacant on grounds of alleged fraud and deceit.

A resolution adopted by the Central Committee today directed Chairman Burnquist to prepare a bill of complaint for issuance forthwith to the Senate charging that Brookhart, prior to the November election, posed as a Republican until it was too late for the committee to bring out another candidate, then aligned himself with the La Follette movement, denounced the Republican national ticket and divorced himself from the Republican party, thereby deceiving the electors of Iowa.

THIRD MAN KILLED, 6 OTHERS WOUNDED IN EXCHANGE OF SHOTS

Liquor Raider and Chief Deputy Sheriff, His Foe, Killed in Hotel Lobby After Shot on Street Causes Clash—Police Set Up Blockade.

HERRIN, Ill., Jan. 24.—S. Glenn Young, Ku Klux Klan liquor raider, his first assistant, George Forbes, and their opponent, Deputy Sheriff Ora Thomas of Williamson County, tonight were killed in a hotel lobby fight as a climax of many stormy months of contention in Williamson County. A fourth man, Homer Warren, was critically wounded.

Several other persons were shot during the melee and five are reported to be in hospitals while others suffered slight wounds. The affray began in front of the European Hotel and reports differ widely as to just how it started. The action itself was so fast and furious that the spectators, most of whom fled from the bullets, were unable to agree as to which man fell first or what else took place.

It was reported that Young had walked the streets during the day as the result of a report that his enemies were looking for him and that both Young's supporters and partisans of the other side were keyed to a high pitch as night came on.

About 10 o'clock Young and Thomas met in front of the hotel. Some one fired a shot, apparently from the window of a building. Thomas ran into the hotel, according to some witnesses, and sought refuge behind a cigar counter.

Young and his followers drew their revolvers and advanced. When the leaders of the attacking force reached the cigar stand, the shooting became general.

Firing his two revolvers in double action, Thomas sank to the floor. Young and Forbes dropped also. Warren staggered against the cigar counter and collapsed.

A version of the affair which has gained general credence here is that Thomas himself fired the shots which killed Young and Forbes, before one of Young's supporters shot Thomas. Who shot Thomas, and who of Thomas' following shot Warren, are questions which have not been answered.

Thomas died enroute to the hospital, and his body was taken to an undertaking establishment, as were the bodies of Young and Forbes.

About sixty shots in all were fired, witnesses said.

Thomas came to Herrin this morning from Marion to attend the sessions of the Herrin city court. A night session of the court caused him to remain here tonight.

Police Establish Blockade.

The hotel is at Park and Monroe avenues, in the business center. Movie theaters were discharging their early-show crowds on the sidewalks, when the shots first scattered the throng, then caused a rush to the hotel corner.

Everyone seemed to know that the shots marked a fresh outbreak of the warfare, centering about Young, the stormy petrel of the county and the Ku Klux Klan's liquor-raiding activities, which caused fatalities and the sending of state troops here as recently as last August.

Policemen soon cleared the sidewalks about the hotel, and established a blockade of the Jenkins undertaking establishment, where Young's body was taken.

In Herrin for Month.

Young had been in Herrin for about a month past, and was said to be writing a book which would be a story of his life, and a history of the warfare on liquor law violators in Williamson County. His wife, blind from a shot inflicted by assassins who attempted to kill him on the highway near Nashville last spring, was with him at the Ly-Mar Hotel. Young was said to be interested in a local restaurant.

Several times, in his recent stay in Herrin, Young acted as the guiding spirit in liquor raids, made not in the city of Herrin, but at points in the county, usually eight or 10 miles from town. These raids were mostly seizures of stills, and do not seem to have caused any great excitement. The official head of the raids was Constable Frank Roberts, who would take Young and several others with him as deputies.

In walking about town at night Young would be accompanied by several men, who were generally recognized as bodyguards. He was seen occasionally handling an automatic pistol, which became known as "Young's machine gun."

Victim Was Central Figure in Williamson County Civil Strife

For almost two years Young was the central figure in the civil strife of Williamson County. The name of the "Two-Gun" Ku Klux Klan liquor raider has been coupled in one way or another with every one of the pistol fights in that county, and frequently plots against his life have been reported.

On May 23, last, Young and his wife were fired on by assailants in another automobile, near Okawville, Ill., as they drove toward East St. Louis. Young's right leg was smashed below the knee by a bullet and 24 buckshot struck Mrs. Young in the head, making her blind. The next day there was a fight at Herrin in which one man was slain.

Young at one time was a Federal prohibition agent but he was not spectacular until in the fall of 1923 when he became a hired klan liquor raider in Williamson County. Klansmen credited him with having "cleaned up" the county of bootleggers and other lawbreakers, but his activities caused open warfare between the klan and anti-klan factions of the Herrin vicinity, and resulted in his indictment on 35 charges by a Williamson County grand jury that investigated his activities.

The first open break between the factions occurred on Feb. 8 last when Constable Caesar Cagle, a klan sympathizer, was killed. The fight occurred when Sheriff Galligan of Williamson County appeared at a meeting of the Flaming Circle, an anti-klan organization, at Herrin, to prevent a riot. One of Galligan's deputies was badly wounded.

Young, as the leader of the klan, proclaimed the klan would take control of the law in Herrin and ordered the arrest of several men. Militia was rushed to the town and Carl and Earl Shelton, brothers, were arrested on a charge of killing Cagle. Charges and counter charges followed with the indictments of Young for alleged high-handed proceedings at Herrin. Finally he departed and began a clean-up campaign in East St. Louis.

Matters in Herrin apparently were quiet when, on May 23, Young and his wife were shot. Both were wounded dangerously by a fusillade of shots from an automobile. Young said he knew who shot him.

Coal Miner Slain.

News of this attack enraged the Herrin klansmen. Next day all roads into the town were guarded and an automobile was raked from

SENTER ENDS HIS STORY IN BREACH OF PROMISE CASE

Mrs. Ella Maie Campbell to Take Stand Again in Rebuttal to Wealthy Bachelor's Testimony.

ARGUMENTS OF LAWYERS TO FOLLOW

Both Parties to $200,000 Suit Likely to Be Pictured as Flirts—Jury May Get Case Tomorrow.

Charles Parsons Senter, wealthy bachelor who will celebrate his fifty-fifth birthday on Valentine day, yesterday completed his testimony in the trial of the $200,000 breach of promise suit against him by Mrs. Ella Maie Campbell.

Today is his day of rest, after five days on the witness stand. Tomorrow he will return to Circuit Judge Hamilton's court. There will be rebuttal testimony by Mrs. Campbell, instructions by the Court and arguments by counsel. The case probably will go to the jury late tomorrow.

Arguments by counsel are expected to be somewhat personal, touching as they will on the 14 years' association of Senter and Mrs. Campbell. Beyond doubt, both parties to the suit will be pictured as flirts, as each claims the other's inviting eyes were responsible for their informal introduction at Broadway and Olive street in 1909.

Church Angles to Case.

Senter's romantic propensities will be contrasted with his religious principles. His second meeting with Mrs. Campbell, as will be recalled, occurred on an eastbound Olive street car one Sunday morning in September, 1909, as he was en route to the Third Baptist Church, of which he was custodian, and is now a trustee, and Mrs. Campbell was bound for the Centenary Methodist Church, where she taught a Sunday school class of young men.

At both meetings, Senter invited Mrs. Campbell to accompany him on buggy rides. She accepted the second invitation and that Sunday afternoon and evening was spent in his horse-drawn runabout. He has testified their intimacy began on that day and thereafter she called him "Daddy."

Their fourth meeting included a drive along Skinker road. According to Mrs. Campbell, Senter then and there proposed marriage to her. She testified:

"He told me how badly he needed me, and how much I needed him. He asked me to be his wife and I told him I would."

Her Testimony Disputed.

Asked what terms of endearment, if any, Senter had used, Mrs. Campbell hesitated and replied softly: "He called me 'dear.'"

"Did he kiss you?"

"He did."

The anniversary of this romantic drive was observed by them in the years that followed, she testified. She asserted Senter frequently renewed his proposal, but never set a definite date for the ceremony, and finally in 1923 announced he intended to remain a bachelor forever, so far as she was concerned.

The testimony of Senter and Mrs. Campbell differed on vital points throughout the trial. He denied ever asking her to marry him or even accepting her proposals of marriage. He denied she was any more to him than an acquaintance and declared he spent 10 times as much time with others as with her. This was in answer to her assertion that she devoted her social life exclusively to him, because he asked her not to receive other callers. He also denied ever employing the word "love" in conversation with her and affirmed he considered "love" sacred. Her testimony on this had been:

"He was inclined to be affectionate in his manner. He called me 'dear' and 'darling' and told me how much delight and happiness I gave him. He put his arms about me and kissed me."

It was not denied that they had exchanged gifts on birthdays and Christmases, and that Senter at other times had paid certain bills for her and had helped in obtaining for her employment as a stenographer. Nor was it denied that they had been together on many buggy and automobile rides from 1909 to 1923, during which they frequently stopped for dinner, or to pick wild flowers.

Their correspondence, or as much of it as was produced in court, was one-sided. Mrs. Campbell produced only one of his letters, explaining she had destroyed the others. Senter produced 220 letters, postcards and telegrams. A half dozen of the letters were carbon copies of ones he sent her, and the others were her original letters, which he had carefully and cautiously filed away.

Senter testified, in effect, that he ceased to demand intimacy of her after 1910, but that she continued to "hound" him and made a "nightmare" of his life. His feelings toward her, throughout the 14 years, were of "respect and sympathy," he said, adding that his greatest pleasure in life was in helping others.

Threatened to Kill Him.

Mrs. Campbell admitted she may have threatened to kill herself and him, as alleged by him, but said she did not mean to do so. Asked if she apologized, she was not certain, but said she usually did when she had done anything wrong.

"Of course," she continued, sarcastically, "he never did anything wrong. That's what he told me. He said he had never done anything to be sorry for. I always told him to be good, and he used to say that if I did not believe him, there was no incentive for him to be good and he would just as soon get out and do anything."

The defense testimony was contributed almost entirely by Senter. Witnesses for the plaintiff, in addition to herself, were her sisters, Mrs. Marie Gross; three women residents, at whose homes in the West End Mrs. Campbell had boarded at various times, and other persons who had seen her in Senter's company.

Mrs. Gross testified she was called "sister" and her mother, now dead, was called "mother" by Senter. Senter denied this and said he referred to them merely as "Mrs. Campbell's sister" and "Mrs. Campbell's mother."

"Scene" at Home Described.

Most of Senter's testimony yesterday revolved around a scene at his residence, 1 Beverly place, on May 30, 1923, when, Mrs. Campbell says, he first announced he would not marry her. He said he was seated in the living room talking with two girls, 8 to 10 years old and children of neighbors, when he was summoned to the front door by Mrs. Campbell.

He said he advised her he had other arrangements and would not be able to take her for a ride and asked why she had come to his house against his expressed wishes. They had talked for 15 to 20 minutes, he trying to "appease" her, when his negro butler advised him he had a telephone call.

Mrs. Campbell, according to Senter, was "very much agitated and had a set, determined look," and when she tried to follow him into the house, a scuffle ensued, and she screamed at the top of her voice. Senter said she had her hands around his neck, choking him. He raised his hands to release her grasp on his throat and when their hands met, she "kind of stumbled, crumpled and fell down backward." He denied hitting or tripping her.

Timely Rift in Sky's Haze Gives St. Louisans Good View of Shadowed Sun

Thousands Who Watched From Streets and Building Tops Rewarded With Clear View of 86 Per Cent Eclipse.

A case of waiting "till the clouds roll by" was encountered in a literal sense by the thousands of St. Louisans who turned their eyes eastward early yesterday morning, hoping to witness the spectacle of an 86 per cent eclipse of the sun.

If they waited patiently enough they saw it, for during the seven minutes when the moon's shadow occupied its greatest area, the clouds did "roll by" sufficiently to reveal, in distinct outline, the slender rim of the sun's disc that remained to shine.

Up to that time it had been rather an aggravating game of hide and seek, with no very definite prospect of a successful exhibition. Now you saw it and, now you didn't. Almost from the very time of the sun's first appearance, and with about a third of its surface already missing, it was seized upon periodically by rifts of clouds and hidden spasmodically behind the curtain. But between 7:50 and 7:57, it evaded even the smoke of East St. Louis. Observers who gazed upward from the streets or climbed roof ladders to the tops of downtown office buildings were rewarded for their trouble.

Local Interest Wide.

Long before 7:11 o'clock, the time for the beginning of the spectacle, there was ample evidence of the popular interest which advance reports of the forthcoming phenomenon had created. Early morning workers were discussing it on the street cars. Newsboys on the corners were crying "All about the eclipse," and, when a Post-Dispatch reporter and photographer clambered out on the roof of the 21-story Railway Exchange Building shortly after 7, many other spectators, equipped with smoked glasses and cameras, were to be seen there and on the tops of nearby structures. In St. Louis County, where another Post-Dispatch reporter observed the sunrise from Manchester road, the indications of interest were similar. There, workers driving to downtown offices and farmers on the way to market stoped to gaze in the direction of the sunrise, for it happened that scientists and the newspapers had not been the only ones to advertise the event. Nature, yesterday, served as her own press agent and introduced the spectacle with a gorgeous prelude.

Shortly after 6 o'clock, when dawn began to break, there were bars of dull red across the east which, as the succeeding minutes passed, took on a gaudiness that seemed to set the entire Eastern and Southern sky aflame. It resembled the reflection of a great fire at night or the radiant display of the Aurora Borealis. A little later, wave-like clouds of red, yellow and purple advanced overhead and turned to gray as the light became brighter.

Like Distended Crescent Moon.

It was about 7:14 when the first blotch of red that was to shape itself into the sun forced an opening through the belt of smoke that hung low over the Eastern horizon. To those who viewed the eclipse from the county, the picture was largely the same. First it looked like a fiery orange cone because of the arc that already had been "bitten" from it by the moon. Then other fragments broke through the murky veil and gradually a distinct outline of the orb and the encroaching shadow came into view. Higher it came with the appearance of a distended crescent moon until it seemed that Luna had ensnared Sol, that Cynthia had made a satellite of Apollo.

The clouds, however, refused to let the scene survive. They obscured it more or less until about 7:48, before stepping aside to permit a clear view of the rim. By this time the shadow, which at first was encroaching on the south side, had shifted around to the north and the 14 per cent of sun was on the south.

Although this was the stage when the eclipse was nearest totality, the sunshine—in the downtown district, at least—seemed brighter and the daylight greater than at any other time during the celestial performance. For seven minutes or so the 14 per cent of sun was bright enough to cast a shadow of the watchers.

Haze in Forest Park.

To observers on Art Hill in Forest Park, however, the stage of greatest eclipse was accompanied by an unwonted haziness, something like that of sunshine on a stormy day. Shortly afterward the smoke and clouds combined to produce a gloom that enveloped the park in murkiness and, downtown, made the tops of structures three blocks away invisible from the roof of the Railway Exchange Building.

From that time on the spectacle amounted only to a few occasional glimpses. By 9:01 the sun had passed from behind the moon's shadow and the show was over. On the tops of several downtown structures crews of workmen who had put down their tools for the occasion went back to their tasks, and faces disappeared from office windows.

ST. LOUIS PAYS 57 PCT. OF STATE INCOME TAX

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 24.—With Gov. Baker and other Republican administration chiefs scanning the field of taxable properties to discover some new source of taxation, to meet an expected scarcity of State revenue during the next two years, the State Treasurer's report on collection of the State income tax, completed today, offers a field for experiment in more intensive tax collection and detection of tax evasions.

The report shows a total of $3,344,711.81 in State income tax was collected in 1924, covering returns for income in 1923. Of this amount, St. Louis paid $1,922,427.76, or 57.4 per cent of the entire income tax collections. In 1923, the State income tax totaled $2,867,727.48, of which St. Louis paid $1,550,824.54.

St. Louis and Jackson County, including Kansas City, in 1924 paid a total of $2,660,865.54, or 79.5 per cent of the tax. St. Louis County paid $182,947.76, and Buchanan County, including St. Joseph, paid $116,999.61.

Aside from the $3,010,822.25 paid by the City of St. Louis, Jackson, St. Louis and Buchanan Counties, only $333,889.62 was paid by the other 111 counties.

Nineteen counties paid in less than $300 in income tax and five of them paid less than $100.

Dallas County, with a population of about 15,000, reported no income tax payments. Dade County, with a population of 14,173, reported only $11.82. Other counties with extremely small collections were: Camden, $64.76; Hickory, $73.62; Ozark, $86.27; Reynolds, $117.26; Taney, $122.67; Carter, $128.31; Stone, $179.76.

ECLIPSE FULFILLS ALL PROMISES AS UNMATCHED SIGHT

Millions of New Yorkers and Others in Path of Total Obscuration Enthralled by Spectacle.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—For the first time in upward of three centuries, astronomers have never taken time to compute the exact date—the moon today passed between us and the sun directly over this latitude and longitude, and its moving shadow traced a thick path of darkness which men saw as a total eclipse of the sun.

The lesser but longer phase of partial eclipse, as scheduled by the astronomers, began here at 7:59 a. m. and ended at 10:29, while the total eclipse lasting 2.0 seconds, was in midtotality at 9:11.

For the astronomers, today's atmospheric conditions were ideal, and already are known to have permitted one series of observations on the corona which may portend striking developments according to Dr. Samuel A. Mitchell, Director of the Leander McCormick Observatory and chairman of the Committee on Eclipses of the American Astronomical Society. While observing the eclipse as a guest at Wesleyan today, he said, he was surprised by the aspect of the corona, which he found of extraordinary size for this period in the sun spot cycle, absolutely colorless, and showing two long streamers not to be expected at this time.

Yale Professor Disagrees.

Photographs of the corona show the characteristics emphasized by Dr. Mitchell. But, on the other hand, Dr. Ernest W. Brown, who had charge of all the observing work at Yale, said he personally had failed to notice anything extraordinary. The appearance of the corona, he added, was what he had expected it to be at this time.

Prof. Raymond S. Dugan and John Quincy Stuart of the Astronomical Department at Princeton, tonight concurred in Dr. Brown's opinion. The streamers Dr. Mitchell observed, they thought, were to be expected at this time, and the unusual length of one of them was due to the extraordinary clearness of the air, which made the corona exceptionally brilliant this morning.

Because the eclipse path passed over a large sector of the most densely populated area in the United States it undoubtedly was watched by more spectators than any previous spectacle of the kind, or indeed, any spectacle whatever. Thirty-eight large cities and adjacent counties lying in the belt of totality, or close enough to have 90 per cent obscuration, have an aggregate population of about 25,000,000. To these must be added the people of smaller communities and rural sections. And since the extreme boundaries of the area in which partial eclipse was visible, rested off the mouth of the Amazon, and within the Polar regions, the number of curious watchers who took at least one look at the darkened sun today will run into many more millions.

Totality was visible only north of 110th street, and, as a result, the streets of Harlem and the Bronx were crowded with visitors from other parts of the city.

Years of Preparation.

Throughout America—throughout the world—there was the same vivid interest that characterized the attitude of New York. It will take many months to collate and study the scientific gain that the "observation de luxe" of the phenomena afforded. There had been years of careful preparation for the event, and no opportunity of gaining scientific knowledge was overlooked.

The day dawned cold and cloudless. Promptly at 8 o'clock, as the astronomers had promised, the black edge of the moon took a nibble at the upper right hand arc of the sun's disk. For an hour it ate further and further in till only a crescent wisp, thin as the faintest of new moons, remained at the lower left. Meanwhile the shadow bands had started their elusive dance on snow and house walls and kept it up till a quick onrush of gloom scattered them.

Totality came with a flashing suddenness that startled every watcher. One instant there had been a remnant of familiar, prosaic sunlight. The next, the moon was a black shape, hung high and alone in the heavens, while fairy colors played around it. Nearest was the rosy ring and halo of the chromosphere, which hugged the moon and yet left it remote. Then came the pearly spread of the corona, most marked to the right and left, and surprisingly distinct and extensive. At the bottom of the hidden sun, blazed a gigantic red ball which most folk took for a solar prominence, and which was perhaps a retinal after-image, left by the fiery outburst of "second contact."

Horizon Scene Enthralls.

All the promised things were there, but different watchers seem to have seen them differently. One reporter who was flying 9000 feet up in a plane, found the rosy horizon so enthralling it eclipsed the eclipse for him. He said afterwards that, to stare at its elfin glow was like "seeing the end of the world come, or the dawn of a new creation."

Another reporter sat with a group of blind persons who listened in open-mouthed wonder to the voice of Maj. William N. Hensley Jr., speaking by radio broadcast from an airplane a mile in the air. They were as thrilled by the "spectacle" as any other watchers.

COOLIDGE URGES U. S. ENTRY INTO THE WORLD COURT

President in White House Address, Says It Should Be America's Next Peace Move.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The administration's stand in favor of American participation in the world court was reaffirmed today by President Coolidge in an address at the White House to delegates attending the national conference on the causes and cure of war.

This step, the President characterized as the next move that should be taken by the United States toward outlawing war. He suggested also that the nation and the world should "turn the light of more information and better understanding upon the problems of diplomacy."

Meantime, the President declared, the United States should in the interest of peace continue its readiness to associate itself with whatever measure would tend to maintain security, but should avoid the danger of "a super-government."

Lesson of Last War.

"If the lesson of this last and greatest war shall be lost, then, indeed will this experience have been almost in vain," said Mr. Coolidge. "It is for the generation which saw and survived to devise measures of prevention. If we fail in this, we shall deserve all the disaster which will surely be visited upon us because of our failure.

"I believe that, just as the armament conference was a timely and convincing co-operation on the political side, so the Dawes plan was a similarly timely and effective effort for rehabilitation on the economic side.

"I believe that the next step which we may well take is by way of participation in the permanent court of international justice. I believe that with our adherence to that tribunal, for which I earnestly hope, it will become one medium in which may gradually be precipitated and crystallized a body of international law and procedure which, by avoiding the dangers that would attend the establishment of a super-government, will ultimately commend the respect and approbation of the world's public opinion and the co-operation of the nations."

Faith in Public Opinion.

"I am convinced that if our civilization is worthy of its name, then physical force is not the only authority which may enforce an anti-war policy. I feel strongly that public opinion, based on proper information working through agencies that the comman man may see and understand, may be made the ultimate authority among the nations."

Closing their seven-day meeting here, the delegates to the conference addressed by President Coolidge adopted a list of "cures" which included the outlawry of war, adherence of the United States to the World Court and a modified proposal regarding the League of Nations and the Geneva protocol. Twenty-nine causes of war were catalogued. Other proposals adopted would pledge the United States to participate in further disarmament conferences and establish an under-secretary for peace in the State Department. Cures for war were divided by the conference into three groups—political, economic and social education—and a plan was indorsed for the nine national women's organizations composing the conference to take back to their own groups for direct application.

JUDGE HALL FILES AS CANDIDATE FOR THE MAYORALTY

Circuit Jurist Declines to Stay Out of Race as Republican Leaders Had Hoped He Might.

Circuit Judge Robert W. Hall filed his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Mayor with the Board of Election Commissioners yesterday and definitely defeated the attempt of Republican leaders to restrict the race for the nomination to Victor J. Miller, former president of the Police Board, and one other candidate on whom all organization forces could center.

Judge Hall's announcement of his candidacy was characterized by Louis J. Becker, chairman of the Republican City Committee, some time ago as an action that "will only muddy the water."

Situation Still Muddled.

Less than five weeks remain in which candidates may file, and the primary, March 3, is little more than six weeks away. The situation is muddled at this time, with numerous candidates desirous of entering the race, and the business and political forces anxious to unite on one man.

Friends of Louis P. Aloe, former president of the Board of Aldermen, expect that he will reply within the next few days to the recent petition of 250 persons pledging support if he runs. The list included bankers, business and professional men and a sprinkling of politicians. However, Aloe could muster a definite showing of political strength if he agreed to run.

The various factions and elements are still playing for position and Louis Nolte, City Comptroller, is strongly considered as a compromise candidate. He has definitely stated that he will consider the race if all other candidates except Miller will withdraw.

Attitude of Mayor Kiel.

Meanwhile Mayor Kiel, with his eye about March 2, the last filing day, is in New York, hoping that he finds a crowded field when he returns. His friends say that he certainly will seek the nomination if no definite agreement on a candidate he will support is made before his return.

Judge Hall, after filing yesterday, said he had no platform to outline at this time, but would meet issues as they rose. He said he regarded the bond issue in the light of a will, as a bequest to the city by its citizens, and would construe its provisions in the light of the intention the people had when they voted for it.

charge for its new case against Wheeler. The transaction at the bottom of the charge is closely related to that which led to the indictment of Wheeler a year ago at Great Falls, Mont., and virtually the same set of witnesses who appeared before the Federal grand jury on that occasion will be summoned here.

Wheeler was indicted on a charge of having illegally practiced before the Interior Department, as counsel for Gordon Campbell, an oil operator, after his election to the Senate. The new charge, according to informating reaching the Senators, is that Wheeler "conspired" with Campbell and Edwin S. Booth, former solicitor of the Interior Department to defraud the Government.

The charge apparently rests in part upon a letter from Campbell to Booth, which was read into the record of the Borah hearings. Campbell wrote to Booth a few days after Booth had severed his connection with the department to become a special assistant to the Attorney-General, offering to give him and another official 40 acres of valuable oil land if he (Campbell) could "get" his "hooks" on a certain half section.

If the Department of Justice has any evidence connecting Wheeler with this alleged agreement, beyond the fact that Wheeler was Campbell's attorney in other matters, it does not appear in the record of the Borah investigation.

Held "Morally Indefensible."

The decision of the Department of Justice to go after Wheeler in the District of Columbia rather than his home State was the subject of caustic criticism in today's closed session. The Department, it was conceded, has the technical right to bring a conspiracy charge in any jurisdiction where the conspiracy or any part of it operated. That the Attorney-General should have invoked this technical right in order to bring Wheeler to trial "in the shadow of the White House" was held by some critics to be morally indefensible.

The closed session of the Senate followed an attempt by Senator Heflin to speak on the Ownbey case in its relation to the Attorney-General. Heflin said he wanted to correct a statement in the New York World that he was opposing Stone's confirmation because the Attorney-General had been J. P. Morgan's lawyer. He had hardly got started before objection was made on the Republican side that the matter ought to be discussed in private. After a wrangle, Senator Overman moved that the Senate go into closed session for the purpose of determining whether or not it should consider the Stone appointment in the open. The publicity advocates suported the Overman motion, which was carried by a vote of 37 to 36. Three Senators on the Republican side—Borah, Norris and Brookhart—ranged themselves with the Democrats in favor of the motion.

The session, however, did not get around to vote on the question of future publicity raised by Overman, but decided to let that matter go over to Monday.

TWO CHILDREN DIE AFTER BEING BURNED AT PLAY

The death of 4-year-old Robert Fay at 3 a. m. yesterday, at the City Hospital, followed a few hours after the death of another child. Both died from scalds and burns suffered while at play in their homes.

The boy, son of Jacob and Catherine Fay, 1864 Menard street, was playing in the kitchen Thursday evening and fell into a tub of steaming soapsuds.

Helen Baldridge, 17-months'-old daughter of Steve and Lillian Baldridge, 1455 Madison street, was playing in the kitchen Wednesday evening. Her father had placed a pan of hot water on the sink. The child reached up and overturned the pan. She died at the City Hospital at 7 p. m. Friday, from effects of the burns and pneumonia which followed.

SALOON KEEPER HACKED TO DEATH WITH A CLEAVER

George Sassoni, 35, Is Found Slain in Second Floor Room of Building on South Broadway.

George Sassoni, 35 years old, half-owner of the saloon and rooming house at 901 South Broadway, was hacked to death with a meat cleaver in a second-floor room of the house some time yesterday.

Policemen summoned to the place at 6 p. m. found the body sprawled in a corner of the room. The skull had been split in five places and the cleaver lay beside it. The man had been dead about five hours, physicians said, and the circumstances surrounding the finding of the body left the police without a clew as to the motive for the crime.

Sassoni's partner, Michael Giaminetti, 42 years old; his wife, Mary, and 14 roomers were taken to Central headquarters for questioning. At a late hour three of the prisoners had been questioned without much results, and indications were that the grilling would still be going on today.

Body Found at 5 P. M.

Giaminetti told detectives that he found his partner's body in the room about 5 p. m. Sassoni had left the saloon about 9 a. m. to go to the First National Bank to deposit some checks, he said, and did not apepar again. At 5 o'clock, Giaminetti said he wanted to discuss business with his partner and went in search of him, and found the body.

Lieut. Andrew Aylward, chief of the Homicide Bureau, said he examined the room, which, in his opinion had been cleaned after the murder. There were no stains on the bare wood floors except in the corner where Sassoni's body lay, but stains were found on some malt cans in a case under a table in the center of the room. On the body was a bank book showing a $295 deposit yesterday, about $5 in change, a watch and a diamond ring of moderate value.

Formerly a Coal Miner.

According to Giaminetti the saloon and rooming house were purchased last September. Formerly the partners were coal miners at Wilsonville, Ill., where for three years Sassoni, a bachelor, boarded at the Giaminetti home. They purchased the Broadway place for $2600 each man contributing half, Giaminetti said.

Detectives said that Giaminetti declared he knew of no reason why his partner might be murdered. He had never seen the cleaver before and had heard no disturbance, he said. Considerable difficulty was found in questioning the prisoners as Giaminetti and others insisted they knew little English. Giaminetti is an Italian. Sassoni was a Greek.

CHARGES FILED IN HOUSE AGAINST JUDGE EGLISH; INQUIRY SEEMS ASSURED

her charges, that Referee Thomas acted as a "fixer" in Judge English's court; that, upon the report of a fee of $3000, Thomas retained the suspension of a prison sentence by making false representations to the court. He charges Judge English must have known the facts of this transaction.

ENGLISH QUITS AS DIRECTOR OF CENTRALIA BANK

Institution Is a Depository for Bankruptcy Funds by Order of Illinois Federal Judge.

SAYS NO INTEREST ON SUCH DEPOSITS

Criticism Leads Jurist to Sell His Stock—Thomas' Son Is Assistant Cashier of Bank.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CENTRALIA, Ill., Jan. 24.—Federal Judge George W. English of East St. Louis, an investigation of whose official conduct is requested in a resolution introduced in Congress by Representative Hawes of St. Louis, has withdrawn from the board of directors of the Merchants' State Bank of Centralia, in which he has been a stockholder and director since 1918.

This bank is a depository of bankruptcy funds by order of Judge English, whose withdrawal as a director, officials of the bank stated today, was due to criticism that followed the Hawes resolution, which also calls for an investigation of the official acts of C. B. Thomas, who has resigned as Referee in Bankruptcy and also from directorships to which he has been appointed by Judge English.

As has been stated, one of the charges in the Hawes resolution is that Judge English and former Referee Thomas owned stock and had relatives employed in banks designated by the former as depositaries for bankruptcy funds. Melvin Thomas, a son of former Referee Thomas, is assistant cashier of the Merchants' Bank, having been employed in this capacity for about six years.

No Interest Paid on Funds.

At no time was interest paid to creditors on bankruptcy funds on deposit in this bank, officials said, more than $108,000 of such funds was on deposit here Jan. 16, last, when officials last checked the account.

It is known that interest is paid on similar accounts in the three banks designated by Federal Judge Davis of St. Louis as depositories of bankruptcy funds in the Eastern District of Missouri, and it has been stated by competent bankruptcy attorneys that the general practice throughout the country is for banks to pay interest on daily balances of bankruptcy funds.

A. G. Veach, vice president of the bank here, and a close friend of Judge English, who formerly resided here, stated he was called to East St. Louis early last week by Judge English, who informed him that he wished to sever all his connections with the bank because of the criticisms arising out of his bank associations.

Sells His Stock.

Veach said he purchased the 12 shares of stock Judge English owned in the bank, for $200 a share, the present price of the bank's stock. Sale of his stock automatically disqualified Judge English from remaining as a director of the bank, a position to which he was elected for the third consecutive time at the annual meeting of the stockholders Jan. 13, last. His place on the board has not been filled.

The annual financial statement of the bank, published since the election of directors, stated that all directods of the bank had been re-elected but did not publish the names of the directors, as is customary.

That he was largely responsible for Judge English's election to the board of directors in 1923 was the assertion of Veach.

"In 1922 we lost three of our board, two of them by death, and prevailed upon Judge English to accept a place as a director," Veach asserted.

"He really served all the time under protest. We are glad to have a deposit of bankruptcy funds, but do not feel that a payment of interest on this account is hardly justified. A bank in which bankruptcy funds are on deposit must be prepared to pay out these funds on a moment's notice."

Average Deposit $100,000.

Veach said the average deposit of bankruptcy funds in the Merchants' Bank has been slightly in excess of $100,000.

Veach said he employed Melvin Thomas while on a visit to Judge English about six years ago.

"We were in need of a young man at that time and Thomas had just returned from army service and I employed him," he said, adding that his work had been "very satisfactory."

CENTRALIA, Ill., Jan. 24.—Federal Judge George W. English of East St. Louis, an investigation of whose official conduct is requested in a resolution introduced in Congress by Representative Hawes of St. Louis, has withdrawn from the board of directors of the Merchants' State Bank of Centralia, in which he has been a stockholder and director since 1918.

The bank is a depository of bankruptcy funds by order of Judge English, whose withdrawal as director, officials of the bank stated today, was due to criticism that followed the Hawes resolution, which also calls for an investigation of the official acts of C. B. Thomas, who has resigned as Referee in Bankruptcy and also from partnerships to which he has been appointed by Judge English.

It has been stated, one of the charges in the Hawes resolution is that Judge English and former Referee Thomas owned stock and had relatives employed in banks designated by the former as depositories for bankruptcy funds. Melvin Thomas, a son of former Referee Thomas, is assistant cashier of the Merchants' Bank, having been employed in this capacity for about six years.

No Interest Paid on Funds.

At no time was interest paid to creditors on bankruptcy funds on deposit in this bank, officials said, more than $108,000 of such funds being on deposit here Jan. 16, last, when officials last checked the account.

It is known that interest is paid on similar accounts in the three banks designated by Federal Judge Davis of St. Louis as depositories of bankruptcy funds in the Eastern District of Missouri, and it has been stated by competent bankruptcy attorneys that the general practice throughout the country is for banks to pay interest on daily balances of bankruptcy funds.

A. G. Veach, vice president of the bank here, and a close friend of Judge English, who formerly resided here, stated he was called to East St. Louis early last week by Judge English, who informed him that he wished to sever all his connections with the bank because of the criticisms arising out of his bank associations.

Sells His Stock.

Veach said he purchased the 12 shares of stock Judge English owned in the bank, for $200 a share, the present price of the bank's stock. Sale of his stock automatically disqualified Judge English from remaining as a director in the bank, a position to which he was elected for the third consecutive time at the annual meeting of the stockholders Jan. 13, last. His place on the board has not been filled.

The annual financial statement of the bank, published since the election of directors, stated that all directors of the bank had been re-elected but did not publish the names of the directors, as is customary.

That he was largely responsible for Judge English's election to the board of directors in 1923 was the assertion of Veach.

"In 1922 we lost three of our board, two of them by death, and prevailed upon Judge English to accept a place as a director," Veach asserted.

"He really served all the time under protest. We are glad to have the deposit of bankruptcy funds, but we do not feel that a payment of interest on this account is hardly justified. A bank in which bankruptcy funds are on deposit must be prepared to pay out these funds on a moment's notice."

Average Deposit $100,000.

Veach said the average deposit of bankruptcy funds in the Merchants' Bank has been slightly in excess of $100,000.

Veach said he employed Melvin Thomas while on a visit to Judge English about six years ago.

"We were in need of a young man at that time and Thomas had just returned from army service and I employed him," he said, adding that his work had been "very satisfactory."

Other charges, that Referee Thomas acted as a "fixer" in Judge English's court; that, upon the receipt of a fee of $3000, Thomas obtained the suspension of a prison sentence by making false representations to the court. He charges that Judge English must have known the facts of this transaction.

Government Warns Against Payment of Excess Income Tax

Bureau Says Many Fail to Make 25 Per Cent Reduction.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The humble taxpayer was given an unaccustomed thrill today by the Internal Revenue Bureau. In a formal statement the bureau gave the country this advice: "Do not pay more income tax than you owe."

The unusual warning was caused by the fact that the first of the income tax returns to come to hand revealed a widespread failure to deduct the 25 per cent deduction credited under the new law to earned income.

Taxpayers should note these facts," the statement said. "All net income for the year 1924 up to $5000 is considered as earned net income for the purpose of this 25 per cent deduction. For example, a taxpayer, whose net income form salary was $2000, and who made a profit of $3000 on a real estate transaction, his total net income amounting to $5000, is entitled to consider the whole amount as earned net income in computing the credit to which he is entitled.

In no case is the earned net income for 1924, considered to be in excess of $10,000. For example, a taxpayer whose net income for 1924 from salary was $15,000, can consider only $10,000 as earned net income in applying the 25 per cent credit.

HOMICIDE VERDICT IN CASE OF LAVIN, KILLED BY AUTO

A verdict of homicide at the hands of parties unknown was returned yesterday by a Coroner's jury in the case of Patrick J. Lavin, 35 years old, World War veteran and secretary of W. C. McBride, Inc., who died Friday night, 24 hours after he was struck by an automobile containing two men, who feloniously fled from the scene. They have not been apprehended. Lavin suffered a fracture of the skull and internal injuries. None of the witnesses could furnish a description of the occupants of the machine, which was said to have been going about 30 miles an hour and without headlights, although the accident occurred at 6:15 p. m. Jacob Fishman, 1516 Theodosia avenue, testified he was unable to discern the license number because the tail-light was not lighted.

The funeral will be held at 8:30 Monday morning from the home of his mother, Mrs. Agnes Lavin, 4863 Cote Brilliante avenue, to Visitation Church, Taylor and Evans avenue, and burial will be in Calvary Cemetery.

Following its customary procedure, the Judiciary Committee may be expected to call a meeting and conduct a preliminary hearing to determine whether the charges and supporting facts warrant a thorough investigation. It is probable, Dyer said, that Representative Hawes and perhaps two or three other witnesses will be called.

If it decides that a thorough investigation is justified, it will present a resolution to the House, asking for authority and funds to conduct it. A subcommittee, consisting of members of the Judiciary Committee, would then be appointed for that purpose by the chairman, Representative Graham, of Pennsylvania.

It is likely that the Judiciary Committee will postpone action in the English case only for a few hours, pending the appearance of Representatives Hawes before the Rules Committee Monday morning. Hawes will urge a report on his resolution.

ASQUITH WILL ACCEPT EARLDOM AND RETIRE

British Liberal Leader to Become Earl of Oxford, Ending Long Political Career.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—What is likely to be generally regarded as the end of a great political career came today with the announcement that Herbert H. Asquith had accepted the honor of an earldom, offered by King George on the advice of Prime Minister Baldwin "in recognition of his great services to the nation," and had chosen the historic title of Earl of Oxford, famous in the country's annals.

The earldom of Oxford, vested in the famous De Vere family, flourished from 1142 to the death of Aubrey de Vere, the twentieth Earl, in 1703, when it became extinct, but was revived in 1711 in the person of Robert Harley, who was speaker of the House of Commons and held other high Government positions again to become extinct with the death of the sixth Earl in 1853.

DEPUTY SHERIFF SHOOTS MAN AT A ROADHOUSE IN COUNTY

George Landmann, 21, Wounded in Head; Victim Threatened Him, Assailant Says.

George Landmann, 21 years old, 117 East Courtois street, suffered a flesh wound of the head, at 10 o'clock last night, when he was struck by a bullet in front of a roadhouse at 8717 South Broadway, just outside of the city limits, fired by Deputy Sheriff Frank Smith of St. Louis County.

Smith said that Landmann had threatened to "get him," and on seeing Landmann he searched him, but found no weapon. Landmann then went into the roadhouse, Smith said, and looked in the drawer of a table. When he came out, Smith related, the deputy asked him to stop.

Landmann ran, however, Smith said, and Smith then fired a shot at the ground. Smith said Landmann fell, but he thought he was feigning, and told him to go on. Landmann then ran across the city line, and was taken to City Hospital by a patrolman.

TWO SOLDIERS ARE KILLED WHILE HOLDING UP STORE

Omaha Grocer Surprises Youths as Wife Stands With Hands Up and Shoots Both.

By the Associated Press.

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 24.—Arthur Fay, 21 years old, of Omaha, and Norman Kelley, 19, of Fort Des Moines, Ia., members of Company F, Seventeenth Infantry, stationed at Fort Omaha, were shot and killed here shortly after 7 o'clock tonight when they were caught holding up a grocery store. S. R. Dulick surprised the soldiers as they were holding up his wife and killed them.

The two men entered Dulick's store and after asking for candy and chewing gum, ordered Mrs. Dulick to throw up her hands. She complied, but Dulick, hearing the order, ran down the stairs and shot Kelley dead. He then shot Frey.

The two men were identified as Fort Omaha soldiers by Lieut. E. B. Richardson, officer of the day at the fort. According to the army records.

GLENN YOUNG AND ORA THOMAS SLAIN AT HERRIN

ambush by bullets from the watchers, Jack Skelcher, a coal miner, was slain.

At once there was a bitter dispute between klansmen and their enemies. The anti-klan faction claimed the slaying of Skelcher was murder. The klansmen averred that Skelcher, and a man named Brown who rode with him, had disobeyed orders to halt. Counter-indictments were returned, Brown and the Shelton brothers being charged with the attack on Young, and five alleged klansmen with the shooting of Skelcher.

On the surface things were quiet for a while, with Young out of the town, and then on Aug. 30, pistols were drawn on a Herrin street within a few minutes and seven men either were killed or fatally wounded. At that time, Young was still an invalid, but a few weeks later he was back in Williamson County.

Despite the attempt on his life and the Federal charges against him, he appeared at Benton, Ill., Oct. 6, with three prisoners from Herrin, who, he said, he had arrested for violations of the liquor law. Two days later the national guard troop which was stationed in Herrin since the August riot was increased 50 per cent.

At the November election the klan-indorsed candidates were victorious and reports were that the klan, to keep peace in the county, was trying to persuade Young to leave. A fund was raised for him, klansmen said, and offered to him on the condition he leave, but he refused to go.

Few men have had a more spectacular career than Young, even if the two years as a klan raider are disregarded. Years before he had become known as a "man killer" and a fearless Federal officer.

He was born in Amarillo, Tex., and after serving a term as Deputy United States Marshal in Western Kansas, he joined the Texas Rangers.

Later he became a Department of Justice agent and remained in that work for 15 years, seven of which were devoted to hunting army deserters. In 10 years Young had a record of more than 3000 arrests and bore six or seven scars. He estimated once that he had killed more than a score of men.

His most noteworthy act was the capture of the noted Crawleys, a gang of draft-dodgers, for whom United States troops spent weeks searching the mountains of northern Georgia, Western Carolina and Eastern Tennessee. Young, who had been assigned to the case, met the seven men single-handed in "Haley's Hell" a part of the mountains where few men ever ventured. He took them captive to Knoxville. Later he was dubbed "Two-Gun" Young for his habit of carrying two revolvers in his belt.

In 1920 Young's work took him to Illinois. In search of liquor he entered the home of Luke Vugovic at Madison and after Vugovic snapped a revolver at him, Young shot him to death.

The outbreaks in Williamson County have attracted attention all over the world. European newspapers, particularly the London newspapers and especially the London Times, frequently have given more space to the outbursts of rioting there than has been given by American newspapers 500 or 600 miles from Herrin. The London Times usually referred to the trouble as "the Williamson County war."

One Company of Troops Due to Reach Herrin Before Daylight.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 25 (Sunday).—Maj. Robert W. Davis, with 30 men from the Headquarters Company, 130th Infantry, from Carbondale, will be in Herrin by daylight this morning, Adjutant-General Black announced here this morning. The men will make the trip in trucks and Maj. Davis will be instructed to take any action he may deem necessary to preserve peace.

KIRKWOOD WILL VOTE ON INCREASE IN TERRITORY

Citizens of Suburb Will Act on Question of Expanding at Special Election Feb. 14.

Kirkwood, one of the largest suburbs, is preparing to vote on acquisition of territory which would increase its area from about three square miles to about 14 square miles. The proposed extension would make the town run from Webster Groves to Meramec Highlands and from Manchester road to the Meramec River, roughly, and would increase the population from about 5000 to 6000 or more.

Voters within the present city limits will act on the question at a special election Feb. 14. Those in the territory to be annexed will not have opportunity to vote, but may go into court after the election, if they are "voted in," seeking to frustrate the action.

No Organized Opposition.

There is no organized opposition to the plan, but a mass meeting of protest has been called for 1:30 p. m. today at Meramec Highlands store. Some residents of the area which would be affected fear their taxes would be increased heavily without corresponding benefits. One of these, John J. Rowe, who resides on a farm on Dougherty Ferry road and practices law, said yesterday that if the town votes to annex his place he will file an equity suit in Circuit Court against the annexation.

Mayor Edward Beecher, who is vice president of the D'Arcy Advertising Co., said: "I understand this proposal is creating some opposition because some people realize there will be a sincere effort to make them behave." He appeared to have in mind resorts on the fringe of the territory concerned. Kirkwood proper has no saloons, as a result of local option years ago.

The proposal was initiated by the town Board of Aldermen upon the request of a number of residents, who believe that the territory is naturally dependent on Kirkwood, including dependence for fire and police protection, and who want their suburb to grow. They were moved also by the desire to have the town's water pumping plant on the Meramec River at Meramec Highlands placed within the city limits.

Proposed New Limits.

The proposed new limits are as follows: Beginning at a point about a block north of the intersection of Berry and Manchester roads, running west four miles (generally about half a mile north of Manchester road) to a point one-third of a mile west of Ballas road, thence south three and one-half miles (through the intersection of Quinette and Barrett's Station roads) to the Meramec River, thence east four miles along the river bank and adjacent section line to a point three and one-half miles south of the point of beginning, north on a line between these two points to Big Bend road, west to Holmes avenue, south to Kirkham avenue, east to Berry road, and north to the point of beginning.

This would make incorporated territory extend southwest from St. Louis to a region within view of Jefferson County hills, and with only a two-mile break from the incorporated area of Valley Park. Growth of the suburban residence district in that direction has been great.

At the same election Kirkwood will vote on two bond issues—one for $30,000 to repair the town's electricity distribution system, which was wrecked by the ice storm of Dec. 18, and the other for improvements of the water plant suggested by fire underwriters, including an auxiliary gasoline pump for use in case of an electricity shutdown.

DOUBLE LYNCHING THREATENED AFTER STUDENT IS KILLED

By the Associated Press.

SHREVEPORT, La., Jan. 24.—Dan Barr, student at the Fairview High School of Natchitoches Parish, son of a prominent planter, was shot and killed tonight on a public road near Campti, La., by a negro.

Barr and two relatives were riding horses and engaged in a dispute over the right of way with Sam German and Babe Smith, negroes, who were also mounted. In the shooting that followed, Barr was killed.

The negroes were quickly captured by a posse and taken to the scene of the crime. The crowd was growing larger as the news spread and officers feared a double lynching.

AUTOS ARE USED IN 90 PER CENT OF CRIMES HERE

Heads of St. Louis Police Department Base Assertion on Analysis of Cases Handled by Them.

Ninety per cent of criminal operations in St. Louis involve the use of the automobile. Nine out of ten crimes against life and property are attributable to this twentieth century marvel of transportation.

This indictment is made on no less authority than the heads of the St. Louis Police Department, based on an analysis of crime statistics; on a study of the diversified application of the automobile in crime; and in a search for methods to outwit the ever increasing daring and resourcefulness of the automobile robber.

"Years ago, when there were no automobiles," Chief of Detectives Hoagland pointed out to a reporter for the Post-Dispatch, "there were no large robberies, such as bank holdups, payroll robberies, etc., and the means of escape were limited. Today, with the advancement of the automobile and the continual improvement of the road systems, city and country have been brought together. Years ago criminals were compelled virtually to travel on foot, street cars, horse and horse and buggy.

Policemen Are Handicapped.

"The patrolman patroling a beat had a fair chance of combating crime in the olden days; whereas, today, the criminal element will pick some particular place to commit a crime, dash on it in a high-powered automobile, several strong, commit the crime in a few moments and flee; and before sufficient time has elapsed to give an alarm the criminals are miles away. What chance has a policeman single-handed?"

One hundred and twenty automobiles have been reported stolen in St. Louis since Jan. 1; only 92 recovered. And of this entire number 30 per cent were used in commission of later crimes, in the estimate of Lieut. Reinwald, in charge of the police automobile department.

"The automobile has done a great deal for humanity," continued Chief Hoagland, "in the way of affording pleasure, rapid transportation for commercial purposes and bringing the cities and rural districts closer together. On the other hand it has done a very great deal to promote crime. The youth of easy moral fiber first steals an automobile for a lark; to show his girl a good time. Then he needs spending money or more gas. Then, the first robbery. Easy money, and so the criminal is made.

Auto Used in Many Crimes.

"Automobiles are being used by more daring criminals for bank holdups, payroll robberies, burglaries and the like. Even the pickpocket uses the automobile to trail street cars and afford his companions a quick escape after passengers are robbed. Burglars use them to transport tools, sometimes to carry away large safes to open them at leisure. Goods stolen from warehouses and freight cars can be carried away in quantity. Whisky runners could hardly ply their trade without them."

Obviously, the criminal must first acquire an automobile. In the early days, the criminal hunted for a car in which the owner carelessly left the ignition key; or he cut the ignition wires and reunited them to make contact, and drove off in the machine. Today such methods are scoffed at. Now the thief waits for his victim as he is about to leave or enter his car at his home or place of business. A revolver or two are thrust at him. He is ordered inside, made to drive a few blocks, usually robbed, then ordered out.

With slight variation, this system has been used recently in five notable cases in which the robbers forced the victim—in four of these cases theater owners—to return to their theaters and open their safes. One robbery was frustrated by the accidental appearance of a policeman, but the hauls aggregated several thousand dollars.

The boulevard stop, which the law-abiding citizen must observe, is also a factor which works for the criminal. The enforced halt permits the robber or robbers to leap on the running board, thrust their weapons inside and thus render the victim helpless. In one recent instance, however, the stop resulted in the two robbers' capture, as the owner pursued them in a commandeered car and caught them in heavy traffic. Needless to observe, a "silent" policeman would not have halted them.

COOLIDGE ADVISES SUSPENDERS FOR COLLEGE BOYS

President's Comment Elicited by Visit of Three Princeton Youths in Flowing Trousers.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—President Coolidge does not think much of the prevailing styles in college student apparel, particularly the wide flowing trouser legs and suspenderless waist lines. Three members of the American Whig Club of Princeton called on Mr. Coolidge today to ask him to speak before their society, and when they had presented the matter the President inquired of them if they wore suspenders.

They admitted they did not, and Mr. Coolidge told them that when his son came home from Mercersburg Academy, similarly arrayed, he promptly advised him to get some suspenders and hitch up his trousers a notch or two.

ALLEGED SLAYERS OF R. W. DWYER ARRESTED

Two Men Named by Coroner's Jury Held at Los Angeles, Police Are Advised.

Two men wanted as the slayers of Robert W. Dwyer, 20-year-old son of Phil Dwyer, 4048 Garfield avenue, former Democratic politician, who was shot to death at Vandeventer avenue and North Market street, the night of May 30, 1923, are under arrest in Los Angeles, the St. Louis Police Department was notified by telegram yesterday.

The message was from the superintendent of the California State Bureau of Identification at Sacramento, who asked that duplicate finger prints and photographs be forwarded to confirm the identification already made. The two men —John L. Mauk and Walter Stetson, each 24 years old, were arrested in Hollywood a week ago on a joy-riding charge. They gave aliases, disproved when their finger prints were identified at the State Bureau.

The two men were named by a Coroner's jury at the inquest into young Dwyer's death. Testimony was that Dwyer, after a quarrel with Mauk and Stetson at Sarah and North Market streets, was driving past Vandeventer avenue and North Market, with two other youths when he was hailed by two young men on the sidewalk.

At Dwyer's direction the machine was stopped and he got out. The quarrel was renewed and Dwyer was shot five times. Three shots were fired at James McCarthy, one of Dwyer's companions, one of the bullets grazing his ankle. Before his death, which occurred at the city hospital a few days later young Dwyer to his father named the two men as his assailants.

COLBECK AND AIDS DENIED BOND IN STAUNTON CASE

U. S. Circuit Court Judges Refuse to Release Nine Convicted at Quincy, Ill., Pending Appeal.

"Dinty" Colbeck, Egan gang leader, and the eight associates serving 25-year terms in Leavenworth prison with him for the $54,000 mail robbery in Staunton, Ill., were denied yesterday the privilege of release on bond, pending their appeal from their conviction in the Federal Court at Quincy last November.

Their plea for a writ of supersedas, and for admission to bond, was heard by Judges Alschuler and Page of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago. After denying both writ and bond, the Judges granted leave to counsel for the prisoners to file a bill of exceptions by Feb. 4. Application for a writ of error will be heard at the April term of court.

The decision has no direct bearing on the case in which Colbeck and seven others, including four of the men convicted in the Staunton case, were convicted in St. Louis a week ago, of the $260,000 downtown mail truck robbery here, and were sentenced to terms of 15 years each in Leavenworth.

Colbeck, "Chippy" Robinson, Oliver Daughterty, "Red" Smith and Steve Ryan, who were convicted in both cases, are now serving the 15-year terms concurrently with the 25-year terms, and will be released when the longer terms are finished. Those convicted with them at Quincy, but not at St. Louis, were "Cotton" Eppelsheimer, Frank Hackethal, "Red" Lanham and Gus Dietmeyer. They are kept in prison by the ruling at Chicago. The three convicted in St. Louis, but not at Quincy, who have begun their 15-year sentences at Leavenworth, are Roy Tipton, Leo Cronin and "Feather Edge" Schmidt.

Defense lawyers argued before the Appellate Judges that improper and incompetent evidence had been adduced in the Staunton case. The defense was represented by Edmund Burke, James E. Carroll, H. J. Bandy and T. J. Rowe Jr. Special Prosecutor Horace L. Dyer and District Attorney Williamson appeared for the Government.

HENKE, CONVICTED SLAYER OF WIFE, OUT ON $30,000 BOND

Three Sureties for Man Given 20-Year Sentence Obtained by G. O. P. Committeeman.

Harry A. Henke Jr., was released on $30,000 bond yesterday, after 152 days in Clayton jail, pending appeal of the 20-year prison sentence for the murder of his young wife, Marie, who was found beaten to death with a monkey wrench in their Richmond Heights home, July 11 last.

Sureties were obtained through the intercession of Fred Priesmeyer, Republican First Ward Committeeman and a friend of Henke's father. Attorneys in the case agree that Henke's liberty will continue for between 18 and 24 months, unless some unforeseen circumstance arises, inasmuch as it is not expected the Supreme Court will get to his appeal before that time.

Henke said he wanted to go to Los Angeles and visit his parents as soon as possible, if he can raise the money. Then, he said, he intends to seek a "steady job."

STERLING LIKELY TO BECOME DRY CHIEF

Outgoing South Dakota Senator, Friend of Enforcement, Inclined to Accept Offer.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—Senator Thomas Sterling of South Dakota will succeed Roy A. Haynes as Prohibition Commissioner if he will accept the offer of the job. The President will ask him to take the place for the good of the service.

Senator Sterling was defeated for renomination last year. He goes out of the Senate March 4. His principal efforts here during two terms has been to forward the prohibition movement by helpful legislation. The anti-Saloon League and other dry organizations have relied upon him to handle their bills in the Senate.

President Coolidge has indicated that he is well pleased with the record of Sterling, and would be very glad to recognize his ability and faithfulness to the cause of the party by appointing him to a high office. The Commissioner of Prohibition receives $7500 a year, the same that a member of Congress gets.

It was pointed out here today that the President could name no more suitable man for the prohibition enforcement job, for Sterling has been lawyer, teacher of law and lawmaker, and has been active in the enactment of all of the national prohibition legislation since he came here 12 years ago.

PREDICTS COMPLETED ROAD SYSTEM BY 1930

Program Outlined by Piepmeier Provides Construction of 1000 Miles of New Hard Roads Yearly.

State Highway Engineer B. H. Piepmeier expressed the belief in an address before the Highway Engineers' Association at Hotel Statler yesterday, that the State-wide hard-surface roadway system will be completed in 1930 if the present program of completing 1000 miles each year is continued.

Missouri now has 1659 miles of the system completed and has 1855 miles of other roadway graded and bridged ready for surfacing.

"The State's road building program for the next two years provides for expending approximately $50,000,000 on the 7640-mile system," Piepmeier said. "This will mean the building of approximately 1000 miles of hard-surfaced roads each year and the grading of a like amount. This program will compare with or exceed the progrms of the leading states of the Union. At the end of 1926 the Kansas City-St. Louis road will be completed. Many other main roads will have the worst sections improved so that they may be used any day in the year.

"The 1000-mile building program will not be confined to the primary system. More than one-half of the money available from the sale of bonds, the income from the 50 per cent increase in motor license fees and 2 cents per gallon gasoline tax, will be expended inter-county highways known as the secondary system. Many bad sections of roads will be improved and while the system will not be completed in two years, many roads will be finished to such an extent that the traveling public will be much benefited.

"The completion of the State roads is a gigantic undertaking," he said. "It means the building of practically 11 roads north and south and 12 roads east and west across the State. Virtually every county will have an east-west and north-south highway. There are few states that have such an extended system.

"Maintenance of the present roadways has added approximately 10 miles to the hour to the speed which motorists may attain. The marking of highways is another important feature and Missouri is prepared to co-operate with other states in the marking of interstate and transcontinental highways."

CARDINAL OFFICIATES AT CHICAGO WEDDING

Hines-Howard Marriage in Gorgeously Decked Cathedral Replete With Pomp.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 24.—In a ceremony unique in this country for ecclesiastical and social pomp, Miss Loretta Hines, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hines of Evanston, and Howell Howard, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Howard of Dayton, O., were united in marriage by Cardinal George Mundelein at high noon today.

Heretofore only in marriages among the highest nobility of Europe has a Cardinal of the Roman Catholic Church officiated in such a ceremony. Assisting him were Bishop Francis C. Kelly of Oklahoma and Mgrs. Michael Fitzsimmons and Francis Pursell. The entire interior of Holy Name Cathedral, Archiepiscopal seat of the Cardinal, had been remodeled for the event, which was estimated to have cost the parents of the bride in the neighborhood of $100,000. Members of the Chicago Symphony Orchestra played the wedding march, and Tito Schipa, tenor of the Chicago Civic Opera Company, sang. Fourteen ushers seated the 2500 invited guests, and 14 bridesmaids preceded the bride to the high altar, beside which, on a gorgeously decorated throne sat the Cardinal in the elaborate robes of his office.

Miss Hines carried a rosary of crystal beads, the gift of Pope Pius XI, in whose household her brother, Ralph Hines, lived for several years while in Rome. She also carried a white leather prayer book, the present of Bishop Kelly. It took 20 minutes for the magnificently gowned wedding party to march from the vestibule to group itself about the high altar of the huge cathedral.

Cardinal Mundelein, after a short discourse to the young couple, performed the impressive, but simple ring ceremony of the church, after which Bishop Kelly celebrated the nuptial mass. Then the recessional began, and the party marched through police lines, holding back a throng of some 5000 curious persons who had gathered about the entrance to the cathedral, for a glimpse of the socially elect and the vividly gowned ecclesiastics.

The young couple will spend their honeymoon in Warwickshire, England.

Three years ago, in a cutting and shooting affray in Henry's office, the attorney was badly cut by Linemann.

KING OF CHICAGO'S UNDERWORLD SHOT

John Torrio Probably Fatally Wounded by Gangsters in Front of His Home.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Jan. 24.—Chicago gangland's internecine warfare, which two months ago cost the life of Dion O'Banion, notorious gunman, today flamed out anew in a murderous attack on John Torrio, overlord of Chicago's underworld, and beer runner.

Torrio, at one time a friend of O'Banion and later a deadly enemy, was shot five times and probably fatally wounded as he stepped from his automobile in front of his home. His four assailants drove up in a closed car, leaped from the machine and opened fire with sawed-off shotguns and pistols. Torrio fell as he tugged at a pistol.

His wife, sobbing, dragged the fallen gangster into the vestibule of their home, where the police found him and rushed him to a hospital and the operating table, where doctors said he probably would die. Torrio, with 10 others, was convicted a week ago of violating the prohibition law in connection with a raid several months ago on the Sieben Brewery, and was sentenced to serve nine months in jail and fined $5000.

Among the defendants when the case was called were Louis Alterie, now said to be in the West; O'Banion, John Phillips and Thomas Sherman, all colorful characters in Chicago's underworld, and the latter three now dead, victims of gangsters' revenge. Alterie has been warned to appear here next week or forfeit his bond.

At the time O'Banion was shot by three assassins, Torrio, known to have had disagreements with him, was questioned. The slaying is still unsolved. Less than three weeks later Eddie Tancl, another Torrio associate, was slain.

Torrio refused to tell Assistant State's Attorneys of the shooting, although he admitted he knew his assailant.

NEW ROAD TO CONNECT FOUR STATE HIGHWAYS

County Court Votes Sum for Construction—Starts at Pattonville.

The St. Louis County Court has voted to expend from $200,000 to $600,000 on a hard-surfaced road to connect the four State highways running through the county, to extend from Pattonville on the St. Charles Rock road to Mehlville on the Lemay Ferry road.

The project has been before the court for some time, but the necessary funds were lacking. Friday, a few minutes after word was received from the State Treasury that the county was to get a refund of $900,000, the amount spent by the county on the State roads within its confines, the vote was taken.

The route of the proposed road runs from Pattonville on St. Charles Rock road south on the Fee Fee road to the Dorset road, thence to the Lackland road, to the Link road and along Link to Olive Street road; east on Olive Street road to Denny road, south on Denny and on the Geyer road to the Sappington road, then to Barrington road to the town of Mehlville.

This course will connect the four State highways in the county, the St. Charles Rock road, the Manchester, the Gravois and the Lemay Ferry roads. Tourists will be enabled to take any of the highways without going into the heavy traffice of the city.

The surfacing material to be used has not been selected.

OPIUM CONFERENCE AGREES TO JOINT COMMISSION

Head of American Delegation at European Bloc Approve Harmony Program.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Jan. 24.—The wave of distrust and despair which engulfed Geneva for the last few days over the opium controversy has been succeeded by a tide of elation and optimism equally as extreme as the previous apprehension. This violent reaction, which caused all the delegates to eat their dinners happily tonight, was the outcome of harmony reached at the forenoon session of the International Opium Conference concerning the program for attacking the great problem which nearly caused the collapse of the conference, that of the suppression of opium smoking in the Far East.

Congressman Stephen G. Porter, head of the American delegation, and the European bloc under the leadership of Great Britain, have agreed upon the creation of a joint commission from the two opium conferences to study the American and all other measures which have been put forward to settle this vexed problem.

The commission will meet Monday morning and it is possible that the sessions will be public. Zahle's warning to the conference against exaggerated optimism was due to the realization that there still remains, notwithstanding the apparent harmony, the grave difficulty of reaching an accord. Porter said tonight:

"I shall keep hammering away, hoping and believing that favorable results can be attained."

Greatly Troubled With Itchy Pimples Cuticura Healed

"I was greatly troubled with pimples breaking out on my face, arms, neck and shoulders. The pimples festered and scaled over, and my clothing irritated the breaking out on my arms and shoulders. They itched and burned and my face looked so badly that I had to stay at home because of the unsightly eruptions.

"I tried several remedies without success. A friend advised me to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment so I purchased some, and after using one box of Cuticura Ointment and two cakes of Cuticura Soap I was completely healed." (Signed) Miss Gladys Neilson, Patoka, Illinois.

Cuticura Soap daily, with Cuticura Ointment occasionally, prevents pimples or other eruptions. They are pleasing to use, as is also Cuticura Talcum, an excellent deodorant.

MAGNESIA BEST FOR YOUR INDIGESTION

Warns Against Doping Stomach With Artificial Digestants

Most people who suffer, either occasionally or chronically from gas, sourness and indigestion have now discontinued disagreeable diets, patent foods and the use of harmful drugs, stomach tonics, medicines and artificial digestants, and instead, following the advice so often given in these columns, take a teaspoonful or two tablets of Bisurated Magnesia in a little water after meals, with the result that their stomach no longer troubles them, they are able to eat as they please and they enjoy much better health. Those who use Bisurated Magnesia never dread the approach of meal time because they know this wonderful antacid and food corrective, which can be obtained from any good drug store, will instantly neutralize the stomach acidity, sweeten the stomach, prevent food fermentation, and without the slightest pain or discomfort. DRINK WATER IF KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Pains or Bladder Is Irritated.

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

To help neutralize these irritating acids; to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

LOCATELLI JOINED WORLD FLYERS AT REYKJAVIK FOR LONG HOP TO GREENLAND

Modern Improvements of Iceland Capital Gave Americans Pleasant Surprise.

By LOWEL THOMAS.

(Copyright, 1925: By The Chicago Tribune Newspapers Syndicate and the McClure Newspapers Syndicate.)

ACCORDING to Arnold, prior to the arrival of the world flyers, no airplanes had ever been in Iceland, and the inhabitants regarded their visit as the most historic event since the original discovery of the island by the Norsemen over a thousand years ago. The Icelanders said they even intended to commemorate the episode in their folk songs just as the early voyages of the vikings were described in the sagas of old.

"Our flight from Hornaford to Reykjavik was, of course, the first cross country aerial journey ever made over Iceland," added Arnold.

As we approached Reykjavik we could tell at a glance that we were going to be out of luck if obliged to come down in the outer harbor. No plane could survive such seas as were sweeping in from the gray Atlantic. But, fortunately, we found that our buoys had been placed in the shelter of an immense breakwater.

"Along this wall the entire population of Reykjavik, fully 25,000 people, were waiting to give us a lusty welcome. And we discovered that in addition to our two aerial cruisers there were four American warships in port.

"Not many minutes after we had moored, in steamed the Richmond with our unlucky companions, Wade and Ogden. They immediately put off in a launch and joined us on the dock while we were being welcomed by the Prime Minister of Iceland. Poor old Wade put his arms around Lowell and his eyes filled with tears. Although we were overjoyed to have them with us again, lumps came into our throats, because we, too, took the sinking of the Boston to heart nearly as much as they did.

"Manicured in English."

"Next day, while waiting for wireless reports from Le Claff Schultze regarding the ice along the coast of Greenland, we wandered around Reykjavik. We had expected to find it a village made up of Eskimo igloos, a community inhabited by fur clad, seal spearing, blubber eating natives. So imagine our astonishment when we found that we were in a thoroughly modern city, a metropolis peopled entirely by folk of Danish descent, a city with well paved streets attractively illuminated by clusters of electric lights. Instead of igloos of ice and walrus hide, we found up-to-date cafes, well appointed hotels, banks, clubs, attractive shops, modistes who displayed hats and frocks from the Rue Royal and the Rue de la Paix, and even manicure parlors. The manicurists even chatted with us in English!

"Our long stay of 13 days in Iceland was most irksome in one respect. We were anxious to get on. But we kept receiving adverse reports from Greenland. First we heard that the Gertrud Rask, the Danish boat on which Lieut. Schultze was trying to get our supplies to Greenland, was stuck in the ice about 40 miles from Angmagsalik.

"Our next message from Schultze said that the Gertrud Rask had finally broken through the ice and reached its destination.

"On Aug. 11 the advance agent for the Italian flyers arrived. The only thing delaying us now was that Schultze had wirelessed it would be impossible for us to light on the water in the harbor of Angmagsalik owing to the fact that there were too many floating cakes of ice. Aug. 16 came and still these young icebergs were too thick. Moreover, the Raleigh was encountering 50-mile gales en route. In disgust we now gave up hope of going by way of Angmagsalik and laid plans for a far longer flight, not to the eastern coast of Greenland, which was nearest to us, but around to Fredericksdal, 830 miles away, on the west coast.

"Shortly after noon, Sig. Locatelli, Italian war ace and adventurous member of the Chamber of Deputies in Rome, arrived in Hornafjord from the Faroe Islands in his superflying boat. The next day, while the American warships were getting into position between Iceland and Fredericksdal, Locatelli reached Reykjavik.

"The following morning we were up before dawn, out on the planes, waiting for favorable wireless reports. At 10 o'clock fairly good news came, and at 10:15 we taxied to the outer harbor and attempted to take off. There was not a breath of wind, but the swell was so great and the planes were so heavily loaded with fuel, heavier than ever before on the entire flight, that we were unable to make it. The propeller on the New Orleans was struck by a roller and broken off. A wave hit the Chicago and tore off the front spreader bar.

On the morning of Aug. 21 favorable reports came in, and we climbed into our planes and started for Greenland on the longest and most hazardous leg of our entire flight."

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

UNIVERSITY CITY BOY TO GET POLICE MEDAL

Richard Sutter Aided Police Chief in Capture of Two Men in Stolen Auto.

Not to be outdone by the St. Louis Police Department, which recently awarded a medal "for meritorious service" to a 14-year-old boy, who was instrumental in capturing a band of house burglars, the University City Police Department, in a similar public ceremony, will honor its boy hero, who recently effected the capture of two automobile thieves.

He is Richard Sutter, son of Dr. and Mrs. John H. Sutter of 6531 Bartmer avenue. Upon Richard's breast, in the presence of the members of the department, Chief of Police Ward will pin a medal with the boy's name and an appropriate inscription engraved thereon. The medal will be purchased by members of the department and presented at a date yet to be fixed.

On Jan. 5 the boy was standing at the Westgate avenue intersection of Olive street road, when he saw two youths leap from a Ford coupe, which had been hotly pursued several miles by a University City motor cycle policeman. The automobile crashed against a telephone pole a half block distant as the motor cycle policeman fired several shots futilely at the fugitives.

As they ran past, the boy minutely observed them. He went home and two hours later, while sitting at a front window, chanced to observe them pass by. He "shadowed" them in approved detective style, saw them enter a grocery store at the corner and make some purchases, and when satisfied they were going to remain there some time, ran to the home of Chief Ward and summoned him.

He returned with the Chief, who arrested the youths. They confessed they had stolen the automobile, which was wrecked. Since then one of them has been sentenced to two years in the Booneville reformatory and the other is awaiting trial.

RECIPE TO DARKEN GRAY HAIR

You Can Make a Better Gray Hair Remedy Than You Can Buy.

Gray, streaked or faded hair is not only unbecoming, but unnecessary.

Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will darken gray hair, to make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost, or the druggist will put it up for you. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It is easy to use, does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

'STEEL OUTLOOK NEVER BETTER'

Schwab Says All Companies Show Bigger Earnings.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—The steel outlook never was better and all steel companies should show improved earnings this year over 1924, Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, said today on his departure for Europe.

Prices, he asserted, should increase at least $10 a ton because of the cost of raw materials, as present levels are $10 a ton lower than a year ago. "The general business outlook could not be better. America is growing all the time and there is no occasion for alarm."

MAGNESIA BEST FOR YOUR INDIGESTION

Warns Against Doping Stomach With Artificial Digestants

Most people who suffer, either occasionally or chronically from gas, sourness and indigestion have now discontinued disagreeable diets, patent foods and the use of harmful drugs, stomach tonics, medicines and artificial digestants, and instead, following the advice so often given in these columns, take a teaspoonful or two tablets of Bisurated Magnesia in a little water after meals, with the result that their stomach no longer troubles them, they are able to eat as they please and they enjoy much better health. Those who use Bisurated Magnesia never dread the approach of meal time because they know this wonderful antacid and food corrective, which can be obtained from any good drug store, will instantly neutralize the stomach acidity, sweeten the stomach, prevent food fermentation, and without the slightest pain or discomfort. Try this plan yourself but be certain to get pure Bisurated Magnesia especially prepared for stomach use.

Central Overwhelms Soldan in High School Basketball, 31-17; McKinley Beats Yeatman, 26-15

Cameron's Three Field Goals in Second Period Change Soldan's Temporary Lead Into Rout for Central — Cristal Leads Attack.

Central High basketball team swept aside another obstacle in their drive on the league championship by defeating Soldan last night, 31 to 17. McKinley, the team which will oppose Central next Saturday, defeated Yeatman, 26 to 15, in the first game of the double-header at Cleveland High auditorium.

Soldan, pointed for the game and prepared to give Central a merry battle, got off to a fine start with Emo sinking shots in sensational fashion. He hit the Central hoop at almost every attempt, scoring three field goals in the first quarter. Central, meanwhile, was held to two goals from the foul line, one by Hunt and one by Cristal. Post sank another field goal for Soldan and when the quarter ended Soldan was leading, 8 to 2.

This startling spurt was quite unexpected and Central fans were stunned.

Cameron Changes Score.

However, at the opening of the second period, Cameron, the big Central center, found the range of the Soldan basket and he dropped three field goals and a foul throw through the ring. Cristal also scored two points, giving Central the lead at half time, 11 to 8. Soldan could not score a single point in this period.

In the second half, Central could not be halted. The Soldan defense cracked and in the fourth period only one point was scored by Coach White's team, a foul throw by Post.

Cristal and Cameron were always prominent in the Central maneuvering and the team as a whole played with method.

Yeatman Defeated.

In the first game, Yeatman opened the scoring when Randall scored from the field but McKinley soon started to move in the right direction and there was never any doubt as to the outcome.

A large crowd watched the games although the number in attendance did not equal that which was present at the recent Central-Cleveland game.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

URBANA, Ill., Jan. 24.—Playing a strong defensive and offensive game, Illinois won over Iowa tonight, 23 to 15, and took the lead in the Big Ten Conference basketball race. Illinois led at half time, 12 to 11, and gradually crept ahead during the second period. Capt. Mauer featured the scoring of the game with 11 points. Dundee Is Suspended Indefinitely by U. S. Boxing Commissioners

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 24. WILLIAM SHAW, secretary of the National Association of Boxing Commissioners, announced today that the governing body had suspended Johnny Dundee indefinitely, at the request of the International Boxing Union of France, and that Dundee would be unable to fight in the United States until reinstated.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Johnny Dundee, former featherweight champion, announced today on his return from Europe aboard the Paris that his hasty trip back to the United States was due to illness of a relative here and not to a desire to avoid fulfilling a contract to meet Fred Bretonnel, French boxer, in Paris, Jan. 27.

Under questioning, Dundee admitted he also was influenced in returning by a desire to enter the front rank contenders for the world's lightweight title recently vacated by Benny Leonard.

Dundee displayed little interest in the action of French authorities, who have disqualified them for breaking the contract with Bretonnel and also asked American boxing rulers to take similar steps.

Billikens Win By 36-12 Score From Rockhurst

Kansas City Team No Match for St. Louis University Five—O'Toole Stars.

The Rockhurst College basketball team of Kansas City proved a poor match for the St. Louis University team at the St. Louis U. High School gymnasium last night. The Billikens held the ball in the visitors' territory almost continuously and scored an easy victory, 36 to 12.

Rockhurst scored only one field goal in the first half. They could not get through the local team's defense, and were forced to take long shots which seldom hit the basket.

O'Toole played well for the Billikens. Jack O'Reilly, substituting for the injured Kapl, worked smoothly at forward with W. Bradburn.

Delaney Has Real Chance to Win Two World's Ring Titles

Bridgeport Fighter's Wallop Makes Him Formidable Factor in Both Middle and Light Heavyweight Divisions—Bouts With Greb and McTigue in Prospect.

By John E. Wray,
Sports Editor, Post-Dispatch.

When a keen-looking young man of French Canadian ancestry named Orville Chapdelaine stepped into the ring at Madison Square Garden a few nights ago, to battle the sensational Tiger Flowers, the odds quoted against his chances were as good as 5 to 2. They had been as long as 5 to 1. Today, the Wise Men of Gotham will not wager much more than those odds that this same Chapdelaine will not be the next world's champion in TWO classes.

That's because Chapdelaine—whose name announcers have corrupted into "Jack Delaney"—owns that heart's desire of all pugilists, a knockout wallop; and also because he is young, skillful and weighs about 165 pounds, thus enabling him to train down to the middleweight class or up to the light-heavyweight division at will.

It happens today that the middleweight title is held by a dancing master who lacks a knockout punch, Harry Greb; while the world's light-heavyweight crown is likewise held by a powder-puff artist, Mike McTigue.

And there is every chance that in the course of a short time Chapdelaine will be sent after one or the other, perhaps both of these fangless veterans of the ring.

Light-Heavyweight Title First Goal

Advices from New York, yesterday, indicated that Chapdelaine, or Delaney, as it is just as well to call him—will for his real name has been hopelessly overshadowed by his nom de guerre—will be sent after the light-heavyweight crown, which, unexpectedly, has become the focus of keener interest than the heavyweight situation.

Rickard plans to let Delaney, Paul Berlenbach, Young Marullo and Tiger Flowers battle it out for the right to meet McTigue and then, perhaps, the American titleholder, Tunney. There is also the proposal to first match Delaney with Harry Greb, and settle the middleweight situation.

More than likely the light-heavyweight plan will go through and if this new Canadian straight puncher falls short of giving away the weight, they will send him after Harry Greb. In this way there will be two strings to the promoter's bow.

Easier to Build Up.

Delaney is a fine, strapping young fellow who may fill out 10 pounds or more. It is easy for him to build up. It may be a tight fit for him to trim down.

He has an undoubted knockout wallop, as he already has shown two of his proposed rivals, Paul Berlenbach and Tiger Flowers, both

NURMI'S PROGRAM CALLS FOR TWELVE CONTESTS IN NEXT THREE WEEKS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—With 12 races scheduled alone within the next three weeks and more than a score of engagements listed altogether in February and March, with his program far from complete, Paavo Nurmi, the flying Finn, faces a program that will test even his remarkable speed and stamina to the limit. Among the latest dates fixed definitely for him, in addition to many already announced, are Feb 13 at Cleveland and March 16 at Milwaukee.

Taking this strenuous campaign into consideration one of Nurmi's closest advisers today pointed out that the runner was being unjustly criticised in some quarters for declining to enter some of the outstanding fixtures of the indoor season at comparatively short distances, such as the Hunter mile at the Boston A. A. games and the Baxter mile in the New York A. C. meet.

It was announced that in undertaking to meet demands for his services so far as possible, and making long and arduous railroad jumps to fill dates, Nurmi is facing unusual handicaps and jeopardizing his condition.

BLOUIN TAKES LEAD OF 269 PINS OVER SCRIBNER IN MATCH

DETROIT, Jan. 24.—Jimmy Blouin, of Blue Island and Chicago, world's champion individual tenpin bowler, increased his lead to 269 pins over Joe Scribner, of this city, in the second block of their eighty game championship series here tonight. The titleholder gained a lead of 109 pins in the opening block this afternoon and increased this by 187 pins tonight.

Blouin's lead apparently bothered Scribner, who was unable to connect for many strikes. After piling up five consecutive strikes from the fifth to the ninth frame of the sixth game, he ran into an 8-10 split for a mark of 220, his best effort of the night. The local man had two errors and ten splits.

Scribner — 208-184-194-192-171-220-192-211-192-198—1962.

The afternoon scores:

Scribner: 196, 225, 175, 171, 201, 194, 173, 203, 208, 185—1931.

Gunnar Nilson Beats Flying Finn a Step In 2000-Yard Race

Winner Barely Lasts Long Enough, Despite Handicap of 100 Yards — Ritola Sets Two World Records.

By the Associated Press.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Jan. 24.—Paavo Nurmi, the peerless Finn, suffered the first defeat of his American campaign tonight when Gunnar Nilson, a Finnish-American athletic club star, led him to the tape by less than a stride in the 2000-yard invitation special, the feature event of the Brooklyn College games in the Thirteenth Regiment Armory tonight.

Despite his defeat, Nurmi clipped five and four-fifths seconds off the existing world's record at that distance.

Nurmi gave his three countrymen, Nilson, Fager and Prim, a handicap of 100 yards, but he could not make up the distance in the 2000 yards despite a thrilling chase after Nilson, which was ended when Nurmi made up all but about one yard at the tape.

Nilson's time for the distance was five minutes and 3-5 of a second, Nurmi being a step behind, with five minutes four-fifths second.

Ritola Sets 2 Records.

Willie Ritola, Finnish-American A. C., broke two world's records in the 5000-meter invitation when he won the event from a field of six starters in 14 minutes 39 2-5 seconds, beating the mark set by Paavo Nurmi earlier this month, by five and one-fifth seconds.

He was clocked to the three-mile mark in 4:17 2-5, breaking his own record for that distance. Ritola started at scratch and gave away up to 150 yards to opponents.

Nurmi Carries a Watch.

Nurmi carried his watch in the race and consulted it in every lap during the first part of the race, but later disregarded the timepiece and concentrated all his efforts on overtaking his Finnish rival. He was running in third place when the final lap started. Then he moved into second place on the backstretch and set out after Nilson, but Nilson stretched out his stride and shook off Nurmi's final dash with a spectacular finish.

At the mile and one-eighth point Nurmi was clocked at four minutes 58 seconds, establishing what A. A. U. officials say will go on the record books as a new world's mark.

Georgetown's quartet of half-milers won the two mile invitation relay, with Boston College second, and Yale, the only other starter, a poor third. Marsters, the Georgetown anchor, led Tom Cavanaugh, running the final lap for Boston, to the tape by 15 yards in a thrilling finish. Georgetown broke the world's indoor two-mile relay record by eight seconds in this race, time 7:47 1-5.

Boston College also broke the record, completing its two miles in 7:52 2-5. The former record of 7:55 1-5 was made by the University of Pennsylvania team March 11, 1922.

Christiernson Sets Record.

Carl Christiernson, Newark A. C. hurdler, clipped one-fifth of a second off his own world's record in the 80-yard high hurdles event by topping the sticks in 10 2-5 seconds.

Loren Murchison, Newark A. C. sprinter, won the 100-meter invitation, but he failed to break McAllister's record for the event, made last year.

Georgetown Wins Another.

Georgetown University scored its second relay triumph of the evening when its quartet of quarter-milers won the one-mile invitation relay, Vernon Ascher, the Georgetown anchor man, was 20 yards ahead of his Boston College rival at the finish. Rutgers College, the only other entrant, was half a lap behind at the finish.

Ray Watson, Illinois A. C. star, won the 500-yard Brooklyn special by five yards from a field of four starters. Jack Sellers of the New York A. C. was second, with Ray Robertson, Boston A. A., third.

Joie Ray Defeated.

James J. Connolly, former Georgetown runner, won the Brooklyn College thousand from a select field of starters, including Joie Ray, Illinois A. C. star. Ray was handicapped by a collision at the first turn when Lloyd B. Hahn, Boston A. A., and Sydney Leslie, New York A. C., jammed and fell, almost taking Ray with them.

Ray was 15 yards behind when he regained his stride but failed to finish among the first three. Ray Dodge of the Illinois A. C., placed second and Leo Larrivee, Holy Cross College, was third. The time was 2m. 16 1-5s.

Tonight's summaries follow:

BILL TILDEN RANKED NO. 1 FOR FIFTH CONSECUTIVE YEAR

Vincent Richards Displaced William Johnston as No. 2; Brian Norton Ranked 9th

Wray Brown and Norton Placed Ninth in National Doubles Ranking—Helen Wills Tops List of Women With Mary Browne Second.

By Davison Obear.

William T. Tilden II of Philadelphia, the world's greatest tennis player, tops the list in the men's singles ranking of the United States Lawn Tennis Association for the year 1924. It is the fifth successive year in which he was placed in the No. 1 position.

The champion gained first honors in the ranking list by virtue of his winning the national singles championship, the national clay court event held in St. Louis, and numerous other major tournaments during the 1924 season. He faced leading players of the world in various sanctioned events without suffering defeat.

Vincent Richards of Yonkers, N. Y., former partner and protege of Tilden, was named second in the national singles list, displacing William M. Johnston, the Californian and Davis Cup star. Johnston was ranked No. 2 last season and in the three previous years.

Norton Ranked Ninth.

Two St. Louis players, Brian I. C. Norton and Wray Brown, were given places in the singles list. Norton was awarded the No. 9 position, while Brown was named No. 24 in the list. Norton is the third St. Louisan to be ranked in the first 10 in the last 25 years, the others being Dwight F. Davis, No. 2 in 1899 and 1900, and Corinne Gould, placed No. 6 in the national ranking for women in 1919.

The 35 players ranked in the men's singles are as follows:

FIRST TEN.

1. William T. Tilden, Philadelphia.
2. Vincent Richards, Yonkers, N. Y.
3. William M. Johnston, San Francisco.
4. Howard O. Kinsey, San Francisco.

Nineteen cities are represented in the men's singles list for 1924. Of this number New York leads with seven, San Francisco has four while St. Louis, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago and Los Angeles have two each.

Kinseys Top Doubles List.

Robert and Howard Kinsey of San Francisco realized one of their ambitions by winning the National Doubles title at Boston last August, thus gaining the right to be placed No. 1 in the national ranking list. The Kinsey brothers have shown steady improvement in the last several years and will be strong contenders for the 1925 Davis Cup team.

BILL TILDEN EQUALS THE ACHIEVEMENT OF WILLIAM A. LARNED

WILLIAM T. TILDEN placed No. 1 in the 1924 national ranking list, has equaled the achievement of William A. Larned in 1911. Larned, a former national champion, was placed No. 1 for five successive years from 1907 to 1911. Tilden led the list of first 10 players in 1920 and has held it for the past four years.

By winning the national title last September, Tilden also equaled another achievement of Larned. The tall Philadelphian won the singles championship for the fifth successive season, his first victory being gained in 1920. Larned won five straight national titles from 1907 to 1911. The former Cornell star also won the national in 1901 and 1902.

R. D. Sears, the first champion of the United States, won the national title for seven successive years. His first victory was in 1881, followed by six more years of triumph. Tilden, if he decides to continue playing, may equal Sears' record by winning the national singles title this year and in 1926.

Brian Norton and Wray Brown Ninth Among Doubles Combinations

Brian Norton and Wray Brown were awarded No. 9 in the national doubles ranking list. It is the first time a St. Louis team has ever been ranked among the leading doubles combinations of the United States. Victories over such teams as Snodgrass and Westbrook and the Australians, Schlesinger and Kalms, gave them a high place in the ranking.

The official list follows:

MEN'S DOUBLES.

1. Robert and Howard Kinsey.
2. William M. Johnston and Clarence J. Griffin.
3. Francis T. Hunter and Vincent Richards.
4. Watson Washburn and R. N. Williams II.
5. Harvey Snodgrass and Walter Westbrook.
6. Louis Thalheimer and Lewis N. White.
7. George M. Lott Jr. and Axel B. Gravem.
8. William T. Tilden II and A. L. Wiener.
9. B. I. C. Norton and Wray Brown.
10. A. H. Chapin Jr. and Wallace Johnson.

Helen Wills, the youthful Californian, again heads the list in the women's singles. The Pacific Coast player won the national championship and the Olympic games tennis title. She also won a number of minor events during the 1924 season. Her only important defeat was at the hands of Kathleen McKane, the British champion.

Mary Browne Second.

Mary K. Browne, another Californian, was placed No. 2 in the ranking for women. She displaces Mrs. Molla B. Mallory, who was given third position. Miss Browne won the national singles title in 1912, 1913, and 1914. The California star returned to active tournament play in 1921 when Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen came to the United States.

WOMEN'S SINGLES.

1. Miss Helen Wills, Berkeley, Cal.
2. Miss Mary K. Browne, Los Angeles, Cal.
3. Mrs. Molla B. Mallory, New York City.
4. Miss Eleanor Goss, New York City.
5. Mrs. M. Z. Jessup, Wilmington, Del.
6. Miss Martha Bayard, Short Hill, N. J.
7. Miss Mayme MacDonald, New York City.
8. Mrs. B. E. Cole, Boston, Mass.

F. Riese, Saginaw, Mich.

In compiling the national ranking, the committee considered an immense amount of data selected from the reports and summaries of more than 300 tournaments as well as the sectional reports and rankings. The absence of a number of leading men and women players of the United States, as a result of international competition in England and on the continent complicated the work of the committee to a considerable extent. These players did not compete in any United States tournament during the months of June and July and several failed to show their best form following their return to the courts in this country. Owing to insufficient data the following players were not ranked in the men's singles: Manuel Alonso, F. T. Anderson, Carl Fischer, Axel Gravem, Francis T. Hunter, A. W. Jones, Wallace Scott, R. Norris Williams II.

Moving the Head Most Common Mistake, Art Longworth Writes

Country Club Professional Reviews Faults Most Frequently Found and Warns Against Them — He Recommends More Attention to Practice.

By Art Longworth.

Professional at the St. Louis Country Club.

COMMON MISTAKES.

(Copyright, 1925.)

MOVING the head, looking up—I believe is the most common mistake among golfers. There are many mistakes, many faults, but I believe the hardest one to get rid of absolutely is the moving the head. Many a shot is ruined because of that mistake.

A. LONGWORTH

I recall an exhibition match in which I played last summer. There was a good-sized gallery. I got all set to make a pitch shot of about 20 yards. I guess I was afraid somebody would steal the ball or something. At any rate, up went my head to watch it and the result was that I foozled the shot. The ball went about 20 feet and you can imagine my embarrassment. Even the old heads are liable to make that mistake occasionally. Try to think of it, however, and keep that head still. You can't make a good shot if you look up.

Don't Sway the Body.

Another common mistake is swaying the body, instead of using the hands and arms. In pivoting, of course, the body gets into the shot, but confine the movement of your body to the pivoting and don't sway. You can't play golf if you sway the body.

Getting up on your toes is another mistake that is common. Stay back on your heels. That insures balance.

Gripping the club too tightly and too much with the palms, instead of the fingers, is another common blunder. Hurrying the back stroke is another thing that causes much trouble by preventing proper timing. Be deliberate in taking the club back if you would develop a smooth, well-grooved swing.

Don't ease up in your shots. That is a common mistake. Gauge the distance you want by your back swing and don't try to soften your swing as you reach the ball. If you do you won't make many good shots.

Don't Stab Your Putts.

Stabbing putts is another thing that is done that should be avoided. Always putt with a smooth, even stroke and follow through. Don't merely jab your club into the ground behind the ball. Your ball will not hold its line if you stab it. In order to get direction and in order to judge distance you must have a smooth putting stroke.

Another mistake, and one which I put last for emphasis—I might have put it ahead of moving the head—is the mistake of not practicing. Get a bag of 15 or 20 old balls and keep the bag handy. Whenever you go out to play take the bag of balls out on the practice field and run the scale. By that I mean play all your clubs. Shoot the 20 balls with your niblick. Then your mashie niblick, then your mashie, and so on until you have used every club in your bag. That is the surest way I know to improve your game.

Don't spring the old gag about not having time. Take an afternoon if necessary, that you had planned to devote to playing. Practice and you will find that it will add to the pleasure of all the future rounds you play. Every golfer wants to improve. And the only way is to practice. Run the scale.

DELANEY HAS CHANCE TO WIN TWO WORLD'S RING CHAMPIONSHIPS

demon hitters. In these fights Delaney showed a quality that attends only greatness—ability to take it. Berlenbach had him on the floor, but Delaney arose and stopped his foe. Flowers outpointed Delaney easily, in the first round, but succumbed to one of those straight rights in the second round.

For the rest, having beaten two of his prospective opponents, he probably will be matched with Young Marullo, who seems to lack class for a title showing.

If he works his way to McTigue he will have only a broken-handed, safety-first scrapper to face. McTigue is crafty, but Mike's knock-out days are over and Delaney would have nothing to fear but a point defeat.

He might win. In fact, one would say that if the fight ended in a knockout Delaney would gain it.

Greb Tough Picking.

Then the Greb fight would remain. This would be quite another matter. Harry Greb is a better man than McTigue, even if he can't knock 'em dead.

He is experienced, rough, crafty and a shifting, baffling target for even straight hitters. He will not be so easily solved as McTigue. But a powerful punch like Delaney's softens up many tough obstacles.

And as said in the beginning it's no 2 to 1 shot that Delaney some day will not win BOTH titles. If he does he will have repeated the feat of Benny Leonard, who, having been twice knocked out himself, later on reclaimed himself and battered one foe to a championship.

WRAY'S

Quite Right, Old Top.

FRANK ROSE of Ipava, Ill., writes that our expressed view that Jack Dempsey is the "greatest fighter the heavyweight world ever knew" is a trifle hackneyed. He asserts the same thing has been said of every champion that has come to the throne since John L. Sullivan held sway.

That may have been true in Ipava, although we doubt if even there anyone had the hardihood to express such a view about Marvin Hart, Tommy Burns or Jess Willard.

Nevertheless there is a tendency to exalt the reigning monarch. The theory is natural, namely: That progress is going on constantly in all sports as in all other things; and that, therefore, the leaders of today ought to be an improvement on the leaders of more primitive times.

No Punch Like Dempsey's.

IN pugilistic observation some of us have had the advantage of ocular comparison of the various champions. Having been one of these, to a certain extent, our views that Dempsey stands out is not based on hearsy, except with reference to John L. Sullivan.

Records of the ring will show that even Sullivan held no devastating punch to compare with Dempsey's; for, save on that bunkum tour of "meeting all comers," when he knocked out a lot of local prides and lumberjacks, his record shows scant evidence of a quick-finishing wallop.

Dempsey is not a Corbett in skill, nor a Jeffries in physique; but he has advantages over these two and over Fitzsimmons as well. He can stop foes with both hands; he can hit a knockout blow faster than any fighter we have ever seen. He is faster than a Fitzsimmons with both hands and feet; and, if not as fast or as clever as a Corbett was he is sufficiently clever, considering his style of fighting.

Jack Johnson Dangerous.

JACK JOHNSON in his prime probably would have given Dempsey more trouble than any of the heavyweights of the past. Johnson knew how to handle opponents. He was as adept as Tom Gibbons and a much better attacking fighter. He lacked the wallop of Dempsey and he was a big mark to shoot at—which is where Dempsey shines.

They say Dempsey is champion in an era of poor fighters; but show us the heavyweight who reigned in a period of GOOD ones?

Corbett beat a gross, wornout Sullivan; Fitzsimmons knocked out the powderpuff hitter, Corbett; Jeffries beat the 27-year-old Fitzsimmons, whom he outweighed 50 pounds; Johnson trimmed that poor little "cheese champion" Tommy Burns; Willard outlasted a 39-year-old negro, who carried 27 pounds overweight into the ring with him; and Dempsey knocked out the big gawk Willard.

Dempsey combines more virtues than any of the others—hence we cleave to this boy.

What Racing Means.

THE vast extent of race-track betting can only be guessed. At the Maryland meetings of last season $51,000,000 was turned over. The Metropolitan tracks and Saratoga, with their greater crowds must have turned over at least five times that amount, merely judging by attendance.

Add the big Kentucky meetings of spring, summer and fall, the Canadian circuit and the four winter tracks now operating and the actual wagering at the tracks alone probably amounts to not less than $500,000,000 annually. Millions were wagered on the Kentucky Derby alone.

But this is only the beginning. Throughout the country racing news services provide betting information for countless handbooks and poolrooms whose ramifications are limitless. Cigar stores, barber shops, soft drink parlors, tailor shops and even newsboys are receiving clerks o. commissioners to take bets for these handbook men. The amount of wagering on horse racing today in cities that never see a horse race and apparently have no immediate hope of seeing one must be amazing.

It seems no exaggeration to put the annual turnover at something like $1,000,000,000.

That would mean over $2,000,000 daily for the entire country—and we think the estimate will bear scrutiny.

St. Louis to Have Best High School Stadium in U. S.

Spectators' Convenience Being Considered in Plan for Million-Dollar Plant.

By Dent McSkimming.

St. Louis will have the only high school athletic stadium in the country and one of the finest structures of its kind to be found, anywhere, if there is no appreciable change in the plans being prepared by I. M. Milligan to be submitted to the Board of Education at its February meeting.

Milligan, head of the building department of the board, is personally drawing the plans for the stadium which is to be erected on Kingshighway and St. Louis avenues. The completed structure will accommodate between 50,000 and 60,000 spectators at a probable cost of $1,000,000.

In gathering data for the construction of the stadium, Milligan made a personal tour of inspection to many Middle-Western and Eastern cities and has obtained contractors' blue prints of all major college and municipal athletic buildings from all parts of the country.

Plans are Tentative.

Because of the fact that the plans, which include several innovations in construction, have not yet been submitted to the Board of Education for review, Milligan yesterday was reluctant to discuss details. However, his conclusions regarding the progress of stadium building in this country, based upon personal observation proved interesting.

"Our problem is a peculiar one," said Milligan. "We are blazing the trail. While it is true that we can get some valuable information from the builders of similar college stadia, much of this data is not serviceable because we are not building a plant primarily to accommodate a football crowd.

"Our field shall be wide enough for a baseball diamond and spacious enough to care for the annual grammar school athletic carnival and, perhaps, big enough to care for civic pageants and drills. That's why I say it will be different from anything we can find.

"The Grant Park Stadium in Chicago is designed for similar purposes but, in this case, the structure is too huge for our needs, already costing $5,000,000 and designed to seat 100,000 persons.

Comfort of Spectators.

"The accommodation of spectators, both in the matter of getting them into and out of the building without causing congestion at the entrances, and as to providing for their general comfort within the stadium, is perhaps as serious a problem as the mere building of the seats. The University of Pennsylvania Stadium, Franklin Field, although only two years old, is already out of date in this regard.

"Illinois University stadium is the most modern structure in many ways, but even there it has been found that undue congestion is occasioned in emptying the stadium.

"It is our intention to minimize the proportion of seating accommodations at either end of the field and to increase the number of seats along each side.

"Tentative plans now call for a double deck. Experience has proved that this type, such as we find at Illinois U., is the most desirable that has yet been devised. It gives a maximum proportion of seats along the sides and provides shelter in the event of inclement weather.

"We intend to proceed first with one side of the stadium and, probably, the back of the horseshoe. Later, the opposite side will be completed."

Excavating Advisable.

"By doing some excavating in the center of the plot we will provide mud which will be used in the forward part of the structure, eliminating the necessity for concrete supports under about one-third of the seats on either side. The cost of construction may thus be reduced. In those cases where a stadium is built in a hillside, as at the University of California and at San Diego, Cal., the cost is cut to a minimum."

The buying power of a dime is great—it still buys at MERCANTILE—none better!

SENATORS SIGN VETERAN PITCHERS TO BOLSTER TEAM FOR 1925

Gregg, Coveleskie and Ruether Added to Staff Which Won World Title

Earl Combs Only Player Conceded a Good Chance to Break Into the Battle Front of Yankees — Ty Cobb Will Have Strong Reserves on His Tiger Squad.

This is the second of a series of three articles dealing with the probable battle fronts with which the major league clubs will start the 1925 campaign. Today's article treats the American League teams. The first told of the two St. Louis teams. The third, to be published next Sunday, will be on the other National League clubs.

By Herman Wecke.

As told in the first article of this series, five American League clubs are expected to stand pat on the 1924 battle fronts. Among these teams are the Browns, Senators, Yankees, Tigers and Athletics.

Although the Washington club won the pennant and world's championship in 1924, President Clark Griffith and Manager Harris have added several players, mainly pitchers, to the 1925 roster. Among the hurlers are three veterans—Vean Gregg, southpaw, purchased from the Seattle Club; Stanley Coveleskie, obtained in a trade with the Indians and "Dutch" Ruether, southpaw, who comes from Brooklyn. It is expected that these three will add strength to the staff composed of Johnson, Zachary, Mogridge, Marberry, Russell, Ogden, Zahniser, and Martina. Recruits are Brillheart, Dudley and Kelly.

Harris' catching staff will be unchanged with Ruel, Tate and Hargrave to do the work. In the infield, there will be Judge, Harris and Peck—if his leg does not bother him—and Bluege. Should Peck be unable to play, Bluege will likely be shifted to short with Mike McNally, obtained from the Yankees, a player who has been in the majors 10 years without winning a regular job, at third. Other infield candidates are Shirley, Adams and Reinhardt. For the outfield there will be Rice, Goslin, McNeely, Leibold, Carlyle, a slugger from the Southern League and Wid Matthews, recalled from the Coast league.

The Yankees.

THE one player who has a real chance to break in with the Yanks as a regular is Earl Combs, outfielder, who after a sensational start last spring, was forced out of the game with a fractured leg. Huggins has signed Levi Haskell Indian star. The other veterans seem certain of their places. Urban Shocker is the chief addition to the hurling staff, which will be made up of Hoyt, Bawkey, Jones, Pennock, Beall, from the International; Francis from Atlanta and several others.

Cobb's Reserves Strong.

TY COBB, manager of the Tigers, will have capable substitutes for all positions. He has Blue and Neun for first; O'Rourke and Burke, second; Rigney and Bassler, short, and Jones and Harris, third. Cobb also seeks Cathey and Fonseca of the Reds. In the outfield, Cobb, Heilmann and Veach will be the regulars with Wingo, Fothergill and Carroll, second stringers. The catching is O K with Bassler and Woodall. It is up to Cobb's pitching staff, composed of Collins, Dauss, Holloway, Johnson, Leonard, Pilette, Wells, Cole, Stoner and Whitehill from 1924 and several recruits.

The Athletics.

CONNIE MACK'S chief additions were Lefty Groves, pitcher, and Cochran, catcher. For the rest, Hauser, Bishop, Galloway and Hale will be in the infield with Miller, Simmons and Welch in the outfield. Mack also has Chapman, French and Dykes for the infield and Bagwell, a slugger from the Texas League, and several rookies for the outfield. In addition to Cochran, Perkins and Berry are on hand to catch, while the hurlers will be seelcted from Groves, Rommel, Baumgartner, Burns, Gray, Harris, Heimach, Walker and youngsters.

The Red Sox.

EE FOHL, manager of the Red Sox, has announced that he will try youngsters this season. Last year he made an early showing with veterans. The Sox made several trades getting Kallio and Lucey, pitchers and Gross and Prothro, infielders, in addition to many other rookies. Fohl recently announced he would play Todt at first, Wamby, second; Lee, short and Prothro, third. Boone, Williams, Flagstead, Veach and Vache are favored for the outfield, with Picinich, Heving and some youngster doing the catching. Ehmke is the chief of the pitchers. In addition, Fohl will have Fuhr, Howe, Murray, Piercy, and a bunch of youngsters to choose from.

Speaker's Indians.

AT Claveland, Tris Speaker states he also will have a young team. He himself will play center, flanked by Jamieson, one of the best left fielders in the game, with Smith, Summa, Bell, Hendrick, McNulty and Gulley to fight for the other berth. At first, Speaker will have Burns or Knode, Stephenson, Fewster and Klugman, St. Louis boy, will fight it out at second; Sewell is sure of the shortstop berth and Lutzke will be at third. For catchers, the team has Luke Sewell, Myatt and Walkers. The pitching staff will be made up of Uhle, Edwards, Karr, Levsen, Metevier, Mitchell, Speece, Roy, Shaute, Smith and several other newcomers.

The White Sox.

JUST what Eddie Collins, new manager of the Sox, will do is uncertain. His club needs strengthening. No trades have been made by the Sox. For infielders, Collins has Barrett, Kamm, McClellan, Sheeley, himself and some rookies; in the outfield will be Archdeacon, Elsh, Falk, Hooper, Mostil and Rabbitt; Schalk, Crouse Grabowski and Burns for catchers and a hurling staff selected from Blankenship, Connally, Cvengros, Davenport, Faber, Leverette, Lyons, Mack, Mangum, Robertson, Steengrafe and Thurston, who proved a big winner in 1924.

Shocker Is Greatest Pitcher in Game, Yankee Owner Says

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Urban Shocker is the greatest pitcher in baseball, in the opinion of Col. Jacob Ruppert, owner of the New York Yankees, who recently traded Joe Bush to the St. Louis Browns for the star of the Mound City staff.

Ruppert admitted that he had received numerous letters of protest at the departure of Bush.

"Don't forget that Shocker is somewhat of a hitter," he said. "Remember, besides, that it takes a lot of 'stuff' in a man to work for seven seasons in the hot weather of St. Louis and still pitch winning baseball. Remember also that Shocker started pitching in the big leagues—he broke in with us in 1917—when Bush was a veteran. Bush pitched and won a world series game from the Giants for the Athletics in 1913. The four years' wear and tear on a pitcher make Shocker look the better from our viewpoint."

Hillyard Quintet Will Appear Here

Famous St. Joseph Basketball Team to Oppose Leacocks Thursday Night.

The famous Hillyard basketball team of St. Joseph, Mo., which ranks with the best teams in the country, will appear in St. Louis Thursday night, opposing the Leacocks, local municipal champions, at St. Louis University High School gymnasium. An admission will be charged and the receipts, after expenses have been paid, will go into the Municipal Athletic Association treasury.

The Hillyards have lost only four games in the past three years and two of these defeats came at the hands of national champions. The Hillyards reached the finals of the national tournament at Kansas City in 1923 and the semifinals in 1924, being beaten in the 1923 tournament by the Kansas City Athletic Club and in 1924 by Butler College, which won the championship by defeating the K. C. A. C. the following night.

Langford Says Joe Gans Was Greatest Boxer He Ever Met

Wolcott Ranked as Hardest Hitter; Duana as Fastest; Ketchel, the Most Aggressive and Jeanette the Gamest by Former Heavyweight Star.

(Copyright, 1925.)

Sam Langford, great negro heavyweight, in the accompanying article, tells a Post-Dispatch representative about the best boxers he met during his long career.

THE hardest hitter I ever met was Joe Wolcott.

The most aggressive was that wildcat they called Stanley Ketchel.

The best boxer was Jack Johnson.

The gamest was Joe Jeanette.

The most fearless was Jim Barry.

And the greatest allround fighter, when you considered brains and boxing, coolness and speed, ability to take it and power to give, was Joe Gans.

Learned Most From Gans.

I LEARNED something from all these men — but from Gans I learned most of all. I fought him more than 20 years ago when I was just learning—and had plenty to learn. Not only did I learn from fighting Joe, but when we got all through and I had whipped him, he came to me and said:

"Boy, you're good. You're going to get somewhere if you stick to business. I'm not going to fight you again. You're too tough. Because I won't meet you again, I'll show you how to hit. That's something you haven't learned yet. If you knew how to hit, you would have knocked me out."

And so Gans spent an hour showing me my hitting faults, and how I could change them and do some hitting like he did.

From all the other fighters I learned something, too. But none of those boys did any of that free teaching like Joe did. He taught me in the ring and I paid for it a lot of times by taking a good socking.

Johnson Had Many Tricks.

I LEARNED many boxing tricks in my fight with Johnson, especially how to use my legs and how to smother punches. I didn't have bow-legged arms like Sam McVey, but I learned from having him lam me, how to shoot a left hook and make it seem as if I was just tossing out a lovely left jab.

I never was slow along in 1908, 1909 and 1910. But I learned from that Ketchel boy what an elegant little thing it is to just sort of run in like a wildcat and hit the other boy so fast and so often that he just couldn't get out of his own way.

When I boxed Wolcott, I learned how to stand toe-to-toe and slug and not get the worst of it. For that Wolcott was a wonder when it came to "riding" with punches even while he was just busting the jaw of the other fellow.

Real Lessons in Ring.

I EVEN learned from that foolish Tony Ross, who was on the floor most of the time. I used to watch him pick himself up after he went down and would figure out his little trick of being out of range when he was up again.

George Byers was my first real teacher. He took me in hand when I was just a boy and gave me lessons and wonderful advice. That helped me greatly.

But the best lessons I received were in the ring itself from the men I was fighting. It was what they call experience. I was mighty lucky in my earliest days because I battled men who were masters in one part of fighting or another and just by studying them I got $1,000,000 worth of lessons—and got paid for taking them. Hot dog, that's funny.

Soutar Captures Court Net Title

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 24.—Jock Soutar of Philadelphia today won the national professional court tennis championship, defeating Walter Kinsella of New York, former title-holder, 6—4.

6—4, in the final sets of the series.

37 Players Are On the Reserve List of Browns

Sixteen Pitchers Among Athletes Who Will Make Trip to Tarpon Springs.

Thirty-seven players who are expected to make the training trip with the Browns this spring are on the reserve list made public yesterday by Secretary Willis Johnson of the St. Louis American League club. The list includes 16 pitchers, nine outfielders, eight infielders and four catchers. Jimmy Austin, listed as coach, Tommy Bramell, trainer and Secretary Johnson also will make the trip to Tarpon Springs.

Vangilder, Davis, Pruett, Grant, Wingard, Danforth and Blaeholder are the pitchers who made the 1924 training trip with the Brownies. Joe Bush, Milton Gaston and Joe Giard are the three hurlers obtained in the trade which sent Urban Shocker to the Yankees. Bush was one of the Yankee mainstays who pitched the team of Huggins to three straight pennants. Gaston was a newcomer on the Yankee staff and Giard, a southpaw, was with the Toledo Mudhens.

The Young Hopefuls.

The new pitchers who will strive for places on the Brownie staff are Clarence Peterson, Willard Lasley, Walter Beck, Bradford Springer, Early Smith and Edward Stauffer.

The catching staff of Severeid and Rego will be augmented by the reporting of Leo Dixon, obtained in the trade with St. Paul. W. T. Porter, a recruit, will make the training trip.

The infielders who went south last year are Sisler, McManus, Gerber, Rice, Robertson and Simon. Robert Lamotte, drafted from Memphis and Patrick Burke, local semipro, also are infielders.

The new outfielders who will chase files at Tarpon Springs are Karl Berninger, John Hawkins and Verdo Elmore. Elmore, an Alabama U. product, was with the Browns late last season. Then Bill Mizeur and Herschel Bennett will try to take regular prices away from Tobin, Jacobson and Williams. Joe Evans is on the list as outfielder. Joe can play the infield also and pinch-hitting is his specialty.

The complete roster, as given out by Secretary Johnson, follows:

Catchers: Henry Severeid, Leo Dixon, Tony Rego, W. T. Porter.

Pitchers: Joe Bush, Milton Gaston, Joe Giard, Frank Davis, Elam Vangilder, Hubert Pruett, George Grant, Ernest Wingard, Clarence Peterson, Dave Danforth, George Blaeholder, Willard Lasley, Walter Beck, Bradford Springer, Earl Smith, Edward Stauffer.

LEOPARDESS, HARVEY RIDING, WINS NEW ORLEANS FEATURE

Bradley's Tony Challenges in Home Stretch

Beach Talk Gets Bumped in the Stretch and Harvey Wins on Mamoud in Second Race.

CYCLOPS WINS EASILY

Makes Best Time for Six Furlongs—Vexation Leads From Start to Finish.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Jan. 24.—Leopardess bore the silks of Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree Stable to victory in the Momus Handicap, feature of Saturday's racing at the Fair Grounds, leading for the entire distance of a mile and one sixteenth over which a dozen of the best distance racers on the grounds contested. Bradley's Tony finished second and President collected the small end of the purse.

Little Willie Harvey, who had the leg on the Greentree Stable's representative, which was coupled with Rinkey in the betting, went away from the gate whipping to beat the band and before the field reached the first turn he had his charge at the head of the procession. Rounding the turner the bay filly shook off Miss Melse, which was running in second place at the time with the balance of the field closely bunched.

Maintaining a good lead going into the stretch, Harvey was challenged by several from the pack that was closely bunched, but Leopardess' rider let her have her head and she increased her margin a bit. After being straightened out for the drive to the wire, Bradley's Toney moved up fast and Harvey went to work on the daughter of Daminant and, diligently applying the whip, kept her in front to the finish line by a half-length margin.

Last One, S. N. Holman's notorious quitter, was not allowed to get to the front in the early stages of the race and as the result got up in the closing strides to account for the opening contest, a six-furlong affair, which brought out 12 ordinary platers to contest. Boots and Shoes finished second and Little Gipsy, for which plenty of money showed, got the short end of the purse.

Jockey V. Moore restrained Last One in the early part of the contest and came around his field in the stretch, getting up in the last few strides to win by the small margin of a nose. Rocky Mountain, the favorite, showed nothing and finished way back.

Beach Talk Bumped, Finishes Second.

G. S. Baker's Mamoud came around the outside of his field while Beach Talk and Jedburgh Abbey engaged in a bumping match in the stretch, and drew away to win the second race, styled the Advance Purse, which was at one mile for 3-year-olds. Beach Talk finished second and Walter E. was third.

Willie Harvey kept Mamoud back in fourth position, but always within striking distance of the leaders until well straightened out for home. When Jedburgh Abbey, Beach Talk and Walter E. got mixed up in the stretch, Mamoud came on about his business and registered an easy victory.

Beach Talk was the favorite, while as good as 5 to 1 could have been obtained against the chances of the winner.

Favorite Makes Good Time.

Cyclops, from the stable of H. Massey, got home the winner of the Slip and Tuck Purse, secondary feature on the program, and turned in the fastest time for six furlongs that has been recorded at the current session, when the black horse went the distance in 1:12 1-5. Certain accounted for second money and Elvina was the other to get a slice of the purse.

It was plainly evident that Cyclops possessed the speed of the part when he ran down the Delaware II in the first quarter of the journey. Opening up a good lead turning into the stretch, the son of Heno came down to the wire three lengths in advance of Certain.

Cyclops was the first public choice of the afternoon to run to his backing.

The Poet walked his heat in the fifth race, termed the Fair Grounds Purse, which brought out four horses to contest over a journey of one mile. Badly outrun in the early stages, The Poet appeared a beaten racer upon reaching the half mile post, but he began to pick up speed and literally flew past his competition in the run through the stretch. Cherrycote, which was prominent from the start, had little trouble in getting second money, as Sun Lady was stopping badly and just lasted long enough to beat Raj, the other starter, for third money.

Vexation Wins Easily.

Vexation ran to his backing in the sixth race which was at a mile and a furlong. Pool took the gelding away from the barrier among the leaders and immediately hustled him into a good lead, which he maintained throughout the running. Provident gathered in second money and the short end of the purse was accounted for by Rork.

It was a comparatively easy victory for Vexation as the gelding passed under the wire with a three-length margin over Provident, which made up worlds of ground and was running fastest of all near the finish.

S. N. Holman came back again in the last race when Warfare came away in the last sixteenth to account for the closing number. Bad Luck took second place while Donna Santa finished in the three hole. Warfare was cleverly rated off the pace by Jockey Moore and when called upon came away and easily drew past the tiring leaders.

Style and Generalship Valuable Assets in Scientific Boxing

Referee Sharpe Calls Attention to Importance of Graceful Action, Alertness in Maneuvering, Deception, Etc., in Weighing Merits of Contestants.

By Harry S. Sharpe,
Referee and for 30 Years a Student of Boxing.

H. S. Sharpe.

"STYLE" and "Generalship" in boxing are pretty much the same, excepting that "style" is the manner in which a boxer performs in the ring, while "generalship" is the method by which he wins, or staves off defeat.

If a boxer delivers his blows cleanly, is accurate in his judgment of distance, graceful of action, punctually observes the rules, and displays no awkwardness in attack or defense, he is said to have "style."

"Generalship" is the ability of a boxer to promptly take advantage of any opportunity to offset the attack or deense of an opponent; alertness and ability to cope with any unusual circumstance which may arise during the contest; to conceal evfidence of distress; to deceive an opponent as to intent and purpose of attack or defense; to creat openings for attacks upon vulnerable parts of the head or body; to force an opponent to box contrary to his best methods. In brief, "generalship" is any act and prohibited by the rules employed to disconcert an opponent.

When summing up a boxing contest to arrive at their decisions, referees and judges should give credit for "style and generalship" only when it is obvious that a boxer is intentionally resorting to it, and not when he does some of these things merely by chance.

(This is the final article of a series written by officials connected with local amateur boxing.)

Former Daredevil Fireman Thinks "Someone Might Want to Look at It."

John J. Barry, the fireman who for almost half a century held the admiration of St. Louisans by his deeds of daring in hundreds of fires emerged from his retirement yesterday to present the Missouri Historical Society with a gold medal given him in 1886 when he was promoted from captain to assistant chief.

Enfeebled by his age and slowly losing his sight as a result of injuries suffered in service, Barry still has the alert manner and the modest demeanor which in his prime made him known as the bravest and the shyest man in the department.

He has been in retirement for five years now, living at a family hotel in University City and spending most of the time at the University City engine house, where there is some fine fire apparatus to delight his eyes and the society of other firemen to carry him back to the old days when he was "Jack" Barry, the devil-may-care, fearless fellow who went to the hospital 22 times in his 46 years on the department with major injuries.

Old St. Louisans still remember the Southern Hotel fire in which Barry and Mike Hester, climbing through smoke, rescued nine women from an upper floor of the doomed structure. This and other deeds are among Barry's memories now but he refrains from mentioning himself in relating them.

So it was that when he gave his gold medal to the Historical Society yesterday it was merely with the comment that "someone might like to look at it." The medal, a handsome work of the jeweler's art, will be placed on display among the other relics of the society.

Stops Asthma

or You Pay Nothing

Mrs. C. A. Myers, whose work has brought her in touch with more asthma sufferers probably than any woman in the world, says she has known the worst chronic cases quickly yield to Leaven's Prescription. She now heartily recommends it to all sufferers. A few teaspoonfuls usually stop the choking and you can sleep like a baby and run up hills without exhaustion. It makes real health possible for those who now suffer. To prove this, C. Leavengood, 1634 S. W. Blvd., Rosedale, Kas., will gladly send any sufferer a full bottle—not just a sample—FREE. Use all of it at his expense. Then after 10 days if you are delighted with your improved condition you may remit him its small cost of $1.25. Otherwise you owe nothing or pay nothing. Mrs. Myers advises every sufferer to write for this free trial. She feels sure you can once for all get rid of your asthma trouble.

"I Say:

There is Nothing To Beat

Mentho-Laxene

"For Coughs and Colds"

Feb. 20, 1923.

Dear Sirs:

I am a Police Officer in Philadelphia. My three children had measles and had a very bad cough with them, so I tried several remedies for it and none of them helped. I also got medicine from my doctor, but it did them no good. I saw an advertisement of your Essence Mentho-Laxene and bought a bottle. After taking it a couple of days, their coughs disappeared entirely, and I want to say for coughs and colds there is nothing to beat it. You can use my name any time to praise Mentho-Laxene. Yours truly,

M. T. REYNOLDS,
4441 N. Gratz St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Guaranteed to Stop Coughs Quickest.

Every bottle of Mentho-Laxene positively guaranteed to break up any cold, stop cough quickly, and acute catarrh, stuffy head misery in few hours. "Tight Coughs" and weakening "Night Coughs" are amazingly benefitted with first few doses. Soreness, congestion and cold inflammation quickly subdued, permitting sound, restful sleep and the good feeling that sends you to work or play.

Mentho-Laxene is actually Six Times stronger than the usual cough syrup!

Take it straight—10 or 15 drops for a dose—or dilute with sugar syrup or honey—making a full pint for use of the whole family. Delicious flavor. Children love it.

Guaranteed free from chloroform, opiates, narcotics and sickening sedatives, tar, etc., which so often upset the stomach and weaken the nervous system.

Millions use Mentho-Laxene every season—they have nothing else so good, pure and quickly effective.

Mentho-Laxene "Great Success"

"I am glad to write and tell you of my great success with Mentho-Laxene. I had a cold and cough for three months. I had tried other medicines but they did not give relief like Mentho-Laxene does. I am entirely well—no cough, no cold—and feel like a new person. Yours truly," (Signed) Mrs Mattie Clark, 7138 Arnhauer Court, Youngstown, Ohio.

Acute Catarrh Quickly Conquered

"Have had a severe cold for weeks—severe pains in my sides as well as pains in my head. After many other medicines failed to relieve, Mentho-Laxene was recommended by a neighbor. I immediately purchased a bottle of the pure essence. After taking only a few doses, I obtained immediate relief and soon all cold, pains and cough inflammation were driven out of my system. It's the best medicine I've ever taken for bad colds. Very truly yours." (Signed) Mrs. H. Eastern, 2212 East St., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Second Dose Relieved

Ohio—"The worst cold I have had in ten years. I got a bottle of Mentho-Laxene — was relieved with the second dose. It sure worked wonderfully quick." Ed. Johnson, 314 S. 4th St., Columbus, Ohio.

Pittsburghers Heartfelt Testimony

"I cannot help writing this because I feel it my duty to let you know that in my estimation Mentho-Laxene is, without a doubt, the surest, quickest relief for cough or cold. I had a cough for 15 years; had used a dozen so-called sure remedies, but never got any relief until I used yours. Use my letter for I want the people to know that it's right from my heart and not a paid testimonial. (All Mentho-Laxene testimony is voluntary.) I wish you all the success in the world. Yours sincerely." (Signed) Ira T. Pennock, 522 Cedarhearst St., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Coughed All Winter

Missouri — "My husband always had a bronchial cough all winter, but since taking Mentho-Laxene, he is never troubled any more." Mrs. E. Snedmeyer, 4307 N. 20th St., St. Louis, Missouri.

KIN OF MARIA GUNNING, IRISH BEAUTY, WEDDED 60 YEARS

Earl of Coventry's Great-Great-Grandfather Married Woman Honored by King.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Jan. 24.—The Earl of Coventry, who celebrates his sixtieth wedding anniversary tomorrow, is a great-great-grandson of Maria Gunning, who was so beautiful that King George III. had to assign a military escort to guard her from the crowds which dogged her every step out of doors. Some incidents in her life in London were recalled during the last week as the wedding anniversary of her descendant approached.

Maria Gunning was an Irish beauty, coming to London with her sister from Roscommon. They became the talk of the town, so much so that great crowds used to wait in front of their home all day and half the night just with the hope of getting a glimpse of them. The King smiled upon them and their fame spread all over the country.

Eventually, Maria married Lord Coventry, great-great-grandfather of the present-day Peer of that name.

Her marriage, however, had no effect on the size of the crowds, so the King gave her the military escort to accompany her and scowl at those who stared, or perhaps use more forceful means to ward off their attentions.

Former Prosecutor Takes Depositions of Deputies in Connection With Indictments.

Adam Henry Jones, who, when he retired as Prosecuting Attorney of St. Louis County, Dec. 31, was under indictments charging him with corrupt failure to prosecute two liquor cases and a corrupt agreement to dismiss two charges in connection with a robbery, has begun his own defense of the charges. They are docketed for Feb. 9 in Circuit Judge McElhinney's court at Clayton, and Jones is quoted as saying he may appear in court as his own attorney.

Yesterday Jones, in his new office in the Syndicate Trust Building, took the depositions of three Deputy Sheriffs and two former deputies who were officially connected with the cases in question.

Robert Roessel, special prosecutor, represented the State in the depositions, but asked no questions.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"Renewed ease in money and renewed firmness in the markets have been features of the past week. The natural pause in the securities markets brought little in the way of real weakness. Profits were taken; a fair amount of short selling developed. But technical positions apparently were rather strong; the market showed little, if any desire to go down. The week's developments confirm the conclusion that reactions will not amount to a great deal as long as money remains so plentiful and cheap, and the character of industrial news is good. There is nothing to suggest that caution has been thrown aside in industry and business, and there is nothing to indicate that the markets are resting on a foundation of extravagant speculation.

Money Is Cheap.

"How little likelihood there is of any sharp advance in money rates is demonstrated by an analysis of the latest Federal Reserve statements. It will surprise many to learn that discounts for member banks fell last week, for the system as a whole, to the lowest level since the beginning of the expansion that came with the world war. Nevertheless, that is the exact fact. On last Wednesday the Federal Reserve System was lending the member banks only $202,000,000 in credit; a year ago the figure was $541,000,000. The fall in discounts since December 24 amounts to $93,000,000. The reserve banks still have, of course, a considerable proportion of the acceptances and short-term treasuries that they bought last year. The earning assets of the system are, nevertheless, $257,000,000 smaller than they were a month ago. They are lower than at any time in the last quarter of 1924 and are much nearer the low of last summer than the high of last December. With the quiet season in trade just ahead money should remain cheap for some time.

"In the metal markets there also has been a pause, after the strong buying movements of the past few months. The steel mills are well booked for the current quarter and the steel consumers seem to be fairly well covered for the same period. Buying is not up to the remarkable pace set in November and December, but some slackening was inevitable, and in fact desirable. Meanwhile consumers are taking their steel with no hesitation, specifications coming in at a good rate. Both buyers and sellers are disposed to wait before committing themselves for the second quarter, but the tone of the market is firm. Actual output of steel remains at approximately 85 per cent of capacity. The situation seems healthy.

"Despite the acrimonious discussion of the allied debts, progress, even though slow, probably is being made in that direction. The present disturbance is part of the educational processes that will have to proceed on both sides of the Atlantic. And the irreconcilables are worried over the Paris agreement only because of the possibility of European entanglements and not because our representatives made considerable concessions on the amounts owed us. The principle of the Dawes plan is winning general recognition; the world is coming to realize that there is no use in requiring a debtor to pay more than he can.

Sterling Moves Up.

"Sterling still keeps its upward trend and the London bankers at their annual meetings are coming out for the resumption of gold payments. The question is becoming one of when rather than of. Under the circumstances, it is pretty clear that New York is likely to continue to have the lowest money market in the world. And since our securities are the best in the world, our prosperity greater than that of any other nation, and the resumption of gold payments in London requires that our securities yield less than theirs, it follows that yields here should be low. When the present market is viewed from this standpoint its refusal to react does not seem so remarkable after all.

"No attempt was made to crowd into the hour and a quarter of trading, which was the duration of the short session, the usual two hours of business. All financial markets were quiet, with a comparatively steady tone to dealings. Stocks opened quite firm, but profit-taking in the majority of issues and short selling in a few brought irregularity before the close, while the volume of trading slowed down. Selling of American Woolen went on side by side with determined buying of some of the cheap rails, notably Katy and Kansas City Southern. On the whole, however, net advances on the day exceeded the declines and the professional element, at least, appeared to take more interest in the eclipse than in stocks. Bonds were only moderately active, but strength in speculative descriptions continued.

"Trading in the foreign exchanges was rather dull. Sterling was steady but some of the other European currencies were slightly hesitant. Sterling at $4.75¾ was ¼ of a cent higher, but French francs were down 1¼ points at 5.40 cents. A comparatively small amount of business was transacted. While the forces which have been instrumental in raising sterling are continuing, with only slight interruptions, French francs are necessarily suffering somewhat from the results of the ill-considered remarks in the legislative bodies of this country and France.

Clearing House Report.

"The statement of the New York Clearing House as of the close of business Jan. 24, showed the following changes: Loans, discounts, investments, increased $13,654,000; net demand deposits decreased $63,922,000; time deposits increased $14,408,000; circulation increased $125,000, and excess reserves decreased $28,648,980.

"Commodities attracted less attention. Cotton still was under the pressure of selling as a result of the ginning estimate, which was taken to confirm private estimates of a crop of approximately 12,500,000 bales, as compared with the last estimate of the Department of Agriculture of 13,153,000 bales. The trade appears to be content to let the South carry the cotton for the time being and mills are showing little disposition to alter their policy of hand-to-mouth buying. An abundant supply is in sight and even those bullishly inclined are disposed to wait for further evidence that spinners' needs are going to be sufficient to absorb it all.

"Wheat and corn ruled at somewhat higher prices during the early trading, but the markets were nervous,

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted foreign exchange review says:

"The most important feature of the foreign exchange market during the week was the further advance in sterling of 8-32 bringing the rate up yesterday to $4.85⅜, the highest price touched since the period of tension for a time after the beginning of the war in August, 1914. For the first time during the week there was a moderate recession due to the action of the bankers in supplying bids for commercial and general business purposes, but after that interruption the accumulation by the group of bankers continued and the market closed strong, with the highest price of the week at the bankers' closing.

"The entire movement was in line with speculation that has been in progress for many months, with the object in view of having sterling return to parity in dollars. Statements by English financiers are that the condition is not desirable as a business proposition are decided by these bankers, who look upon the prestige common from a restoration of parity is far greater than any benefit to special business interests that might result from a lower market.

"There were many other important movements among them a vigorous advance in Belgian exchange from 5.02c to 5.44½c, closing at 5.41c, followed by a reaction and finally, after its violent fluctuations, a partial recovery, which showed a firmer tone. Advances were made in Scandinavian rates with the exception of Sweden, which was maintained around parity. Spanish exchange was in demand and relatively scarce, the peseta appreciating from 14.14c to 14.22c. A strong tone was also shown in exchange of Japan and Switzerland, while Italian exchange declined from 3.99c to 3.96c in the cable rate.

"Trading in the foreign exchanges Saturday was rather dull. Sterling was steady, as some of the other European currencies, Belgian francs per Argentine (the paper dollar) 40.20 40.25 40.00

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Jan. 24.—Wheat continued its recent leaping performances through-out the session today, the May option finally reach the high level of the season, but good buying orders on the part of shorts were the chief factor in the cash situation. Corn shorts rushed to cover today boosting prices for a time, but then the market settled down to a waiting attitude. Oats already affected by corn. Little change was noted in provisions.

Sharp price gain were recorded in what this week and the market sold with a few points of the top. May wheat at $2.12 made a top for the season today when $2.10 was paid for a load of No. 2 red. There is disposition to take profits a while. Holders have big profits and say that is the proper time to accept them. Sales to outside points were 10,000 bushels. At the close prices were 1½@2c net higher, with May closing at 67¼@67¾ and July at 68¼@68¾. Sales of 67¼@67¾ were reported for the week. The seaboard reported 200,000 bushels of wheat sold for export.

Corn finished the week ¼ to ⅜c lower and prices today were unchanged to ⅛c higher. The principal depressing influence was the weakness in cash corn. Discounts were widened out daily owing to the shortage of elevator room and the increased offerings. Discounts for cash corn were 1c to 4c wider. An Eastern distributor that was on the floor today for a time said that the high prices this year have cut consumption 33 1-3 per cent in New England territory. Shipping sales were 65,000 bushels.

Oats were affected by corn, closing ⅝c higher to ⅛c lower for today and for the week ¼ to ⅜c lower. Shipping sales were 43,000 bushels.

Provisions were quiet and unchanged. Lard closed unchanged to 2½c lower and ribs 2½c lower. Changes for the week were: Lard 25c to 27½c lower; ribs, 22½c higher; bellies, 47½c lower.

Bond Market Review

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—Buying of semi-speculative railroad bonds featured today's quiet operations. "Katy" adjustment 5s led the group, mounting 1¼ points to a new record high at 83¾, and several other issues extended their gains by fractions. Virginia-Carolina Chemical 7s moved up 1¼ points and Skelly Oil 6½s figured in a moderate upward movement. In other issues liberty bonds were easy.

ARMY OF CLERKS IN LEGISLATURE AT 'WAR STRENGTH'

Despite Promise of Economy There Are 100 More Employes Than in January, 1921.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 24.—The enlisted strength of the "army" of clerks, doorkeepers and other employes of both houses of the State Legislature today reached a total of 365, and is nearly the "war strength" of past sessions—a complement usually not mustered until the latter part of the biennial legislative campaigns.

Although economy in legislative clerk hire was promised by party leaders at the opening of the session of the Fifty-third General Assembly, the present list of legislative employes is 100 greater than the corresponding stage of the 1921 session of the Legislature. The Fifty-first Assembly had only 265 on its rolls the latter part of January, 1921.

Further reinforcements for this session may be easily provided as the Clerical Committees of the two houses are empowered to hire any additional clerks and other employes considered "necessary" without resolutions being passed by the legislators to create the jobs.

Payroll Now $1270 a Day.

The payroll of the 265 clerks, doorkeepers, assistant doorkeepers and other employes now amount to $1270 a day. If the roster is held at the present number, which is improbable in view of progressive increases made in past sessions, the State expenditures for salaries of these employes will total approximately $90,000 for the session of the Legislature. The session rarely extends beyond 70 days, as after that time the pay of members of the Legislature automatically is reduced from $5 a day to $1 a day, although no reduction is made in the salaries of the Legislature's employes.

Resolutions passed by the Republican majority in the House, in caucus at the opening of the session, placed a tentative limit of 150 on House employes, and urged economy and efficiency. The tentative limit has been expanded, as the House list certified to the State Auditor this week carries 182 names of employes. The Senate list certified to the Auditor carries 182 employes, indicating the race between the two houses to "take care" of applicants has been close.

Senate List Is Large.

The Senate list is large, compared to the actual size of the Senate, because some of the Democratic majority in the Senate apparently now lend assistance to minority Democratic representatives in the House in caring for job applicants.

The Republican majority in the House limited the Democratic minority to about four appointments which necessitated the placing of Democratic constituents in jobs across the hall in the Senate. There are 34 Senators and 150 representatives in the Legislature.

Senate employes drew their first pay yesterday. House employes were paid earlier in the week. The auditor's office kept a close check when the pay orders were presented, to determine whether some were being presented for persons not actually here to do the work. In virtually all instances the pay orders were presented by the persons to whom they were payable. It was stated, but the auditor's office had no means of determining whether the clerks had been here all the time or just came in for pay day. In the past charges have been made at intervals that some of the legislative clerks came to Jefferson City only on pay days.

24 Doorkeepers for 10 Doors.

Virtually all the employes drew pay from Jan. 7, the opening day of the Legislature, it was stated, although it is generally known that there was very little clerical work during the first 10 days of the session. Introduction of bills did not start in the two houses until Wednesday of this week. Names of most of the employes were not certified to the Auditor until this week.

The scale of pay ranges from $1.50 a day for pages up to $5 for chief clerks, postmasters, sergeant-at-arms and a few other employes. The clerks and secretaries of Legislators receive $3.50 a day. Among its numerous employes the House has two assistant postmasters; 24 doorkeepers and assistant doorkeepers (the House has 10 doors); 13 stenographers; 18 smooth journal clerks; 18 private clerks; 13 rough journal clerks; 14 engrossing clerks, and 14 enrolling clerks; 26 committee printing, docket, minute and bill clerks, together with other employes. Among the Senate employes are 28 secretaries, 25 engrossing clerks, 31 smooth journal clerks, 17 enrolling clerks, 15 committee clerks, seven rough journal clerks, three night custodians, eight assistant doorkeepers and assistant sergeants-as-arms.

The Republican majority in the House adopted a plan of elevating janitors to assistant doorkeepers, in order to pay them $2.50 a day, instead of the $2 a day authorized by law. This accounts for the large number of doorkeepers.

WATCHMAN WAS THIRD VICTIM OF HOLDUP ROBBER

Charles Barger, Thief Who Died After Pistol Duel With Frank Wilmes, Had Record.

Frank Wilmes, private watchman, who died at city hospital at 1:50 p. m. yesterday of bullet wounds suffered Thursday night when he resisted an attempted holdup by Charles R. Barger, ex-convict, was the third victim of Barger's homicidal career. Wilmes suffered wounds in the abdomen and thighs when he exchanged shot for shot with Barger, whom he killed with two bullets in the abdomen.

Barger, a native of Tennessee, killed a fellow soldier while serving as an enlisted man in the army at the Presidio, in California, in 1907. He was turned over to the civil authorities and sentenced to eight years in a California prison. He was subsequently paroled to a California ranchman, but violated the parole and came to St. Louis. In 1921 he was fined in East St. Louis for striking a woman, and on Jan. 21, 1922, fatally stabbed Thomas Dalzell, an aged carpenter, during a brawl in a South Tenth street rooming house.

Gave Self-Defense Plea.

At his trial in Circuit Court here Barger was acquitted on a plea of self-defense. He told a straightforward story of the killing of Dalzell, whom he alleged had insulted Mrs. Barger, and also told of stabbing the soldier to death during an altercation in an army store. In addition, he admitted having once chased his father-in-law off his own farm with a pitchfork.

Following his release in St. Louis, Barger was taken back to California to complete his prison term there. The term expired last fall and Barger returned to St. Louis, where his wife and 9-year-old daughter, Hazel, had been living, at 1909 Lafayette avenue. According to St. Louis police, the slayer was wanted at Cades, Tenn., for administering a beating to a man there in 1915, which resulted in the victim's becoming paralyzed and losing his mind. Barger was 42 years old and of powerful stature.

Both Shot in Duel.

Wilmes, a special investigator for the American Express Co., and a licensed watchman, met Barger's command to throw up his hands, at Lafayette avenue and Waverly place, Thursday night, by whipping out his own revolver. He exchanged shot for shot with the holdup man until both fell to the sidewalk, each wounded in the abdomen and legs.

Barger died of his wounds at city hospital early Friday. Wilmes rallied from an operation in which a bullet was removed from his abdomen, but complications set in yesterday, with fatal result.

A fund of $30, to be presented to Wilmes in recognition of his courage, was sent to the Post-Dispatch Friday by three business men, who expressed a wish that others might follow their example in rewarding a citizen who had risked his life in ridding the city of a dangerous criminal.

Parents Get Fund.

The fund was turned over to Wilmes' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Wilmes, 1410A Grattan street, with whom he lived. Wilmes was 35 years old and assisted in the support of his parents, who are in modest circumstances.

The parents and other members of the family maintained an unbroken vigil at the hospital from the time Wilmes was wounded until he died yesterday afternoon. A brother of Wilmes is a patrolman in the St. Louis Police Department.

USE SULPHUR IF SKIN BREAKS OUT

Just the moment you apply Mentho-Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant cold cream, gives such a quick relief, even to fiery eczema, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ-destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur at any drug store.

Convictions Overthrown in 36 Per Cent of Cases; Many Reversals for Trivialities

Supreme Court's Late Rulings Limit Court's Comment on Possession of Stolen Property, and Flight From Scene of Crime, for Jury's Consideration.

By CARLOS F. HURD.

THE Supreme Court building at Jefferson City stands opposite the new Capitol. The Court building was there first.

From its windows, surveying the great dome across the way, the eye descends naturally to the tall letters carved above the pillars of the portico.

Salus Populi Suprema Lex Esto.

Let the Safety of the People Be the Supreme Law.

The safety of the people, not the subtleties of lawyers. The safety of the people, not the devices of delay and escape for the guilty.

Of course the Judges of the Supreme Court had known that Latin sentence. It was not absent from the adornments of their own building. But never before had they, or the public, seen it so majestically set forth.

And for a time, in the few years since those words were placed so conspicuously in their view, it seemed that the Supreme Court had decided to give less heed to technicality, and more to substantial justice and the public safety.

The court no longer reversed convictions of criminals because an unessential "the" had been omitted by a stenographer from a legal formula. It disregarded, in a murder case, the accidental omission of the mouth-filling phrase, "the prosecuting attorney aforesaid, upon his oath aforesaid." It even abandoned its former arbitrary rule that a man under court sentence might not be tried on a second charge.

But now, before the big letters on the Capitol have had time to grow dim or dingy, the Supreme Court is again tempering justice with technicalities. Not the same old technicalities. Perhaps worse than the old, from the viewpoint of public interest; perhaps not so bad as the old. It has happened that the new technicalities have applied to cases of great public concern, and that the effect on the public mind has been unfortunate, beyond anything in the experience of recent years.

The reversal of the conviction of James Hogan, gangster, for the robbery of a bank messenger who was later murdered to keep him from testifying; the reversal in the case of Spencer Jordan, slayer of a policeman; and the more recent overturning of the first of three convictions of A. O. Meininger, prime looter of the Night and Day Bank, are outstanding incidents of the late group of technical decisions, which have dealt a blow to public confidence in the courts, and have caused some law enforcement officers to throw up their hands in despair.

Others, who believe that throwing up hands in despair seldom does any good, are trying to get the practice of trial courts in line with the rulings, and hoping that the Supreme Court will add no new difficulties for awhile.

The new Attorney-General, Robert W. Otto takes this view. He intends hereafter to supply information to county prosecutors which will help them to avoid some of the commonest occasions of reversal. He could do more if he were permitted to address the Circuit Judges; for it is the Judges who are legally responsible for the instructions, which are the basis of so many late reversals. But the Judges are not subject to the advice of any elected State official. Strictly speaking, the county prosecuting attorneys are not subject to such advice either; but they are anxious to win their cases, and experience has shown that they will listen to counsel from the Attorney-General's office.

New Attorney-General's Plan

The new Attorney-General, a year or more ago, made an estimate that 48 per cent of the criminal convictions appealed to the Supreme Court were reversed, and that 80 per cent of the reversals were for defects in instructions.

An examination of the court's decisions, in the two years from February, 1922 to the same month of 1924, shows that, out of 199 appeals in criminal cases, 72 convictions were reversed, 107 affirmed, and 20 cases transferred to one of the three Court of Appeals, on a question of jurisdiction.

Of the 72 reversals, 30 were for defects in instructions, though in some cases other reversible errors were assigned also.

These figures mean, for the 2-year period, reversals in 36 per cent of the appeals, and instructions figuring in 41 per cent of the reversals. The percentages are not so high as Otto's, but they call just as insistently for a more effective mechanism of justice.

In the Attorney-General's office, and in the office of the Circuit Attorney of St. Louis, the present difficulties are traced to the stand taken by the Supreme Court in a case, seemingly of minor importance, from Vernon County, in the summer of 1922.

THE HAIR SPLITTER

William Swarens was convicted of stealing from a neighbor a tarpaulin, weatherbeaten and showing at least one large hole gnawed by mice. It would seem to one at a distance that a month in jail would be enough for this offense, but the jury at Nevada sentenced Swarens to two years in the penitentiary. He appealed.

If the Supreme Court had reversed and remanded the case on the ground that the punishment was excessive, probably the cause of justice would have been served rather than impeded. But the court seized upon a paragraph in the trial court's instructions, which was:

"If you find and believe from the evidence that the tarpaulin was the property of W—, and that it was stolen on or about the—day of January, 1920, and that recently after it was stolen, the same was found in the exclusive possession of the defendant Swarens, then he is presumed to be the thief, and the burden is on him to overcome such presumption."

An Unwarranted Comment

One way he might overcome it, the instruction went on to say, was "by evidence that he was at some other place when the said property was stolen."

The instruction followed a form that had been in use for many years, but, looking it over in the Swarens case, the Supreme Court decided that the presumption of guilt, from possession of the stolen property, was "a presumption of fact, not of law," and that it was "an unwarranted comment on the evidence."

Particularly, the Supreme Court's precisionists pounced upon the words "after it was stolen" and "when said property was stolen." Though the surroundings of the words, as they stood in the instructions, appeared to show that the whole matter of guilt was left to the jury to determine, the Supreme Court said that the words asserted as a fact that which was a question at issue. It laid down, for the future, the rule that possession of stolen property raises no presumption of guilt, but is only a circumstance from which the guilt of the accused person can be inferred as a matter of fact.

Soon after, the same ruling was applied in reversing another conviction, that of a Kansas City man for burglary and larceny.

The court did not fail to see that flight, as an evidence of guilt, was in very much the same category with possession of stolen property. On this ground, it reversed the Hogan conviction.

The trial court's instruction to the jury, in the Hogan case, was that "an attempt to escape, or flight, raises the presumption of guilt." Similar instructions, the Supreme Court concedes in its opinion, had been approved in many previous cases.

New Rule on Flight

In fact, the Supreme Court's decision itself states that "this (the form of instruction as to flight used in Hogan's case) has been the rule in this State from time whereof the memory of man runneth not to the contrary." However, the court continued, there was the Swarens' case as to possession of stolen property, and now it was time for a new pronouncement as to flight.

"Proof of unexplained flight," the Supreme Court said, "raises no presumption of law as to guilt of the accused, but, like proof of the possession of recently stolen property, it is only a fact from which the guilt of the accused may be inferred by the jury as a matter of fact, and is no more the subject of comment by the court in its instructions to the jury than any other fact or circumstance in the case."

The Supreme Court held also that testimony as to Hogan's silence, when he was first accused at a police station, had been admitted in a form that was prejudicial to him. In the official record of the Supreme Court's decision, any curious citizen may read the words of the Court, comparing this incident with the silence of Jesus of Nazareth before his accusers, and quoting passages from the Gospels which tell of the Savior's arraignment before Caiaphas and Pilate.

The reversal of the Hogan conviction, which had carried a term of 15 years' im-

Lloyd George Questions Whether Democracy Can Survive Another Generation

"Instability of Governments Has Been the Besetting Vice of Europe and Will, If It Continues, Lead to the Downfall of Constitutional Liberty."

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Jan. 24.

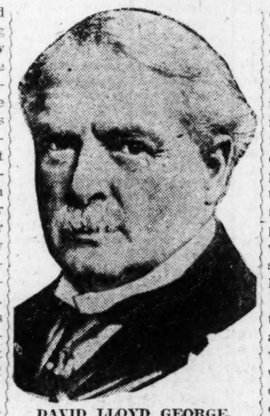
DEMOCRACY must pull itself together if it is to survive this generation. The war, which was to make the world safe for democracy, has led in two, if not three great European countries to a most serious challenge to democratic institutions. The friends of democracy should keep a vigilant eye on events in Italy, Spain and Germany.

The democratic spirit is of recent birth. There may be doubtful precedents amongst the cities and small states of antiquity. But the first purely democratic Government ever tried on a large scale, the sense of conferring equal rights upon the whole adult population of a country to choose their rulers and determine their laws, was that of the United States of America. Universal suffrage has only been established there within living memory, and even then it was by no means a complete application of the democratic principle. Men of a certain color were, and still are for the most part, given as little say in the formation of the laws they have to obey as the Helots of the Athenian democracy. And it is only a few years since female citizens were allowed to participate at all in the making of governments and laws. In Britain, adult suffrage is a matter of only seven years, and it is too early yet to come to any conclusion as to its working. On the continent of Europe, it has produced the worst confusion of tongues since the days of Babel. Germany has a score of parties competing for the smiles and favors of King Demos. These factions agree on nothing except the excellence of their own principles or the imperfection of those professed by all the others. In that respect they do not differ from political parties in other lands. If any country ever stood in need of unity and co-operation amongst its people, that country is Germany. From a position of great and growing power and affluence which excited the envy of the world, she has been hurled by events into an abyss of humiliation and insolvency.

Wrangling at Bottom of Chasm.

Out of that chasm the German nation can only creep slowly by concentrating all its energy and thought on the best way of getting out. But instead of doing so they are wrangling at the bottom of the icy crevasse as to who was responsible for landing them there. The contention is so great that weeks have been spent in fruitless endeavor to set up any government that would somehow uphold authority. At last, a sort of scratch team has been collected together which has neither majority nor influence in the Reichstag and any day it may disappear, to be succeeded by another patched-up administration equally transient. The instability of governments has been the besetting vice of European democracies and it will, if it continues, lead to the downfall of constitutional liberty.

During the six years of my premiership, I had to meet a succession of eight different administrations in France and an equal number of ephemeral ministries in Italy and in Germany. It was a period of grave crisis in the affairs of all these countries, when steadiness and continuity were more essential than ever to the conduct of business. With these perpetual changes, decisions became necessarily provisional and fragmentary. No Government whose life was so precarious dared to look beyond or to provide against anything after the next meeting of its Chamber of Deputies. Under these conditions, Ministers were more anxious to vamp up agreements that gave the appearance of advantages gained for their respective countries than to reach real and reliable settlements.



DAVID LLOYD GEORGE.

When they presented the conclusions arrived at to their respective parliaments, all the concessions, however essential, were criticised and condemned; all the benefits, however illusory, were approved and applauded.

Herriot's Position Is Precarious.

The balance struck by Parliament in an excited debate decided the fate of a ministry. M. Briand, most adroit and masterly of all French parliamentarians, survived the London Conference of 1921 because it dictated terms to Germany whose form concealed the fact that the allied claim for reparations was written down from 6,600,000,000 pounds to a little over 2,000,000,000 pounds. He fell during the Cannes Conference, in January, 1922, because he had consented to discuss with the representatives of the German Government a short moratorium for the payment of annuities. Ultimately France has been forced, by inexorable facts and events, to accept much less than M. Briand proposed in 1922 to concede. But that acceptance of the inevitable makes M. Herriot's position also precarious and it would require a very sanguine underwriter to speculate on the assumption that his ministry would survive 1925.

Contrary to general anticipation, democracy turned out to be a more efficient instrument in waging war than autocracy. It was direct, resolute, energetic, calm, steadfast and well-disciplined as well as incorruptible and self-sacrificing. But in peace it has been occasionally violent, greedy, factious, fickle and infirm of purpose. Hence the Fascist revolution in Italy. The fevered agitation over Fiume, the industrial troubles in North Italy and the belief in Italy that the part played by the Italians in the war was not adequately recognized in the terms of peace all contributed to the temper that engendered and welcomed the Fascist upheaval. Ministries were blown about and out by gusts of popular resentment and caprice.

No Real Liberty in Italy Today.

So the Italian people, turning to their old tradition of appointing a dictator in times of peril to the State, surrendered their liberties temporarily to the Chieftain of the Black Shirts. The Red Shirts won freedom for Italy—the Black Shirts have taken it away. Garibaldi overthrew tyranny; Mussolini has re-established it. In spite of all the apologists for Fascism may and do say to the contrary, there is no real liberty in Italy. All its essentials are fettered, restricted or penalized and often altogether suppressed. The supreme test of whether a country is free is to be found in the answer that can honestly be given to the question: Are its citizens not only permitted by the Government to express their opinions on any subject, so long as they do not incite to violence or offend the laws of common decency; but are they also protected by the Government when there is any attempt to interfere with the right of free expression?

In Italy, the new regime discharges neither of these functions of government in a free community. If violence is preached on their behalf or in their interests, full license is given to the writer, orator or demonstrator for that purpose. But when moderate and reputable papers of international standing, like the Corriere de la Sera, La Stampa or Il Mondo dare to criticise the Government in terms which, in America or Britain would have been deemed timorous, they are suspended and their articles suppressed. I have just read, in a British conservative journal, a message wired from their special correspondent in Rome, defending Fascism and proclaiming in exultant notes its present success and predicting its still more glorious ultimate triumph. This is the cue of British Toryism which, in its heart, rejoices at the downfall of liberty in at least one civilized country.

Based on Force, Not Freedom.

This correspondent, in order to prove what freedom is enjoyed in Italy, refers to the fact that messages from Rome to the foreign press are not subjected to any censorship. It would have been more to the point had he been able to quote a single instance in which articles in foreign liberal journals, censuring the high-handed proceedings of Fascism, had been reproduced freely and without interference in any Italian newspaper. Signor Mussolini makes no concealment of his intention to govern by force and not by registered opinion. If the Italian electors return a Parliament which will carry out his behests, he is as ready to accept parliamentary assistance as Charles the First was on similar terms, but if they elect a Parliament which disagrees with him and opposes his desires and decisions, then he is as determined as Charles the First was, in face of like opposition, to govern without his Parliament. For outside critics, the answer of Charles was the pillory. Is Mussolini's reply any gentler?

I am most reluctant to write about what is happening in Spain. The contending forces seem there to be marshaling strength and watching the opportunity for a sanguinary conflict. The dictatorship has the excuse that parliamentary government has managed to achieve nothing but a series of disasters in Morocco, and that Spain was in danger of sinking under the weight of taxation and lowered prestige produced by the futile effort. The new Government has so far shown much courage and wisdom in facing realties in Africa. But nothing can conceal the fact that it is a Government based on force and not on free choice.

The real struggle of democracy, however, is coming in Germany and Italy. At the end of the eighteenth century the battle of European liberty was fought out on the banks of the Rhine and on the plains of Lombardy. Reactionaries and Liberals in all lands watched the conflict then with anxious and expectant hearts. Ere it was over, they were all involved in it from sunrise to sunset—East and West—from the Ganges to the Mississippi. History may yet repeat itself in this twentieth-century struggle of the people of Europe to maintain the freedom which they have won through so much tribulation and suffering. I believe democracy will get through its troubles in the end; but it is idle to deny that it has in front of it dangers that will imperil its life.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

"Championing a Good Cause."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

YOU are to be congratulated on the editorials in your issue of Jan. 16. Two subjects are dealt with in exactly the right sort of way. It is hoped that you will continue to use the power of the press to correct these evils.

"The Letter Killeth" sound a battle cry for the people—it points out the canker of our system of government as it exists today. The legal profession through one or another phase of their activities are seeing to it that criminals are not punished and that society cannot protect herself against those who prey upon her. Punishment, however severe, should never be administered in a brutal way—but it should be swift and certain. Every effort of the legal profession lends itself to defeat this end, and it does defeat it, and is well paid for it. The great profession which should use the great agency for the enforcement of our laws is becoming or has become the great ally of the lawbreaker—the criminal.

Public opinion forces the criminal into court—a great legal battle ensues, much money flows into the coffers of the profession. If perchance a conviction is had, punishment is not meted out but new trials, reverses and a greater flow of gold is in order and those greater lights in the profession, whom we have honored with high judicial position, have seemed to lend themselves to the scheme.

This is not all, if there is not court room procedure enough for all of the profession we send them to our Legislative Halls where an elaboration of law is made or where "road-wrecking schemes" are hatched—and the people's money flows.

Again I congratulate you upon your editorials of the sixteenth inst. You are championing a good cause and have pointed out the cure for our crime wave by making a correct diagnosis. J. R.

Getting Unwanted Reparations.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

GUILELESS Uncle Sam. Inveigled at last into the trap with the door securely locked behind him. Ah, those cunning allies, shame on them to take advantage of his innocence! And his country had no premonition of the coming catastrophe. Even the President and the ever-suspicious Congress did not suspect it until the heinous deed had been accomplished, but now the Senate is giving a gasp of horror and crying out for a rescue. Trapped in a hateful foreign entanglement, how did it happen? Ever since the war we have been stealing bait out of European traps and escaping scatheless. We have had unofficial observers present at all important conferences to make sure that the allies got nothing that they did not share with us, always standing safely aside while they pulled the chestnuts out of the fire.

The fact is we had always boasted that we didn't want any reparations from Germany. We didn't put in any claim at Paris and permitted the allies to take a first lien on all she could pay but presently the Dawes plan was devised and it looked like the allies were going to get something with us left out. That was quite unthinkable so, according to habit, we insisted on a share. Of course the allies scowled and remarked on our nerve but they yielded as they always had. We did wonder why they exchanged winks but it was not till we had signed up and Churchill had made his farewell speech that we discovered we were really trapped into a joint responsibility for the payment of German reparations.

Chance as a Factor in Life.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE ambitious and successful man is given great credit for his accomplishments, while the indolent and shiftless one is censured without mercy. Yet to be just, perhaps the former is not entitled to any great praise, nor should the latter be too severely blamed, for chance is a big factor in all our lives.

A New York millionaire has just written a book entitled "Bunk," in which he says every wealthy man should carry a horseshoe, a rabbit's foot and a four-leaf clover as a symbol of the way he got his money. Lincoln has been held up as a shining example for us to emulate. The manner in which he struggled against poverty and obtained an education by burning the midnight oil seems almost heroic. Yet Lincoln must have had an inborn urge which drove him onward, and probably he could not have done anything else but just what he did.

Another model which is often cited for us to copy is the busy bee. But all bees are not busy. The drone does not work, simply because through the accident of birth he was born a drone, and he probably couldn't work if he wanted to.

Biologists have determined that there are three distinct possibilities connected with the birth of every child, and they say that each of these possibilities is decided by the merest chance.

You so-called self-made men, who pride yourselves on your remarkable achievements, do not be too lavish with your self-praise, but instead give most of the credit to chance. O. S.

PROGRESS IN THE ENGLISH CASE.

The question of investigating Judge English for the purpose of impeachment proceedings has reached the Judiciary Committee of the House. Four petitions for a congressional investigation embodying sworn affidavits with regard to improprieties on the part of Judge English were received by Speaker Gillet, and immediately referred to the Judiciary Committee.

This action of Speaker Gillett in connection with the affidavits ought to assure an investigation. If the House Rules Committee does not put the Hawes resolution before the House after the hearing on Monday, the Judiciary Committee can ask for authority to investigate. We do not see how either the Judiciary Committee, the Rules Committee or the House can refuse to act in the light of the petitions and the sworn charges.

The Post-Dispatch believed that the evidence which came into its hands and was submitted was sufficient upon which to base an investigation. We may go further and say that it made an investigation necessary in order to clear up the conditions existing in Judge English's court. The petitions with affidavits, however, clinch the matter. They are definite and to the point, and they demonstrate beyond question the duty of the House to authorize and order a thorough investigation.

The House at this session should take steps to have the investigation made by a subcommittee so that the report will be ready for submission at the opening session of the new Congress.

JUDGE FARIS AND BOONVILLE.

Federal Judge Faris, in declining to sentence two youths to the reformatory at Boonville Tuesday, established a precedent that it would be well for other Judges, of city and State as well as Federal courts, to follow, until changes at that institution have been made.

Judge Faris, in sentencing the defendants, one of whom was 15 and the other 17 years old, to the National Training School for Boys at Washington, said he was doing it because he had heard that the "so-called reform school in this State trains boys for a career of criminality, and not for the better things of life."

Recent investigations disclosed that adult criminals, some of the most vicious type, are allowed to mingle with child inmates of the reformatory at Boonville, and that the institution lacked adequate provisions for segregation of youth and adults, or of young incorrigibles and mature criminals.

Until changes are made at the reformatory the courts of the State would be wise in selecting some institution for youthful delinquents where they might be properly trained to lead useful lives.

OUR DYING STATES.

Are you a Missourian? A Kansan? A Texan? An Oklahoman? You may, as a resident of any one of those states, imagine that the State you live in is your own home State. You are wrong. You are simply mumbling an old superstition. The states are dead. State love is buried. State lines, yesterday the bulwarks of pride, are but dim, meaningless traceries.

This is the unhappy tale told us by a writer in the New Republic in a discussion of "The Plea for States Rights." An ingenious explanation is submitted. We have mechanically swept away from the old order. Distinctive traits, customs, habits of living, modes of thinking, have all disappeared. California and New York wear the same clothes, read the same papers, see the same "movies." Distance has been annihilated. We are all in the same boat. And we have got to steer our course by the same compass, yes, by the same pilot. That pilot is Uncle Sam—in other words, the Federal Government.

There are reservations to this dogma. There are some affairs which may yet be best managed and directed locally. Education, sanitation, justice, for example, are conceded to be local concerns. But economically we have become so unified that the Federal Government must regulate and control this phase of our lives. Only the machinery of the National Government is equal to the task. And since our hardest and most vital problems are economic we turn to Washington instinctively as the only adequate power. Thus it is that the "national state" is superseding the Federal union.

By way of proof the New Republic writer reminds us that for a period of 42 years—from 1870 to 1912—the Federal Constitution was unchanged. But in eight years, from 1912 to 1920, four amendemtns were adopted. Congress was empowered to levy taxes on incomes. The election of United States Senators by popular vote, instead of by Legislatures. Prohibition. Universal suffrage. And now the child-labor amendment is pending and other changes are in contemplation.

Those statements of fact are, of course, uncontrovertible. There can be no question, either, that we are altering the structure and recasting the character of our Government. Though we still pay lip reverence to the founding fathers we are in practice flouting their injunctions. We are setting up a Government that to them was anathema. Have we improved much on their plans as far as we have gone? Do the results of our experiments warrant us in going further on this course?

An answer may be found in the address of ex-Senator Beveridge of Indiana at a dinner the other night commemorating the anniversary of John Marshall's appointment as Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court.

"We boast that ours is the land of liberty, yet the American people are by law forbidden to do more things and by law ordered to do more things than was the case in Russia under the Czar or in Turkey under the Sultan."

Again: "The Sermon on the Mount is the final word in moral duty and noble living, yet there is not a line of it that can be put into human law with a policeman behind it. But the preacher, if he is on the job, can put into the souls of men that which legislators cannot. The church cannot abdicate its mission and assume the task of the state without ruining both."

Observing that "excess legislation is a basic cause of lawlessness," Mr. Beveridge declared that "we must get rid of this abnormal state of mind, overthrow the idolatry of legislation, recover from the debauch in which we have been reveling." If we fail the penalty will be a "people strangled by autocratic regulations, surrendering our liberties and making ourselves the slaves, rather than the masters, of the state."

It is not much of a trick for a smug sociological trifler to kill off the states by mechanical evolution and to stigmatize the plea for states' rights as a selfish, futile, laissez-faire cry. But there should be no misunderstanding as to the price we shall pay for the destruction of the states. The price will be the destruction of individual liberty.

BAKER ON POLITICS AND TAXES.

Gov. Baker's first speech in St. Louis since taking the oath of office was keyed on a high plane. He let it be known that the kind of politics he stands for is a politics of service and laid down the rule that "he profits most who serves best." St. Louis can hope for no more than that the new Governor's appointments to the Police and Election Boards will be guided by this principle.

Regarding taxes the Governor admitted that "we have enough money coming into the coffers to run the State if we could only stop the leaks and put the money where it belongs." Another difficulty of State finance, he pointed out, was tax dodging by men of wealth who will not make honest returns on their hidden holdings.

It is well, indeed, that the Governor is possessed of a full appreciation of the difficulties of assessment and distribution of taxes. He is in a powerful position to influence the remedying of the system. Consolidation of the departments, boards and bureaus of the State and elimination of unnecessary offices is the answer on the one hand and an equitable system of taxation, easy of assessment and collection and encouraging to thrift and enterprise rather than to speculation and tax dodging is the answer on the other hand.

St. Louis, hitherto a victim of underrepresentation in the Assembly and of inequality in tax assessments, would gladly co-operate in any movement toward scientific taxation.

The farming industry will prosper most if land is made the basis of taxation and if farmers are not penalized for the improvements produced by their thrift and enterprise. Likewise, enterprise and home building would be encouraged in the city if building sites and not improvements were made the basis of taxation. If property which cannot be concealed is taxed there will be no evasion of taxes. The State's present system of taxation is a political patchwork that fosters inequity of assessment, tax dodging and speculation.

AVERT A TIMBER FAMINE.

A timber famine would be a disastrous thing in this country, where the uses of wood are myriad, yet that is the direction in which we are traveling. It is pointed out by Frederick Boyd Stevenson in the Brooklyn Daily Eagle that our forests are being depleted at the rate of 25,000,000,000 cubic feet annually, while the growth of our forests is only 6,000,000,000 cubic feet annually. The problem is stated as simply as that, yet its correction is a far more complex affair.

Largely as a result of the constant warning of a few voices, such as that of Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Tree Association, the forestry movement in the United States is under way. But the success of the movement is not assured until the people and the state governments are thoroughly alive to its vital importance.

More than 157,000,000 acres have been set aside by the Federal Government as national forest land, but this acreage is not well distributed. Of the virgin timber remaining in this country, 75 per cent is found in the Rocky Mountains and in the Pacific states. That region also contains 60 per cent of all the timber. Most of the remainder is in the South. It is hardly necessary to cite the tremendous cost of hauling lumber from these sections to the thickly populated districts of the East and North, which are now practically denuded of forests.

In addition to the commercial drain on timber resources, the losses by fire are tremendous. Last year timber valued at half a billion dollars went up in idle smoke, caused largely by the carelessness of campers. A waste even less excusable is the presence of 81,000,000 acres suitable for no other purpose than forest growth, much of which is lying fallow and unproductive.

It is plain that we must not only protect forests already standing but we must create new ones. Originally there were 822,000,000 acres of forests in this country. This splendid treasure has been reduced to 138,000,000 acres of virgin forest; there are besides 250,000,000 acres of second-growth timber, or young trees, much of which is of no immediate commercial value. Against the dwindling supply of timber is such a demand as has never been known before. Only by a nation-wide forestry campaign, in which the states co-operate with the existing forestry machinery of the Federal Government, can adequate future supplies of timber be assured.

WHY GEORGIA RE-ELECTS UPSHAW.

William David Upshaw, Georgia "dry" Congressman, sometimes called "Earnest Willie," from the title of his book, which has run into 11 editions, carried every county in his district at the recent election. He has been the toweringest tower of strength to the prohibition cause since early manhood, especially in the State he represents.

With these facts in mind, the Atlanta Constitution finds that, in Upshaw's own district, "Whisky was never more abundant in the days of the saloon. Anybody * * * can procure it almost as easily as ordering a consignment of ginger ale from a grocery. * * * The drawing rooms of the wealthy, the one-for-all rooms of the hovels, have become the saloons." And wonder is expressed that, with such a constituency, Upshaw, arch-enemy of the Demon Rum, goes back to Washington. Why do not the Georgia "wets" send someone there who would really represent them?

The reason should not be hard to guess. The best place for your enemy is some locality at a considerable distance away, where he will be kept busy and have little opportunity for interfering with you. Upshaw is a member of three House committees—on the liquor traffic, on labor and on pensions. In the Committee on Liquor Traffic his influence could easily be offset by that of Berger, the Wisconsin Socialist. And when at work with the Labor or Pension committees, he would have no time for prohibition activities.

It does look as if "Earnest Willie," if the Atlanta Constitution's findings truly present Georgia conditions, is more needed at home than in Washington.

Sir: As one recently become aware of "Krazy Kat," I write to ask the following questions, not in levity but in quest of information purely:

When did Ignatz throw the first brick? Perhaps the date is lost in the mists of antiquity, but at least some legend must survive as to the original cause of such a deep-rooted feud. Doubtless this will throw some light on the sad resignation of the melancholy cat—a noble quality not usually associated with that species.

I am sure there must be others whose acquaintance with this classic is comparatively recent who, like myself, would be grateful for a little light.

Sir: As Aesop's fly crawling over the surface of a temple column remarked its crude roughness, so do I pause to point with pain to "These kind of men" in your (otherwise) flawless editorial; "Mr. Porter's Performance."

I confess the recent scandal regarding umlautery in your columns left me quite cold; at most it was a minor infraction, but this is a weighty matter. It goes to the very roots of grammar—that poor withered tree. In the scant shade of its now bare branches, only the most cold-blooded of critical flies can find comfort any more.

But how we will buzz around this latest choice morsel of decaying speech!

Sir: I thought to tell about the thing in rime,
But puzzles will not let me spare the time.

Anyhow—Horizontal 1, of four letters, was defined as "an incentive to affection." The two joining vertical words started with L and O, so I put down LOVE as the word. Next, wandering about at random, as puzzle-solvers do, I came to horizontal 10, defined as "a result of affection." This word I found to be MARRIAGE. Next I hit on vertical 17, defined as "always preceded by horizontal 10 and generally followed by horizontal 1." The word turned out to be DIVORCE. This perplexed me exceedingly, because it seemed to put the major domo at the tail end of the procession. But—

Definition becoming more acute.
I found the leading word, not LOVE, but
LOOT. N. J. W.

PEOPLE I'D LIKE TO KILL.

The pest who reads your newspaper in the street car.

The auto salesman who says "The first cost is practically the last."

The "big boys" that obstruct my view at the movies.

The fellow who, after making a date, fails to show up, and your entire evening is ruined.

The man who gives me his seat and then gets off at the next block.

The saleslady who sells me an expensive dress. After assuring me it is the only one of its kind, I discover my worst enemy wearing one just like it.

As these are enough murders for one evening, I will now close. INCOGNITO.

Sir James Crichton-Brown recently entertained the members of the British Phrenological Society at a lecture in which he referred to the consequences of the diminished brain. He drew attention, in the first place, to the difference in the brain of the wild duck and that of the domestic duck. The latter, he said, had been dragged down by domestication to a lower mental level, and its brain was considerably smaller than that of the wild duck, which had continued to make active use of its brain. "There is abundant evidence," continued Sir James, "that the dome of thought in man may deteriorate, or crumble, if left tenantless or partially occupied. Men, like ducks, may be fed, housed, fenced about, and exempted from active participation in the struggle for existence and then, unless they have resolution to 'scorn delights and live laborious days' they will, like ducks, decline in mental capacity." Prof. Laycock, said Sir James, used to divide all idiots into two groups—"poverty idots," who could be traced to want and degradation through many generations; and "luxury idiots," who could be traced to excessive high living and indolence through a long line of ancestry.

Presumably the point at issue between some of our contributors as to whether or not poetry can be written without liquor was raised by the statement of Henry Arthur Jones. He said there was no such thing as literary inspiration without liquor, and one gathered from his observations that nothing can be hoped for in the United States so long as we have prohibition. Mr. Jones is an eminent British dramatist, but we recall that there is another even more eminent dramatist over there who does not thing so at all. He is George Bernard Shaw. Mr. Shaw has said that he does not drink liquor and has never felt that he needed it to inspire him. He claims to get the same kick out of going to church that some men get out of intoxicants, and certainly the Shaw product is such as to command respect for this opinion. Our warring contributors might rest the issue upon the thought that the two beliefs are perhaps not to be reconciled.

EX-SERVICE MAN WINS AGAIN.

From the New Orleans Times-Picayune.

WORD comes from Minneapolis of ingenious ex-service man's ingenuity, as his own lawyer, against the best Government lawyers. When he entered army he was classed as a "common laborer." Wounded during the war, he became eligible for vocational training and elected to study law. After two years, the war goes, an attempt was made to drop him from the beneficiary rolls. He resisted on the ground that he had not completed his vocational training, and won his point. Graduated in the law, he filed a suit against the Government on the ground that his war-time injuries rendered him practically incapable of resuming his pre-war occupation as common laborer. This suit has just been decided in his favor and the judgment carries an award of $12,000. In his case the country has proven its gratitude—to a degree that probably astonishes its own Government officials.

FIRST WOMAN GOVERNOR.

From the Philadelphia Bulletin.

WOMAN took her place for the first time yesterday as the Chief Executive of a sovereign State, when Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross was inaugurated Governor of Wyoming with the simplest possible ceremony. Not even the legendary lack of humor in Thomas Jefferson's inaugural addresses presidency was free from parade or ostentation of any kind. Citizens without distinction of sex will appreciate the tenderness and kindliness of the widow's avoidance of display in assuming the high office to which her husband had been elected as the successor to her dead husband. Victory of Mrs. Ross at the polls was notable from the fact that Wyoming otherwise went strongly Republican but voted by a substantial majority for a woman who headed the Democratic state ticket. Her election was more of a personal tribute than the election of "Ma" Ferguson after a bitter factional fight between the wings of the Democratic party in Texas.

SENSITIVE as they are to every note of courtesy, the Japanese must have been double satisfaction in the generous gift of Mr. John D. Rockefeller Jr. to the Imperial University of Tokio. His contribution of 4,000,000 yen will speed the restoration of the buildings and the library which the earthquake destroyed, an undertaking of the first importance to education in Japan. This material assistance from any source would be highly grateful; coming as it does from an American friend, it has a value that will value not to be computed in terms of yen. Even in the heat of irritation over the immigration episode, the Japanese people could not forget the eager response of the people of the United States to Japan's need in the hour of her calamity. There has been no change in the American spirit of friendliness. If the Japanese had been dull instead of very keen perceptions they could still recognize in Mr. Rockefeller's splendid gift a continuity of sympathy with Japan's courage and aspiration.

The Sorry Tragedy Of Technical Justice

Jordan and Meininger Cases.

Spencer Jordan, a negro, shot and killed City Detective Finn April 20, 1922, when Finn and other plain-clothes policemen tried to search Jordan and a companion for concealed weapons. He fled, and was arrested in New Orleans. His identity, and the fact that he fired the fatal shot, were not in question, and his defense was that he did not know the men were policemen, though there was testimony that he was told so. A jury in April, 1922, assessed the death penalty for Jordan. He appealed, and Division 2 of the Supreme Court last June affirmed the death sentence. There was a dissenting vote in Division 2, and this made it possible for the case to be transferred to the court en banc, which last month reversed and remanded the case. "A faulty instruction on flight" was the first of four reasons given for the reversal.

This action foreshadowed the decision which the court reached Jan. 15 in reversing and remanding the first of three convictions of Cashier Meininger.

Judge Breuer, instructing the first Meininger jury at Union, used a paragraph as to flight which was prepared by Circuit Attorney Sidener's office. This instruction did not use the term "presumption of guilt." It said:

"Flight of the defendant is a circumstance to be taken into consideration in connection with all the other facts and circumstances in evidence, and if the jury find and believe from the evidence that the defendant, after the commission of the crime alleged in the indictment, fled from his usual place of abode and employment for the purpose of avoiding arrest and trial for said offense, they may take this fact into consideration in determining his guilt or innocence."

This instruction, in its words, "after the commission of the crime alleged," was held by the court to be an assumption that Meininger committed the crime. The argument of the Attorney-General, urging that the intent of the paragraph be taken as a whole, did not change this conclusion of the court.

Meininger was convicted in two other cases, and is still under prison sentences amounting to 8 years. He has appealed from the two later convictions, and if they are reversed, it will not be on the same ground, as there was no instruction as to flight given in the later cases. Except for a few days in jail spent by Donald W. Ross, who looted the Night and Day Bank after Meininger got through with it, and who is under two 5-year sentences and has appealed, no one has yet been confined for the wrecking of the Night and Day Bank, which was closed more than 3 years ago with a loss of $1,000,000.

More Reversals on Instructions.

For the murder of Andrew Deck, informer against prohibition law violators in Jefferson County, south of St. Louis, in February, 1921, four men were convicted. James Seward, the actual slayer, Ernest Hayes and Eugene Hayes were sentenced to death and William Hayes to life imprisonment. The Supreme Court reversed and remanded the three Hayes convictions, and affirmed only that of Seward, whose sentence was commuted to life imprisonment by Hiram Lloyd, acting Governor.

Ground for the three Hayes reversals was found by the Supreme Court in the instructions. The three were tried separately. Eugene Hayes in Jefferson County, and Ernest and William in Iron County. In Eugene's case, the word "deliberately" was omitted from one paragraph of the instructions and this was held to be reversible error, though a previous paragraph of the instructions had stated that the jury could not convict unless it found that the act was deliberate. The omission of the word was not noticed by Hayes' counsel, and was first noticed in the Attorney-General's office. The Supreme Court also found that the instructions in Eugene's and Ernest's cases should have contained "converse" instructions, directing the jury to acquit them under certain circumstances.

The attorney appointed by the Attorney-General as special prosecutor in the Hayes cases, R. E. Kleinschmidt of Hillsboro, withdrew from the case after the reversals, declaring that he was unable to understand the decisions, and that he would have little hope, in another trial, of avoiding what the Supreme Court might hold to be error.

The Creed brothers, Robert and Thomas, were sentenced to life imprisonment in 1921 by a St. Louis jury for the murder of Patrolman Geisler, but the Supreme Court found that the court had erred in instructions as to the right of self-defense, and that improper testimony had been admitted. The Circuit Attorney's office was reduced to the necessity of bargaining with the pair, and they pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree and accepted sentences which, after deducting time they had been in jail, left them seven and four years to serve.

Following the new precedent of the Jordan decision, the Supreme Court a few weeks ago reversed and remanded the conviction of Frank Burns, whom a St. Louis jury had sentenced to two years' imprisonment for picking pockets. The court's reference to the fact of Burns' flight was declared by the court "obnoxious."

A decision which turned on a word was that rendered by the Supreme Court last year, in reversing the conviction of William Waller of Christian County, for felonious wounding. The court instructed the jury, "If you find that any witness has willfully sworn falsely to any material fact, you should reject any or all such witness' testimony."

If the trial Judge, instead of saying "should," had said "may," the Supreme Court says it would have approved.

An instruction that flight raises a presumption of guilt caused the reversal of the conviction of Nicholas Campbell of Carter County, against whom a jury assessed the death penalty for murder. The instruction, so the Supreme Court held, took from the jury the question of Campbell's sanity, which was at issue.

In two recent cases, the Supreme Court remanded convictions because it was not shown that allocution had been accorded. Allocution is the familiar ceremony in which the convicted man is asked whether he has anything to say why sentence should not be passed on him. A Boone County prisoner, convicted of grand larceny, and a Howell County bigamist, obtained delay by this oversight of the trial Judge, or of the court clerk.

Roy Connor of Randolph County was convicted of murder and sentenced to 25 years' imprisonment. His attorney did not ask, in the trial, that the Judge instruct the jury as to manslaughter, but the Supreme Court held that the Judge should have done so anyway, and remanded the case.

as that in the Swarens case, the Judge's instruction having been that possession of stolen property afforded a presumption of guilt. Mary L. Andrews, convicted in Pettis County of uttering a forged check, obtained a reversal of her two-year sentence on the same ground. So did Lee Bennett of Atchison County, sentenced for two years for grand larceny. So did John Barker of Greene County, sentenced for two years for larceny, and Edward Linders of St. Louis, convicted of grand larceny.

John Craft of St. Francois County, fined $300 for selling liquor, got a reversal because the Judge instructed the jury, in considering Craft's testimony in his own defense, to take into account his interest in the matter. The Supreme Court has held, since the Finkelstein case in 1917, that the defendant must not be "singled out" for comment in this manner.

Defects in the wording of indictments or informations have been a frequent ground of reversals.

Omission of legal verbiage, in its most repetitious form, gave a reversal to Bernard Whalen of Franklin County, convicted of burglary and sentenced for 20 years. The indictment said that Whalen broke into a bank by smashing a window, but it did not say that he "did feloniously and burglariously" break in. Therefore, the Supreme Court held, it did not constitute a charge of burglary, though the indictment went on to say that he entered "with the intent unlawfully, feloniously and burglariously to take, steal and carry away money."

Sherill Jamerson was convicted in New Madrid County of the murder of L. H. Brannon, and was sentenced to life imprisonment. Brannon died the day after being shot, and the information on which Jamerson was tried stated that Jamerson on Sept. 14, 1921, inflicted on Brannon three mortal wounds, "of which mortal wounds the said Brannon then and there did languish, and languishing did live until the 15th day of September, 1921, in the County of Shelby and State of Tennessee, he did die."

"The language of the information," the Supreme Court said in reversing this case, "fails to allege that Brannon died from the effect of the wounds within a year and a day."

"Prejudicial" remarks of Judge or prosecutor, figure in other interesting reversals.

Because the Prosecuting Attorney called him "a dirty low-down hound and scoundrel," Doyle Dixon of Moniteau County got a reversal of his three-year sentence for grand larceny.

"I'm as satisfied that this defendant killed the deceased," said the Prosecutor in the trial of W. A. Cole of Bollinger County for murder, "as I am that I am standing before you." For that remark, Cole's life imprisonment conviction was remanded.

In the murder trial of Roy Connor of Randolph County, previously mentioned, an additional reason for reversal was furnished by the Prosecutor's plea to the jury to "vindicate the blood" of the deceased.

In his plea which convicted Louis Thompson of robbery, a Jackson County Prosecutor argued that the jury, if it acquitted Thompson, would be declaring the prosecuting witness, a woman, guilty of perjury. This was a ground for reversal of Thomson's seven-year sentence.

Harry Taylor, on trial for robbery in Kansas City, offered his army discharge as a certificate of character. "There never was a document better calculated to discharge a guilty man than that one," Judge Porterfield remarked. The Supreme Court reversed and remanded Taylor's 50-year sentence.

All the decisions mentioned have been rendered within the past three years.

As a natural effect of the Supreme Court's rulings, local courts have dismissed cases on grounds which would ordinarily appear trivial. One such case was the discharge of two men, in the Court of Criminal Correction here last week, because, in a joint charge against them of violating the prohibition law, the word "his" was used instead of "their." In the other division of the same court, two days later, a man charged with common assault was freed, because the judge held that the charge should have been assault and battery.

A more important case decided on similar grounds was that of John Neary, convicted of the murder of a policeman, and granted a new trial by Circuit Judge Hamilton, because a stenographer had written "without" instead of "with" in transcribing the court's instructions.

Circuit Judge Frey, newly assigned to one of the criminal divisions of the Circuit Court here, wrote to the Attorney-General, as told several days ago, asking that forms of instructions, drawn so as to conform to the Supreme Court's latest decisions, be furnished to him.

Attorney-General Otto has asked one of his assistants to see what can be done toward meeting this request. "But this office cannot prepare instructions to fit every case," he said in speaking of the matter. "Every case has its own set of circumstances, which the court has to consider in framing instructions. What can be done, and what I shall do, is to send to every prosecuting attorney immediate notice of any new ruling of the Supreme Court which needs to be taken into account in preparing indictments or information or suggesting instructions to the trial courts.

"I shall ask the Legislature to amend the law so as to provide not be a ground for reversals, unless the defense made objection or that defects in instructions shall called attention to the defect at the time. Also, that the failure of allocution shall not be a ground for remanding, unless the defense has requested allocution at the time. Those two changes would obviate a good many reversals, which now come from oversights."

George W. Crowder, Assistant Attorney-General, added his opinion that a change was needed in the law which now allows one year to persons convicted of felonies to perfect appeals. A much shorter time would meet all the demands of justice, he believes.

Crowder related one instance in which the Supreme Court was persuaded to ignore a technical error, although there were precedents which might have given countenance to a reversal.

John Lee, a negro convict in the penitentiary, stabbed a fellow convict of his own race to death in October, 1922, and was sentenced by a Cole County jury to be hanged. It was found that the name of the Prosecuting Attorney, and the words "Prosecuting Attorney aforesaid, upon his oath aforesaid," had been omitted at one place in the indictment, where, under the regular form, they should occur.

"Cases had been reversed before because of the omission of those words, or corresponding words, 'grand jurors aforesaid,'" Crowder said. "Gov. Hadley, when he was Attorney-General, tried to get the Supreme Court to take a different view of this matter, but the court held to the former rulings. When the Lee case was heard, we argued this matter again, and the Supreme Court affirmed Lee's sentence. The death sentence was commuted by executive action to life imprisonment."

In the argument prepared by Crowder in the Lee case, one of the considerations urged is that "the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life." In another part of the argument, it is urged that a reversal would be a case of "the administration of criminal justice breaking upon the rocks of naked technicality."

There have been many such cases, it seems to one who looks over the record.

TWO MEN ARE SENTENCED ON STOLEN GOODS CHARGE

Wife of One Gets Six Months in County Jail—Two Negroes Also Guilty.

Leo Lefkowitz, a merchant at 1122 Franklin avenue, and Harry Seiner, his clerk, 2827 Dickson street, each were sentenced to two years in the Federal penitentiary by Federal Judge Davis yesterday, following their convictions last Tuesday by a jury of possessing property stolen from the mails.

As has been told, Lefkowitz Seiner, the former's wife, and two negroes, were arrested last spring when Postoffice Inspectors traced the contents of numerous parcel post packages stolen form Progress Station, in the wholesale district, to Lefkowitz's store. One of the negroes confessed and blamed Mrs Lefkowitz. She has pleaded guilty, and yesterday Judge Davis sentenced her to six months in the county jail at St. Charles.

The two negroes will be sentenced next Saturday.

VETERAN COUNTERFEITER IS GIVEN THREE-YEAR SENTENCE

"Jimmie" Nolan Has Spent More Than 20 of His 72 Years in Federal Prisons.

"Jimmie" Nolan, veteran counterfeiter, of whose 72 years more than 20 have been spent in Federal prisons, was sentenced to three years in the Federal penitentiary at Leavenworth by Federal Judge Davis yesterday, on his plea of guilty of counterfeiting.

He was arrested three months ago in a downtown hotel, a complete outfit for raising bills being found in his possession. His arrest served to renew his acquaintance with Steve Connell, head of the local United States Secret Service Bureau, who first arrested him 25 years ago in New York City. Twice subsequently Connell arrested him, always for counterfeiting, which resulted in prison sentences.

Nolan's boast is that he never stole from an individual—only from the Government.

Is Your Blood Starving For Want of Iron?

Modern Methods of Cooking and Living Have Made an Alarming Increase in Iron Deficiency in the Blood of American Men and Women.

Why Nuxated Iron So Quickly Helps Build Up Weak, Nervous, Run-Down Folks. Millions of People Take It to Increase Their Strength, Power, Energy and Endurance.

Is your blood starving for want of sufficient iron? If you were to go without eating until you became weak, thin and emaciated, you could not do a more serious harm to yourself than when you let your blood literally starve for want of iron—iron that gives it strength and power to change food into living tissue.

Modern methods of cooking and the rapid pace at which people of this country live has made such an alarming increase in iron deficiency in the blood of American men and women that there is a surprisingly large number of people who lack iron in the blood, and who never suspect the cause of their weak, nervous run-down state. Lack of sufficient iron in the blood has ruined many a man's nerves and utterly robbed him of that virile force and stamina which are so necessary to success and power in every walk of life.

The best thing for those who feel the need of a strength and blood-builder is to get a physician's prescription for organic iron—Nuxated Iron—or if you don't want to go to this trouble, then purchase only Nuxated Iron in its original package and see that this particular name (Nuxated Iron) appears on the package.

NUXATED IRON often increases the bodily and mental vigor of weak, tired, wornout, nervous people in two weeks' time. It's like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. You can eat it if you wish. It will not blacken or injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach—it is entirely different from ordinary metallic iron which people usually take and which is made merely by the action of strong acids on small pieces of iron.

Beware of substitutes. Look for the word "NUXATED" on every package and the letters N. I. on every tablet. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain perfectly satisfactory results. At all druggists.

NUXATED IRON ENRICHES THE BLOOD-GIVES YOU NEW STRENGTH AND ENERGY

WORKERS' COUNCILS SHOW BIG GROWTH

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—More than 800 workers' councils or employes' representation plans, covering more than a million workmen, are today in operation in the United States, says the National Industrial Conference Board. This has resulted from a practically continuous and rapid increase since 1917. During the last five years the number of councils rose from 225 in 1919, to 725 in 1922 and 814 in 1924 and the membership from 391,000 in 1919, to 690,000 in 1922 and to 1,177,000 in 1924.

Massachusetts leads in the number of workers' councils within her borders, increasing from 11 in 1919 to 31 in 1922 and to 105 in 1924. Other states having more than 10 councils in 1924 are New York, with 60; Washington, 45; Illinois, 39; Ohio, 30; Pennsylvania, 29; Connecticut, 28; California, 27; New Jersey, 19; Maryland, 18; Minnesota, 13, and Wisconsin, 11.

Considered by industries, the metal trades account for almost exactly one-third of all the workers' councils; lumber for about one-fifth, and the printing trades for about one-seventh. A conspicuously large decrease since 1922 in mining is due to the ending by the Federal Government of its insistence on workers' councils during the functioning of the Fuel Administration. Another large decrease, in lumber, is due to the amalgamation or cessation of work by many of the employe associations when the Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen was organized.

Nearly two-thirds of the 1,177,000 employes who are governed by workers' council plans are grouped in 11 industrial establishments, employing 15,000 or more persons, and more than one-tenth more are in nine establishments employing from 10,000 to 15,000. Workers' councils in establishments employing less than 200 men are comparatively few. This seems to be because the contact between employer and employe in small establishments makes councils unnecessary.

Thirty-five employers who once operated about 50 workers' councils, now discontinued, ascribe the breaking up of one-third of them to the business depression of 1920-1921, which so reduced the number of employes as to make the council of little use; of another third to lack of interest due to various causes, among which was that the close relations between employer and employes made them really unnecessary; and, of the other third, about a half to friction and the rest to several minor causes.

WAR HERO'S GOLDEN WEDDING

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Jan. 24.—The celebration of the golden wedding of Herr and Frau Bernard Bossman at Wesel this month recalls one of the most thrilling episodes in the Franco-Prussian war. Bossman, internationally famous as "the trumpeter of Vionville" in the battle of Vionville-Mars-La-Tour, on Aug. 16, 1870, stood in the midst of the heaviest firing, unconcernedly blowing the signal for attack. His coolness and heroism gave heart to his comrades, and they carried the day in one of the heaviest encounters of the entire war.

Bossman's deed inspired the German poet Lilliencron to apostrophize him in his poem, "Der Trompeter Von Vionville."

DEFINITE BUILDING PROGRAM FOR MISSOURI U. IS URGED

University Board of Visitors Asks Gov. Baker to Make Recommendation to Legislature.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Jan. 24.—Consideration of a definite and permanent building program for the University of Missouri is urged in the biennial report of the Board of Visitors for the university to Gov. Baker for recommendaton to the present General Assembly. "As it appears to us," the report states, "one of the great mistakes made in the past is that there has not been a definite program for the erection of needed buildings. In the nature of things, that program could not be completed in a year or two, and wisely so, but must be extended throughout a number of years. A very comprehensive program, therefore, should be outlined and every effort made to carry it out according to the greatest needs from year to year."

The chief building need at this time, the report continues, is an auditorium and the immediate erection of such a structure is urged. The enlargement of the State Library at the university also was set forth as a pressing need at this time, as well as an appropriation for equipping the school of medicine at the university.

In order that students of moderate means may have good lving quarters at reasonable rates, the report recommends that "some scheme be put on foot by which large dormitories, carefully supervised, and, in a general way, supervised by university authority, should be built."

PROTESTS IN JAPAN AGAINST MILITARY TRAINING IN SCHOOLS

Students and Educators Join in Opposition to "Copying of American Plan."

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Dec. 24.—The proposed institution of military training in the middle and higher technical schools has aroused violent opposition among students, many intellectual societies and in the bulk of the native press. Student bodies have sent deputations to the War Department to register their objection to the plan, and a number of educators have made public addresses or contributed articles to the newspapers against it.

The supporters of the plan maintain that it has no essential military objective, but is intended as a substitute for sports and to invigorate the youthful mind as well as body. "We have studied how the American authorities are, through military discipline, trying to keep the spirit of the nation vigorous, steady and energetic," said Gen. Baron Tanaka, former Minister of War, "and we have found their system so clever that we intend to copy it. To impute any intention to us of making preparations for war is absurd."

The Easiest Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely, and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

"That Half Sick Half Well Feeling"

THERE is scarcely a person who doesn't sometime experience it. Not ill enough to be in bed—and yet not well enough to be one's normal self.

The trouble frequently is constipation. Even though the bowels seem to move normally, some collection of poisonous waste matter may adhere for days or weeks somewhere in the intestinal tract. And the result is that glum, irritable, out of sorts feeling that you can't explain.

Old-fashioned, over-night cathartics are not the thing for such a condition. What you need is a quick, thorough cleansing with safe, beneficial, non-griping Pluto Water. In 30 minutes to two hours, Pluto starts its work—and you soon become your normal self again.

Get a bottle of Pluto Water today. Physicians prescribe it, druggists sell it and it is bottled at French Lick Springs, Indiana.

INDICTMENT AGAINST SON IS DISMISSED

Younger Man Now Operating Plant, Which Is Fined $750, but the Execution Is Stayed.

Jacob M. Fishback, former president of the Fishback Brewing Co. of St. Charles, in whose brewery 180 barrels of real beer was discovered by a prohibition agent on Dec. 19, 1923, pleaded guilty to violating the Volstead act before Federal Judge Faris, yesterday, and was fined $1500.

He was charged with the manufacture and possession of beer of illegal content. A similar charge against his son, John Fishback, who now operates the brewery, was dismissed on the Government's explanation that there was no evidence he was connected with the making of the beer or was aware of its presence. A similar execution of $750 against the brewery was stayed.

Lost Beverage License.

Prohibition Agent Gibson discovered the beer on a search warrant obtained after he had made purchases of the finished product in St. Charles. As a result, the Fishback company lost its permit to make cereal beverage by dealcoholizing beer. Because of this loss the brewery was unable to dealcoholize the beer and it remained in the basement.

About this time, former State Representative Weinrich of St. Charles County made a statement to the Post-Dispatch that a "Mr. Scott" of Springfield, Mo., had visited him, at the instance of a friend, and later, through Weinrich, was introduced to Fishback. Weinrich asserted that Scott, by inuendo, posed as a prohibition agent and ordered the beer removed.

Later, Weinrich said, he heard the man proposed to Fishback that they move out the beer and sell it for $20 a barrel, or $3600. Scott to get $1000. This version was not substantiated by Fishback, who said at the time, however, that he had been approached from several sources by persons who wanted to "buy" the beer.

Prohibition agents later took charge of the product and the investigation into Weinrich's charges was dropped.

Albert Schorr Fined $1500 on Plea of Guilty to Beer Charge.

Albert Schorr, vice president of the Schorr-Kolkschneider Brewing Co., yesterday was fined $1500 by Federal Judge Davis on his plea of guilty to the charges of manufacture, possession and transportation of real beer. His plea of guilty followed that of five other officers of the company who were fined a total of $9000 by Judge Davis 10 days ago. At that time Schorr was ill.

Joseph M. Cody in Collision With Dry Agents Again.

Joseph M. Cody, who with his partner, Irvin Lee, came into frequent collision with the prohibition authorities in the operation of a bar in the Central National Bank Building, is again under charge of violating the Volstead Act.

Cody, who with Lee served a short jail sentence last year for violation of the prohibition law, was arrested Friday evening, following a raid on a saloon at 4944 Delmar boulevard, of which it is alleged he is the proprietor, in which the agents claim they found a quantity of beer, whisky and gin. With Cody they arrested Ollie Hiller, the bartender. Cody made no statement as to the saloon ownership, but the agents carried away with them samples of the cash register receipts, bearing the name "Cody."

Cody and Lee were sentenced to six months in the Warren County jail by Federal Judge Davis last year. After serving two months Lee was released on account of the serious illness of his wife. Cody was released along with him.

Seek Owner of Wrecked Auto.

An Essex coach was wrecked and abandoned near Ramsey, Ill., two weeks ago and Dr. E. W. Farthing, a druggist there, is making an effort to find the owner of the car who may be a St. Louisan. The coach is a four-cylinder model. Serial No. 524,213 and Engine No. 115,240. At the time it was abandoned the machine bore an Ohio license but investigation showed such a model was not registered in Ohio.

Has Brought Relief to Thousands of Sufferers.

And what it has done for others it will do for you. Don't continue to suffer with rheumatism, neuralgia, stiff and sore muscles, cold in the chest, croup, coughs and kindred aches and pains. Ask your druggist for a bottle of Miller's Antiseptic Oil (known as Snake Oil), use according to directions and know what it means to be free of pain.

This great oil is said to be the most powerful penetrating relieving remedy on the market. Refuse imitations, nothing like it. At leading druggists.

"China Rose" Is Just Another Oriental Operetta

By HEYWOOD BROUN,
Drama Critic of the New York World.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.

THERE have been times during the last two or three theatrical seasons when the prevalent type of musical entertainment seemed a little tiresome. I became convinced that the fault lay with the revue form. And, since I had seen nothing of the sort for a long time, I began to yearn for comic opera, old style. Now I am back again with the moderns. I was at the first night of "China Rose," Monday evening at the Martin Beck Theater. This was announced as an "Oriental operetta," written by Harry L. Cort and George E. Stoddard, with music by A. Baldwin Sloane.

Once I stated in my folly that even a poor plot was better than none at all. It isn't so. After an act and a half of the story, in which the Prince is disguised as a bandit or a beggarman, the eyes of the spectator begin to ache and his ears to hum with fatigue. In "China Rose" there appear all the old favorites of the Oriental operetta. There are, to be specific, Bang Bang, Sing Sing, Cha Ming, Ro See, Hi and Lo.

Eden's Real Curse.

AND these two, Hi and Lo, are, inevitably, the comedians. To me there is nothing so depressing as comedy which falls short of being comic. The most powerful and poignant tragedy can never plunge me into such depths of misery. The ancient wheezes bring to mind all the pitifulness and insufficiency of man.

"If," said Hi, "I'm decapitated, it will be the first time I have lost my head." And as he said it a touch of tarnish fell upon the sunlight of the world. I could no longer hold to my conception of humanity climbing up hand over hand into a better and braver life. There must have come a curse after Eden. It was, I think, a curse of great power and fearful bitterness, for it was then that all of us were condemned to labor and to suffer pain and, worst of all, to continue to the end of time shackled to feeble jests which will not die.

Very often one can detect the nature of an impending show by merely glancing at the program of the events to be presented. Thus, I knew that I was in for it long before the curtain went up on "China Rose." I had looked at the list of musical numbers and there I found "I Like the Girls," "The Legend of the Rose," "I'm All Alone," "Who Am I Thinking Of?" and "China Rose."

Lionel Barrymore in "The Piker."

Charlot's Revue and "Lollipop" on View At Theaters Tonight

Beatrice Lillie Starred in London Show, and Ada May in Musical Comedy—Julius Tannen at Orpheum — Ethel Barrymore Promised in "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray."

AN entertainment heralded as a new departure is Andre Charlot's Revue, an importation from London, which will make its St. Louis bow tonight at the Shubert-Jefferson. According to advance reports, it makes little pretension to opulence of settings and costumes, but depends on wit, satire and ingenious features.

Of the principals who won New York for a season only Miss Beatrice Lillie remains, but she has been acclaimed as a comedienne of unusual hilarity. The quartet of featured players is completed by Joyce Barbour, Herbert Mundin and Sam B. Hardy, who played here last with Lenore Ulric in "Kiki." A smart, dainty and well-drilled chorus is promised.

Tonight also a musical comedy entitled "Lollipop," a Henry W. Savage production, will be placed on view at the American. The outstanding performer is Ada May, who, under the unabbreviated name of Ada Mae Weeks, was seen here as a dancer in "Listen Lester," and as dancer and singer in "The Clinging Girl." The book of "Lollipop" is by Zelda Sears and Walter De Leon, and the composer is Vincent Youmans, who wrote the score of "No, No, Nanette."

St. Louisan Is Leading Man.

THERE is said to be a dancing unit trained by John Tiller of London. In the cast are Gus C. Mark Smith, Florence Webber, Walter Craig, Leonard Colley, Jr., Long Jr., Marie Stagg, Evelyn Hunnett, Adora Andrews, Daisy Belmore, William C. Gordon, Leonard St. Reo, Rita Townsend and William Bold.

Walter Craig, who has the leading masculine role in "Lollipop," is a St. Louisan, whose family resides at 5358A Ridge avenue. As a youth he organized a juvenile musical comedy company, for which he wrote and produced many entertainments in this city, and played the leads in them. Four years ago, at the age of 19, he went to New York, appeared in vaudeville, and then performed in "Jack and Jill" and "The Greenwich Village Follies."

At the Shubert-Jefferson next week will be shown another installment of the Winter Garden series, "The Passing Show of 1924," and following that, the "Greenwich Village Follies." Sissle and Blake, negro entertainers, will hold forth for a week at the American, beginning next Sunday night. The Market street playhouse announces Irving Berlin's third annual "Music Box Revue" for the week of Feb. 8, and then Ethel Barrymore in a revival of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray."

"Honors Are Even" at Empress.

THE Woodward Players, at the Empress, are undertaking this week a comedy called "Honors Are Even," by Roi Cooper Megrue. It is about a playwright who is an amateur detective, a flirtatious beauty who loses a necklace, and a thief moving in the highest social circles. The principal roles will be played by Selmer Jackson, Hazel Whitmore and Leo Lindhard.

CARLO DUSE, brother of the late Eleonora Duse, famous tragedienne, has been engaged by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Co. to portray the role of Gratus in "Ben Hur," a picturization of Gen. Lew Wallace's novel and stage play which is being produced in Rome under the direction of Fred Niblo. Duse has also been engaged by Rex Ingram to play the part of Fratello Teltoni in "Mare Nostrum," from the novel by Blasco Ibanez.

Charles Ogle and Lillian Leighton became screen husband and wife for the twenty-third time when they assumed the roles of the Sheriff and his spouse in "Contraband," Alan Crosland's newest production for Paramount.

Alma Rubens, who has been featured in a number of successful screen productions during the past year, has been engaged for the role of Paula, an outstanding part, in the production of Franz Molnar's play, "Fashions for Men." With Miss Rubens in this film adaptation are Lewis Stone, Percy Marmont, Raymond Griffith, Eileen Percy and William V. Mong.

Frank Tuttle and the company of players who went to Cuba for the tropical scenes in "A Kiss in the Dark," the picture being filmed with Adolphe Menjou, Lillian Rich and Aileen Pringle in the leading roles, have returned to the Long Island studio to make the interiors. Various "Follies"-Being Featured Along With the Picture Offerings at the Cinema Houses This Week.

"A CAFE IN CAIRO," featuring Priscilla Dean in the leading role, is the attraction on the screen at Loew's State this week. It is a picturization of the novel of the same name by Izola Forrester. Felix Ferdinando and his Havana Orchestra is the stage headline attraction for the week. Other stage features include prologue called "Egyptian Nights," with the Loew's State Ballet Corps and the Arthur Siby Clippinger, baritone.

The photoplay attraction at the Missouri has Bebe Daniels starred in a production of "Miss Bluebeard," and there is also a stage revue known as "The Chicago Follies." "Miss Bluebeard" is the story of an actress, Colette Girard, who walks right into an accidental marriage to a man she has never seen before in her life—and then discovers later that he isn't her husband after all. Colette and Bob Hawley (Kenneth MacKenna), posing as the famous composer, Larry Charters, are stranded together in a small-town railroad station. They are directed to the Mayor's house for shelter and he, mistaking them for a young couple he is expecting, marries them. Bob takes Colette to Charters' apartment and introduces her to the astonished Larry (Robert Frazer) as Mrs. Larry Charters. After the first glance at his newly acquired wife, Larry decides to win her. Complications follow, naturally, and although Colette is more or less in love with Larry, she refuses to admit it because she has heard quite a lot about him and his numerous feminine admirers and refuses to be another of his "inspirations." The solving of the "two-husband" problem furnishes the entertainment. Ben Turpin, in a new Mack Sennett comedy, "A Wild Goose Chase," is also on the program.

At the Delmonte this week is "Cheap Kisses" with Lillian Rich and Cullen Landis, which is heralded as an expose of the eternal jazz days and nights in and around New York City and Long Island. Ardell Kendall was a show girl, but not the usual show girl type. She longed for a cottage in the country with chickens in the yard and hollyhocks around the back porch. She married the son of a millionaire and her dream of the cottage came true, but her husband's parents snatched her from her happy abode and brought her into a wild, jazzy atmosphere of cocktails and petting parties, gin and beach flirtations. What happened to Ardell and how she emerged unscathed and saved her husband as well makes the picture drama. A miniature musical comedy, "The Village Follies" is the stage attraction. There is also another Andy Gump comedy, "Andy's Temptation."

The Kings and Rivoli theaters have "Smouldering Fires," with Pauline Frederick in the role of a middle-aged factory owner whose policy has always been: "Let no man be necessary to you." To her factory comes a young man, played by Malcolm McGregor, who immediately creates a furore by offering some suggestions as to improvements. She is at first indignant, then intrigued, and to cap it all, falls in love with this man nearly 20 years younger. He admires her, and when ugly comment about their relations is rumored about the factory, proposes marriage to her and to his surprise is accepted. The marriage takes place. Then the younger sister, played by Laura La Plante. At first she despises McGregor as a fortune hunter, but when she eventually learned the true story, falls in love with him and even as youth responds to youth, he returns her love. The ending of the picture is said to be unusual.

The screen version of Adela Rogers St. John's story, "Inez From Hollywood," will be the week's attraction at the Grand Central Theater, together with a jazz revue featuring a cast of song and dance exponents. Lewis Stone, Anna Q. Nilsson and Mary Astor head the picture cast. It is the story of "the worst woman in the movies"—at least, that's what her press agent made the public think. Of course, there is an inside story to Inez's life that is both amusing and heart-compelling.

The West End Lyric and Capitol Theaters will present an adaptation of Ernst Pascal's novel, "The Dark Swan," featuring Marie Prevost, John Patrick, Helene Chadwick, Monte Blue and Mary McLaren. It is the story of a Venus versus an ugly duckling in a love affair for the same man's heart, related in a jazz setting. The West End Lyric will have an added attraction in Miss Eugene Dennis, who ap-

Rachmaninoff and Schmitz Play This Week

TWO pianoforte recitals are the prominent musical announcements of the week. Sergei Rachmaninoff will make his single St. Louis appearance of the season Tuesday night at the Odeon, and on Saturday evening E. Robert Schmitz will play his first recital in this city, at the Sheldon Auditorium, under the auspices of the Piano Teachers' Educational Association.

Rachmaninoff will present the "Caprice" of Saint-Saens, based on an air de ballet from Gluck's "Alceste;" Schumann's sonata in G Minor, three compositions by Chopin, the pianist's own "Etude Tableau" and one of his Preludes, and Godowsky's arrangement of the Strauss waltz, "Kuensterleben."

The program which Schmitz is to play is unusually interesting, and includes the first works of Darius Milhaud, member of the revolutionary group in Paris known as "The Six," to be played at a concert here. The list begins with Liszt's transcription of Bach's Fantasie and Fugue in G Minor, and Cesar Franck's Prelude, Chorale and Fugue.

Turning then to the moderns, the pianist will offer four pieces by Debussy—the Prelude in A Minor, "La Terrasse des audiences du clair de lune," "Feu d'artifices" and "Dance." The numbers by Milhaud are called "Saudades do Brazil," and have the separate titles of "Leme," "Laranjeiras" and "Sumare." Other selections will be Albeniz's "El Puerto," Liapounoff's "Lesghinka," Emerson Whithorne's "Pell Street" and "Chimes of St. Patrick's," Debussy's Etude for the Chromatic Intervals, and Maurice Ravel's Toccata, "From the Tomb of Couperin."

The fourth of a series of five concerts for children under the auspices of the Symphony Society will occur at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon at the Odeon, and will feature the harp, celesta, glockenspiel and percussion instruments. The fifth and last of these concerts will be on Feb. 25.

Excerpts From Oratorios.

AT Alhambra Grotto, Saturday night, the Liederkranz Club Mixed Chorus of 100 voices, under the direction of Hugo Anschuetz, will feature excerpts from three oratorios which are seldom heard—Handel's "Judas Maccabaeus," Haydn's "The Seasons" and Mendelssohn's "St. Paul."

From the first will be given the march and chorus, "See the Conquering Hero Comes;" a quartet for two sopranos and two altos, "Sweet Peace With Plenty Crowned;" an aira for bass, "Rejoice, Oh Judah;" and the chorus, "Hallelujah, Amen." From the "Seasons" will be given the trio and chorus marking the end of summer, "Now Cease the Conflicts," and the antumnal number, "Chorus of Vintagers." A SERIES of six illustrated lectures, at the studio of Miss Edna Lieber in the Euclid Building, will begin on the evening of Feb. 3 with a demonstration of the woodwind instruments by Messrs. Kiburz, Rifici, Zottarelle and Fuhrman of the Symphony Orchestra. The ensuing schedule is as follows: Feb. 9, brass instruments, Messrs. What They Are Doing in Movie Studios

Follies will be added to the cast to do a specialty number in a house party scene.

Bess Meredyth has started work on her first script since returning from Rome, where she made the adaptation and wrote the script for the production of "Ben Hur." The new story, which will occupy the attention of the scenarist, has been titled, "Nothing to Wear."

Flora Finch, the comedienne, who has starred with the late John Bunny, a decade or more ago, will have an important role in the William de Mille's production of "Men and Women." The part is that of Kate, a newly rich cousin from Kansas, who goes to New York to look over the town and then buy it. It calls for the most fashionable clothes of the flapper type ever worn by an elderly woman. Richard Dix, Claire Adams, Neil Hamilton and Robert Edeson are featured in the production.

Doris Kenyon, having finished work in "I Want My Man," is next to be featured in "The Half-Way Girl," an adaptation of the novel, "The Eternal Lamps."

Milton Sills is to be featured in an adaptation of Peter B. Kyne's new novel, "The Making of O'Malley."

"The Rose of Monterey," by Minna Smith and Eugenie Woodward, and "The Splendid Road," serial novel by Vingie E. Roe, will be future First National pictures. The first is a dramatic romance with a historical background of the annexation of California by the United States. The second is a love story of the gold rush days of '48. Frank Lloyd will produce both after he has finished Rex Beach's "The Winds of Chance."

Alan Forrest is to be Leatrice Joy's leading man in "The Dressmaker From Paris," which will mark her return to the screen. Other players will be Ernest Torrence, Mildred Harris, Barry Gray, Charles Crickett and Rosemary Cooper.

Mary McAllister and Ned Sparks have been added to the cast of David Belasco's play, "The Boomerang," now being filmed. The rest of the cast includes Bert Lytell, Anita Stewart, Arthur Edmund Carewe and Philo McCullough.

Two pictures are expected to go into production at First National's new Eastern studios this week. They are "Chickie," an adaptation of Elenora Meherin's newspaper serial of the same title, and "The Necessary Evil," a screen version of Stephen Vincent Benet's magazine story, "Uriah's Son." "Chickie" will have Dorothy Mackaill in the leading role, John Bowers, Marguerite de la Mott, Hobart Bosworth, Myrtle Stedman, Gladys Brockwell and Paul Nicholson. "The Necessary Evil" is to be a co-featuring vehicle for Ben Lyon and Viola Dana.

The screen version of Helen Martin's novel, "The Parasite," is in the process of cutting. In the cast are Owen Moore, Madge Bellamy, Lillyan Tashman, Dorothy Dwan, Bruce Guerin and Mary Carr.

Arnold Daly, well-known stage actor, has been engaged for an important supporting role in "Hail and Farewell," starring Barbara La Marr.. The cast includes Conway Tearle, Harry Morey, Clifton Webb and Ben Finney.

There are two love stories in "Idle Tongue," the picturization of Joseph C. Lincoln's novel, "Dr. Nye." Percy Marmont and Doris Kenyon provide the principal love story and Malcolm McGregor and Lucille Ricksen the other.

Joan Standing, who plays in the screen version of "The Dancers," starring George O'Brien, is the daughter of Sir Herbert Standing, celebrated English actor, and a sister of Wyndham Standing.

Edmund Mortimer is again directing Buck Jones. The Western star's current picture is called "Wild Ridin'."

"The Trail Rider," Buck Jones' recently finished starring vehicle, has Nancy Deaver and Lucy Fox in the principal feminine roles.

Allan Sears, who appears in "In Love With Love," has a character role in support of Shirley Mason in "The Scarlet Honeymoon," now in the making.

Fred Kohler, the villain of "The Iron Horse," plays a similar part in the film version of "Dick Turpin," a Tom Mix production.

"ITALIAN ALPS Is New HOLMES FEATURE

IN the third Travelogue of his series, "The Italian Alps" at the Odeon Monday night, Burton Holmes will take his fellow-travelers to the very heart of an Italian Switzerland, presenting on his screen some of the best of Alpine scenery as found by him last summer in Italy.

By a leisurely and comprehensive tour, Holmes takes his audience on a delightful photo-journey through the most strikingly picturesque mountain regions of Northern Italy.

Holmes' colored still-views will be many, while a large number of motion pictures, especially some relating to winter sports and the ascent of the Matterhorn by airplane, are said to be particularly entertaining and thrilling.

"CHINA ROSE" IS JUST ANOTHER ORIENTAL OPERETTA

upon a good idea, but the idea is so constantly in the mind of the playwright that the characters are a little cramped and the action is far too mechanical.

It is, after all, a dramatized anecdote. There is a snap at the end of it, but in order to bring about the final crackle much preliminary lashing is necessary. As a stunt there is much to commend Mr. Leon Gordon's ironic comedy. It is compact and there is ample movement to sustain the interest.

But this interest seldom mounts to excitement. After all, the job is just a bit too hard. Here is a play in a prologue and three acts in which not one figure is calculated to arouse an ounce of sympathy. Only the very great can sustain such a mood, and "The Piker" is several cuts below that.

A Thief's Consternation.

THE story is of a meager man who manages in a mad moment to steal a package of money from the bank in which he is employed as messenger. He believes that he has taken $50, but when he opens the package he finds that it is $50,000. The extent of his crime drives him into a panic, but there is no turning back.

The unfortunate criminal is in nowise capable of deriving any satisfaction out of his booty. His roommate fastens upon him and bleeds him for part of the plunder. Some sharp confidence men get still more, and a mercenary little actress wheedles away the bulk of it. Just at the moment that his money is all gone, he finds that she has accepted him only for what she could get out of it and that she is planning to run away with another man.

With his world crashing down about him, the unfortunate man seizes upon full confession as the only thing which can establish him as a dashing figure. He summons the police and attempts to convince them that he has stolen $50,000. The investigating Lieutenant decides that the tale is nothing but the nonsense of a drug addict and takes him away to an observation ward.

Cast Is Excellent.

IT seems to me that the story is too pat in its tragic scheme. And even if it could be told with more plausibility than Leon Gordon is able to provide, there would still be the objection that drama must seek human material above the jellyfish level if it is to produce emotion.

Lionel Barrymore plays well as the abject crook, but it is not possible for him, under the circumstances, to give to the role sufficient variation to keep monotony out of the performance.

The cast is first rate. Alan Brooks as the leechlike friend, Irene Fenwick as the grafting girl, Frank Conroy as her gentleman friend and Charles Slattery as the Police Lieutenant acquit themselves well. But there is so much irony in the world as it is that one may well wince at tackling it in three solid acts and a prologue.

Chauve-Souris Returns.

BALIEFF'S Chauve-Souris Revue returned last week to Broadway, for the third time I think, and managed the miracle of seeming once again altogether new and somewhat wonderful. This is not one of the ordinary miracles. It is a trick confined for the most part to spring, sunrise and a few other natural phenomena.

The secret probably lies in the show's attendant moon, for early in the evening Balieff rose beaming and remained that way. His is the perfect comic mask and his method among the best of all humorous approaches. He took occasion to ask the audience whether they could notice the improvement in his English, but this was merely a device for it is more shrewdly fearful than ever. No man who knew our tongue only a little could possibly speak it so badly.

However, it was a polite group of first-nighters and they gave him a soothing answer. In fact they gave him almost anything he asked for. When he signaled for applause and cries of encore they were delivered promptly. Since it was his wish that the audience help out the performers by singing the chorus of "O Katharina" ready compliance was accorded.

Critics Mute for Once.

ONLY once was the authority and inspirational leadership of this supreme ringmaster insufficient. When he suggested that the rest of the house remain silent and the dramatic critics carry the air, nothing came forth but silence.

The moods of the Chauve-Souris revue are varied. The burlesques of the new bill are particularly happy and specifically a scene from a gory and tragic opera proved one of the funniest things which the troupe has accomplished.

At the other end of the scale lies "The Arrival at Bethlehem," in which a rare and arresting beauty is created.

It is not easy for the playgoer to identify "Chauve-Souris" performers and so I do not know whether Mme. Devkarhanova, Mme. Komissarievskava or Mme. Karabanova is the most beautiful woman in the world, but it is one of them.

The dancing of the company is not so much, but the singing is excellent and the fun fast and sure.

As George Jean Nathan Views New York Plays

"OLD ENGLISH."

JOHN GALSWORTHY, for whose dramatic intentions always and dramatic achievements frequently I entertain a very high respect, has manufactured in "Old English" a singularly hasny play. What he has written is simply a role for a sham actor of the old school and called it a character. This role, a patchwork of Grumpy, Baron Chevrial and Isidore Lechat, is rich in all the pet mummer shenanigans that have delighted the actor heart since Mansfield evoked the awe of the yokels by collapsing in death among the banquet-table dishes and since Irving drew down the thunders of boob applause by tottering around the furniture and falling dead to the accompaniment of off-stage fifes and drums.

It is character only in terms of arbitrarily imposed characteristics, the most of which are culled less from human nature than from the traditions of cabotinage. We have, in this role of the gray old Britisher, the stereotyped fits of irascibility lapsing abruptly into warmheartedness, the slow and laborious getting into and out of arm-chairs, the flinty sternness alternating suddenly, as if by rote, with gentle kindness, the gradual coming on of paralysis, accompanied by the customary bull-like actor breathing, the final repertoire of physical quiverings—the entire baggage of a hundred and one roles of a piece.

These rubber stamps are, further, duly accompanied by the familiar lines, speeches and bits of business. Thus, we have again the recollection of happy, bygone days—"there were actors in those days we haven't any actors any more!"; the admonition to the young folk to avail themselves of the pleasures of life while there is yet time; the smacking of the lips over good port wine; the sigh for the love that was lost; the eventual brave exit without regret or qualm. The central figure of Mr. Galsworthy's play, in short, is less a picture of an old Englishman of affairs than of an old English actor.

This old English actor the dramatist has set into a sketchy paraphrase of Mirbeau, Githa Sowerby and company. The paraphrase lacks imagination and, for the major part, interest, since the humor that Galsworthy has posed himself to capture from the setting never quite comes off. There is an excellent pantomimic episode that forms the second portion of the last act—the scene is of the old man's one grand solo orgy of wining and dining before he shuffles off—but, beyond this, little that is holding.

George Arliss meets every demand of the leading role, but since all that the author put into it was the embodiment of an actor, that, obviously enough, is all that Arliss can extract from it. The staging of the play by E. Lyall Swete is generally of the Basil Dean order. These English producers, as I have somewhat tiresomely been observing for the last four or five years, are a melancholy lot. Bringing them over here to stage plays is akin to sending Mr. Clark Silvernail over to Germany to show Reinhardt a thing or two.

"CANDIDA."

IN all of Bernard Shaw's work there are no finer passages than those which go to make up the last half of the last act of that comedy among modern comedies known as "Candida." I know of no better instance of intelligent sentimental writing. Taking materials that, these 30 years ago, were already deeply imbedded in the hokum of the popular theater, Shaw converted them into first-grade dramatic literature by the simple device of viewing them through the eyes of the mind rather than through the eyes of the heart, as they had previously been in the custom of being viewed. The playwright of commerce is invariably given to an attempt to touch the heart through the heart.

Shaw knew better. He knew that the shortest road to the human heart is through the head. Where the playwrights of his earlier day jockeyed with an audience's sentimental emotions with what may be called heart-to-heart drama, he made it his own trick to do the jockeying with heart-to-mind drama. It is the easiest thing in the world to instil in an audience's heart the mood of agreeable melancholy; but it is a difficult thing, indeed, to instil the same mood in an audience's head.

This third act of "Candida" is a keen searching into the core of banality and the ferreting out therefrom what essences of beauty and tenderness are hidden there. Out of age-old materials, long weary from the heaviness of grease-paint and tinsel, Shaw distilled the buried and eternal truths. From such puppets of the theater as the thick John Shand of a husband, the romantic poet and the wife who is the triangle's other angle; from such situations as that wherein the two men confront each other at the gate of amorous battle and that wherein the two and the woman they both love take the center of the stage; and from such ancient tear-breweries as the monologue recounting the rosemary of other and younger days—from stencils such as these, Shaw extracted all of the stencil that was in them and revealed the warm comprehension and the years-old but ever vital philosophy that had so long been coated with stage rouge.

The Actors' Theater production of the play was, in general, very good, indeed, although Mr. Richard Bird acted Marchbanks rather more in the spirit of a young gentleman on his way to a Keeley Cure than in the spirit of the intrinsically sharp-minded if superficially erratic poet that the dramatist drew. Katharine Cornell's Candida was a thoroughly fine performance. I am not given to wasting precious time over the genus cabot, but this particular actress is so far above the common run that she is, in her way, quite remarkable. There is no young woman in our theater at present who matches her. And so far as a lot of the older ones go, I'll give you three-fourths of them in exchange for her, and throw in Louis Mann for good measure.

"THE HAREM."

A VERY HOPWOOD is sagacious enough in the moral ways of the New York commercial theater to know that, as a general rule, a playwright may safely let his characters go as far as they wish in the matter of speaking smut so long as he restrains them from entering into smutty situations. This technic he once again follows in his adaptation of the Hungarian Vajda's farce-comedy, "The Harem." The characters talk like so many Brantomes and Fanny Hills, but they are prudent enough to act like so many Comstocks and Little Red Riding Hoods. The net impression of the play is thus of a group of Elks in a smoking car stalled at Kraus' Creek, Pa., discussing the high time they had with the "Black Crook" chorus girls 35 years ago. Such a conversazione may nevertheless be found amusing enough if one listens to it with a sufficiently ironic ear, and in the same way one may extract a number of low, jazz-razzle laughs from the theatrical exhibit in question.

These dignified pages, as Ie Papa Bon Dieu knows, are perhaps no place for a professor of the drama shamelessly to admit that such bawdy stuff as constitutes Vajda's fifth-rate paraphrase of Molnar's "The Guardsman" is invested with a considerable number of eminent horselaughs. It is a critical custom in many quarters not to admit that what makes one laugh makes one laugh save the source of laughter be duly indorsed by the Epworth League, the American Legion, the Church White List, the Ku Klux Klan and the New York Tribune's literary supplement. And such indorsement is withheld, doubtless properly enough, from the ribald and indecorous species of humor which constitutes much of such a doohinky as "The Harem."

Being, however, constitutionally democratic in the matter of laughter, I usually and disconcertingly have to spoil the reputation for critical nicety that I have laboriously built up over so long a period by confessing that this kind of saloon backroom humor not infrequently diverts me in a deplorably gross and welcome manner. I am, alas, the kind of ignoble fellow who laughs at Rabelais, a certain pamphlet of Mark Twain's, the unexpurgated Dean Swift, Walt Whitman's last words, General Grant's bedtime stories, and "Reigen." I am, therefore doomed to meet Abraham Lincoln in hell.

Aside from its periodic honkatonk jocosities, however, "The Harem" is not worth criticism. It is, as I have remarked, a fifth-rate rewriting of the Molnar fable of the man who tests his wife's fidelity by masquerading as her lover. It is, further, another of the weaker Hungarian attempts to catch the light boulevard note and tone of the younger Guitry. Miss Lenore Ulric brings her plentitude of skill and sex to the leading role. The rest of the company assembled by Mr. Belasco is with the exception of Robert Fisher, throughly up to the standard of a Charlottenburg vaudeville troupe.

"LADIES OF THE EVENING."

FOLLOWING "The Harem," Mr. Belasco, that great and sincere artist of the theater, put on a large platter of dollar-grabbing smut called "Ladies of the Evening," the work of one Gropper. The things is sewerage, cheap, vulgar and contemptible. It lacks even the occasional low humor of the Vajda exhibit to give it the slightest reason for being. It must come as a shock to those deluded souls who for so many years have been hornswoggled by Mr. Belasco into regarding him as one with the finest interests of the drama at heart to realize at length that there is a very considerable difference between a shrewd showman and an honest artist.

It would be unfair to describe Mr. Belasco as a Minsky brother with his collar turned hind end foremost. The Minsky brothers, whatever their failings, have never been posturers.

"THE WAY OF THE WORLD."

IT IS one of the peculiarities of the Congreve drama that, when it is shown on a theater stage, it must be acted, an idiosyncrasy that would seem to have escaped the directors of the little Cherry Lane playhouse. These ladies and gentlemen not long ago indicated their complete confidence in the chief of the Restoration dramatists by putting on his "Way of the World" as if it were a Tuesday morning reading at the Plaza Hotel. While this confidence was eminently commendable, what resulted from it was less a dramatic production of "The Way of the World" than an exhibition of the manuscript of "The Way of the World." That manuscript, obviously enough, is a highly meritorious one, but its high merits must inevitably be buried in the library save actors of high merit be employed as funnels for them. . . .

"The Way of the World" was played on the Cherry Lane stage by a troupe of more or less carefully trained elocutionists who missed the spirit of Congreve's work entirely. They did not act the play; they talked it. Its humors were butchered to make a precise-speech holiday. Its wit was turned into a schoolroom exercise in vowels, consonants and diphthongs. It was as if the exhibition had been directed by a doctor who ordered the actors constantly to open their mouths and say "Ah!"

"THE YOUNGEST."

"THE YOUNGEST" is the second play of Professor George Pierce Baker's most recent white-headed boy, Philip Barry. I observe that it has been generally described by my colleagues as a cultivated and civilized comedy. If a cultivated and civilized comedy is one in which the hero, whose philosophy and conduct are held up by the author as eminently praiseworthy, is in philosophy a moron and in conduct an idiot and a bounder, my colleagues are right.

Mr. Barry's hero is a young writer who, apparently on the score that he has written a few short stories which have been unanimously rejected by editors and publishers as worthless, is set forth by Mr. Barry as an artist. For this great artist, whose outward manifestations of his deeply esthetic nature take the form of pulling at a pipe, carrying a dog around in his arms to show his kindness of heart, and making periodic wise-cracks about business men, the playwright tries to work up sympathy by placing him in an unsympathetic household.

Unfortunately, however, the members of this unsympathetic household impress most of us as being entirely correct in their lack of sympathy. They are properly unsympathetic not only to Mr. Barry's imbecile hero but also to Mr. Barry. And when they, for the most part capable and intelligent business men, metaphorically rush the artist hero around the house by the seat of the pants, they do simply not only what any self-respecting business man would do in the same circumstances, but also what any short story writer would do.

Mr. Barry is a naive young man. And he writes as naively as he thinks. His point of view is that of the subsophomore, a point of view that regards any incompetent man with a vague itch for artistic expression the superior of a competent man without the itch. It would be an easy thing to convert "The Youngest" into the cultivated and civilized comedy my colleagues claim it to be. To turn it into such a comedy, all that one would have to do would be to make the present villains the heroes and the hero the ingenuous target of their bean-shooters, and then have Somerset Maugham rewrite the whole thing from start to finish.

Henry Hull is the Barry hero. It matters not what his role in whatever play, Mr. Hull always faithfully gives exactly the same interpretation and performance. He has all the variety of a trained seal. Genevieve Tobin is the Barry heroine whose faith in the idiot-hero provides the love disinterest. Miss Tobin is a pretty young woman whose histrionic talent is as considerable as my own genius for toe dancing.

"THE STUDENT PRINCE."

I HAVE mentioned the fact that "Old Heidelberg" is the kind of play that might be acted in a livery stable with Julius Marx in the role of Prince Karl and Robert Mantell in the role of Kathi, and that it would still retain a great deal of its mood hypnosis and eternal charm. The tender fable told these years ago by Meyer-Forster, a fable universal in the hearts of men, can successfully survive almost any assault that is made upon it in the theater. Nothing can kill it; its pulse beats on and on. It triumphed over Richard Mansfield as it triumphed over Frank Gillmore. It has triumphed over half a dozen two-ton German Karls and three-ton German Kathis. Once, indeed, I saw it acted in the steerage of a transatlantic ocean liner. Even then it wasn't missing in its intrinsic beauty.

The Shuberts have lately brought back the play to us in musical form and have renamed it "The Student Prince." With an accompanying score by Sigmund Romberg and certain other unnamed foreign composers, it provides again an excellent evening in the theater. The male singing chorus is the best that has come this way in a long time; and some of the melodies are as captivating as the story itself. Ilse Marvenga makes an agreeable Kathi, although Howard Marsh plays the Prince like an actor in a courtroom scene in a Hollywood movie.

The chief flaw in the presentation lies in the direction of the love scenes. The love story of "Old Heidelberg" is one of hesitant grace; there is to it the suggestion of a hundred forgotten twilights. It is like a lovely tune played upon a silent piano. In the present instance, this fragile and delicate love story is given a fortissimo treatment. The Prince and Kathi do not simply embrace when they embrace; they make a mutual flying tackle. The Prince goes at Kathi on all occasions like a hobo after a free lunch, while Kathi meets his advances all too often like an Elinor Glyn book advertisement. But, as I have observed, the charming homesickness of the story will not down. It is there still in all its wonder.

Barrie Plans Ne Play About Robert Burns

Special to the Post-Dis
NEW YORK, Jan.

BEFORE the curtain goes o Henry Miller's Theater ship's company, passengers are down on the list of those ing into "Quarantine" on the ship Angostura, have the bait gathering on deck and gossip bit, as even actors will.

On one particular night the versation turned on the west plays and equally naturally new play by Sir James Barrie in for a great deal of mention. "Isabel," because A. P. Kaye, once sailed as steward on the gostura and even went into "Q antine" with it is now both a ler and a host in the two new Mr. Kaye's wife, Mary Ryan is one of the passengers who enthroned on a deck chair the before-the-curtain tion, and Beryl Mercer, who Pinsent, is very definitely ated in the memories of all lovers with one of Barrie's delightful plays, namely "The Lady Shows Her Medals."

Revisits Dumfries.

SO when the new play was ing discussed Miss Betoo, is a Scotchwoman, that newspaper which is the of the ye for all real Scots Scotsman, and called attenti pages and pages reciting the dents of Sir James Barrie's visit to Dumfries where some years ago he received his The freedom of the city was him as well as the power to claire a holiday to the schoolboy

The visit was full of delig memories, and one important nouncement, the statement even now Sir James Barrie work on a play which will Dumfries, a play about Bo Burns.

Why He Wrote Plays.

IN the course of his speech, rie revealed many secrets, which was what set him to ing plays. The Scotsman him as saying:

"I have never divulged to one what set me, a dour Scot, the writing of plays, but today seems compelled to tell something and to tell it truthfully—another unexpected and disquieting of the Burgess ticket.

"I think I should never have taken to it seriously but for sure from two great Englishmen Sir Henry Irving and Mr. Geo Meredith. Irving not only me to write my first three pla and found managers to produ them, but it was he who got out of the way of writing them the backs of old envelopes. Mr. Meredith wanted me so ardently to turn playwright I could not quite understand, unless it was because he wanted me to go down his famous chalet in Surrey and tell him about theaters without having to go to them himself.

His First Dramatic Effort.

"MY first play was written for the Dumfries Academy Dramatic Society on whose boards I also made my only appearance as an actor. That was due to the histrionic enthusiasm of an academy boy, certainly the best amateur actor I have ever seen, who, I am glad to know, is here today, and who blushes so easily—at least he blushed easily a century or two ago—that I shall cunningly conceal his identity under the name of Wells.

"Never can there have been a more devoted follower of the muse or a stage manager with more engratiating ways. During the winters of our existence his pockets were always bulging with stage directions, which fell on the floor as he was being caned, and all the time the masters were submitting him to drastic treatment he was considering how they would do for walking gentlemen.

"Bandelero the Bandit."

"IT was in order to escape from feminine roles that I resigned for the Academy my first play, a staggering work entitled 'Bandelero the Bandit.' I was not Bandelero. I nobly gave up that to Tom Nesbit, bigging, because I thought one of the other parts was better. It was the part of all my favorite characters in fiction rolled into one, so that I had to be constantly changing my clothes, with the result that I was scarcely ever on the stage. A disappointing kind of part.

"I foolishly told Mr. Meredith about that play long afterward, and when the fly came to take me from his house to the station he used to announce, in a manner that would have set Wedd considering him, 'Bandelero's carriage stays this way.' Fiction—the drama—I was also a painter in those days, but gave up becoming a painter for the only because I always lost my paint box. That probably accounts for the darker side of my character which some people have noticed. I lose everything."

Yes, He Lost His Balance.

"AH," commented Miss Mercer when she read this account, "I saw him lose his balance once."

"Indeed," said Percy Amos, who, although the Silent Passenger is 'Quarantine,' is allowed to speak before the curtain goes up.

"Yes," attested Miss Mercer, "I was at a rehearsal of 'The Little Minister.' Cyril Maude and Winifred Emery were rehearsing. Barrie got so excited he tipped right over backward, chair and all, into the orchestra pit."

"Did it"——

Just then the off-stage steamboat whistle blew and the stage manager called "Places, please," and "Quarantine" began but not before the press person had noted the fact that Beryl Mercer had played the part in Barrie's first London production.

MENCKEN SAYS CONVENTION PREVENTS WOMEN FROM WRITING MANY GOOD NOVELS

Asserts They Would Cause Scandal bl Telling Truth, So They Put in Mush and It Flavors Whole Dish.

By HENRY L. MENCKEN,
Co-Editor With George Jean Nathan of the American Mercury, And Our Foremost Literary Critic.

I.

THAT women, and especially American women, do not shine more effulgently as novelists remains extremely mysterious. I have searched the literature diligently without coming upon any plausible explanation of it. Obviously, they have the talent demanded by the trade, for there have been several women novelists of the very first rank: I need name only Jane Austen, Charlotte Bronte and George Eliot. And equally obviously, it holds out peculiar lures to them, and offers better rewards than most of the other crafts they practice. Nevertheless, very few women of the superior variety go in for it, and so there are not many women novelists of genuine dignity.

In America, I believe, we have had but one, to-wit, Miss Willa Cather. Her "My Antonia" would certainly go into any list of the 10 best American novels, and her "Lost Lady" would escape only by a narrow margin. But even Miss Cather seems to hold to her high place with some difficulty, for now and then she writes very badly, and even foolishly. The last half of her "One of Ours" might have been written by Robert W. Chambers or Dr. Henry Van Dyke; it is so bad, indeed, that it was awarded the Pulitzer prize. True enough, male novelists of talent also have their off days, and write badly. The same Dreiser who wrote "Jennie Gerhardt" and "The Titan" also wrote the Christian Science chapters of "The 'Genius.'" But the men seldom go back on their fundamental principles so badly, so completely. One never hears of a Thomas Hardy or a George Meredith suddenly beginning to write like E. Phillips Oppenheim, or a Cabell turning to patriotism and piffle.

The other lady novelists of the republic all fall far short of Miss Cather, even including Mrs. Wharton. Mrs. Wharton's celebrity, in truth, is quite as much social as literary. She is a fashionable woman, and she thus dazzles the professional literati, just as Miss Amy Lowell dazzles them. I long ago argued that if Miss Lowell's name had been Gussie Krause and she had announced her prosodical bolshevism from Red Lion, Pa., she would have got a great deal less notice than she used to get. Mrs Wharton's "Ethan Frome" is a fine piece of work, apparently accidental. The rest of her books are impressive chiefly to literary pastors and the more advanced sorts of high school teachers. If she were a man she'd be a leading member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters.

II.

WOMEN, I believe, ought to be far more succesful as novelists than they are, for the sort of thing that belongs properly in novels is precisely the sort of thing they are mainly interested in and know most about. I refer to manners. What a man believes, deeply and passionately, cannot be put into a novel, for if it is the thing instantly stiffens into a polemic and becomes unreadable. Even what he feels, in the more profound sense, is dangerous. But what he does—the externals of his conduct, his daily reactions to his world, his doings as a member of society—all that makes good material for the novelist, and some of the best novels ever written contain nothing else.

Here women novelists should have an advantage over their male colleagues, for women are more interested in manners than men are, and observe their subtler nuances more carefully, and take them, in general, more seriously. Most men, when they are capable of any thought at all, are deeply engrossed by ideas, and get into dreadful sweats over them. It is hard, indeed, to find a literate (or even an illiterate) man who isn't staggering through life under a burden of impassioned and implacable notions, most of them obviously nonsensical. Women are far too realistic to fall into that folly. They view all ideas somewhat cynically, and are willing to change their own almost as facilely as they change their surnames. They know by bitter experience that appearances are worth a great deal more than principles—that human beings are judged in this world not by what they think or feel but by what they do.

This is what the psychologists call behaviorism—and almost all good novelists are behaviorists. I point to one of the greatest this world has ever seen, Joseph Conrad, and to some of his masterpieces: "The Nigger of the Narcissus," "The Secret Agent," "Typhoon." There is surely no laboring of ideas here; it is all pure behavior; the characters might just as well have been cocci in a test tube. I point to something still greater: to Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn." It is as devoid of ideas, in the ordinary sense, as a sermon by a Bishop or a college yell; yet it remains the finest novel ever written in America, and perhaps the finest ever written in English.

III.

LIFE, to women, is simply an adventure in behavior. Setting aside a forlorn and unhappy minority, they get on in the world, not by thinking this or that, but by behaving thus or so. More, it is behavior and not ideas that they encounter when they come into contact with men. When a young man is flustered by a pretty girl he does not try to fetch her by expounding the single tax to her or by explaining in detail his duties as bookkeeper from A to C in a bank; he essays to achieve the business by having his clothes carefully pressed, by remembering his table manners, by displaying a large roll of bills, and maybe by pinching her cheek. And when they are married, he does not try to hold her affection and respect by offering to teach her Swedish and political economy, but by obeying her orders strictly, buying her all the clothes she wants, quarreling with the friends she dislikes and in general, as the phrase is, making her a good husband.

If I here seem to depict women as stupid, I hasten to repudiate any such intent. Women are not stupid at all, but extraordinarily sagacious—so sagacious, in fact, that they always see through the so-called ideas of men. All I am trying to argue is that their experience of life gives them a keen professional interest in behavior, that their shrewdness enables them to observe and estimate it accurately, and that the body of knowledge that they thus amass is precisely the body of knowledge that is needed by a novelist. They are walking storehouses of raw materials. The facts that Sinclair Lewis amassed so laboriously for "Main Street," hiding behind doors, cross-examining loafers at the cigar store, consulting doctors and pastors, constructing elaborate logical inferences—all these facts were already in the head of every woman in Gopher Prairie above the age of 20—and a great many more that Lewis, with his male imbecility, doesn't know or suspect even today.

YET women, and especially American women, write very few good novels, and almost none of the first rank. Why is this? I believe it is mainly because the display of their talent is still greatly hampered by convention—because it would still cause a frightful scandal if they began to tell the truth—that is, if they began to describe human existence as they actually see it. The woman novelist is torn between two purposes. On the one hand, she wants to write an accurate and honest novel, and she has all the materials for it, and, I believe, quite enough talent for it. But, on the other hand, there is always, in the back of her mind, a desire to appear charming, or, at all events, not revolting, to men, and especially to some one man, maybe a poor stick. She knows that if she told the whole truth, the poor idiot would be shocked to death, and flee her as the pestilence. So she compromises by putting in some mush—and the mush flavors the entire dish.

On the higher levels, at least, men have got over that difficulty. The public opinion of the world, made by themselves, gives them a larger freedom. Moreover, they have less to gain than women have by appearing sexually charming, and so they give less concern to the business. I close with an example in point. Several years ago an American novelist who had quarreled with his wife wrote a novel about their differences, and depicted her in it in unfavorable colors. The book caused some mild gabbling and was then forgotten. But when, a bit later, the wife announced that she, too, was engaged on a novel, and that it would deal with the same events as her husband's, and depict him realistically as she saw him—when this news came out there was a first rate sensation, and persons devoted to good works rushed to the wife and begged her to desist as a duty to God and her country. She apparently desisted; at all events, nothing more has been heard about her novel. That, in brief, is what is the matter with the lady novelists.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. A t little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-u s e preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.

WANTED! 15,000 SUFFERERS FROM DEAFNESS HEAD NOISES Or Nasal Catarrh

DR. W. O. COFFEE, Noted Catarrh and Deafness Specialist

I want the names of 15,000 people who are suffering from cartarrhal deafness, dullness of hearing or head noises. I have an original home treatment for these distressing conditions which I want you to try without cost or expense. I suffered for many years with catarrh, deafness and head noises, tried many different treatments. Had two surgical operations all of which failed to give permanent relief. I began experimenting on myself and finally found a treatment which completely healed my catarrh, restored my hearing and stopped the terrible head noises. I want you to try this splendid treatment entirely at my own expense.

15,000 TREATMENTS TO BE GIVEN THIS MONTH FREE!

I am so proud of my treatment and so anxious to help others suffering with deafness, head noises or catarrh that I will have packed and ready for shipment 15,000 demonstration treatments which I will give away in the next 30 days absolutely free. I want to prove that my original home treatment will give relief from catarrhal deafness, head noises or nasal catarrh. The results are quick and convincing. You feel the difference the first day. This treatment costs you nothing whatever. Simply write and say that you are suffering with deafness or head noises or catarrh I will gladly send the free treatment. It is the best treatment I have ever found in over 40 years daily practice as eye, ear, nose and throat specialist. I want every sufferer with deafness, dullness of hearing, head noises or catarrh to try it free.

Don't Neglect Deafness

Catarrhal deafness, head noises and catarrh when neglected gradually grow worse. Authorities claim that 90% of all deafness is caused primarily by catarrh of the head and air passages. Others state that catarrh causes indigestion, rheumatism, catarrh of the stomach and many other diseased conditions.

Try It Free

I don't ask you to send one penny for this treatment. I send it free to you prepaid without cost. I am doing this to quickly introduce my original home treatment to sufferers of catarrhal deafness, head noises or catarrh. I believe I treat more cases of deafness, head noises and catarrh than any physician in the United States. I know this treatment is the best I have ever used. Send your name and address today. State whether you have deafness or head noises or just have catarrh. This notice may not appear again so write me at once.

Gas on Stomach Affects Woman's Heart

Both Heart and Lungs Pressed On By Gas

"I suffered from gas pressing on my heart and lungs. Adlerika did more for me than anything I ever took." (Signed) Mrs. Annie Harris.

Intestinal Evacuant.

There is now offered to the public a liquid preparation which is not only a wonderfully effective and QUICK intestinal evacuant, but which also seems to stimulate the glands of the intestinal tract and to cause expulsion of flatus (GAS). This preparation, known as Adlerika, is a valuable agent for the purpose of cleansing the bowels of matter which has been in the system a long time and which other less effective means have been unable to dislodge. It is often astonishing the great amount of matter Adlerika draws from the intestinal canal—even right after a natural movement it sometimes brings out unsuspected quantities of additional matter. Many times it brings out much GAS, thus relieving pressure in the abdomen. Adlerika is especially valuable when PROMPT action is necessary or to encourage the elimination of metabolic poisons through the bowel.

In slight disorders, such as occasional constipation or gas on the stomach and headache (when due to bowel inaction), a single spoonful of Adlerika often produces surprising and gratifying results. In cases of obstinate constipation or stomach trouble, if Adlerika does not bring relief in 24 to 36 hours the advice of a reputable physician should be secured.

Reports From Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the good effect from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"Adlerika is the best in my entire 37 years' experience." (Signed) Dr. G. Eggers.

"I prescribed Adlerika with highly satisfactory results." (Signed) Dr. A. C. C. (Name given on request.)

"I can't get along without Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. W. H. Bernhart.

J. E. Puckett (a user of Adlerika) writes: "After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the impurities eliminated from my system."

Adlerika is a big surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines because of its REAL and QUICK action. Sold by leading druggists everywhere. In St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. and Enderle Drug Co.

5,000 MINDS

When you come to the Missouri Theatre for entertainment you see programs that represent the best thought of more than 5,000 persons; novelties that people both in America and abroad have found to their liking. The Missouri is one of the great leaders in a circuit of 200 theatres operated by the powerful Famous Players organization.

Each theatre has its own creative staff and each also devises its own standard of entertainment, but the ideas of several thousand persons are more productive than the thoughts of a dozen or a score. The splendid brain resources of the Famous Players - Lasky studios on two coasts are also at the disposal of our theatres—in art, in novelties, in music, in lighting.

No single theatre on earth could remain solvent and spend one-tenth of the money that buys the brains and talent available for the Missouri and the great circuit of Famous Players theatres.

DESPONDENCY AT ZOO OVER "SALLY'S" DEATH

Joy Taken Out of Opening of New Monkey House by Her Absence.

It's been a week now that Sally's dead, but Sally's ghost still stalks the zoo. It's the memory of her that does the haunting, and you can see it in the faces of Superintendent Vierheller and Max, the chimpanzee's trainer, and the other keepers, and in the despondency of Henry and Duffy and Mike, the three chimps that were Sally's playmates, for they're not cavorting the way they did. And anybody who doesn't believe it can have Superintendent Vierheller's word for it.

"It sort of took the joy out of the opening of the new monkey house," said Vierheller, speaking of the new house for primates, the latest addition to the Forest Park Zoo, and the finest monkey house in the land. "You know how fond you can get of these chimpanzees. The day isn't started right if you don't visit the chimps the first thing in the morning, and romp with them. And they expect it, too.

They All Miss "Sally."

"Well, as I was saying, along comes the opening of the new monkey house, with a special stage for the chimps to show off on, and Sally catches pneumonia and dies. And while Henry and Duffy are getting along fine, Mike isn't as well as he might be, and there's no use letting them go through their tricks if they can't all be there to do them together. And anyhow they aren't as lively as they were, since Sally died, because they miss her.

"You know how it was last summer, when she had that stomach trouble, and I took her away from the others for a few days and put her on a special diet. The others wouldn't eat, and they wouldn't play, and they moped and moped around till I could bring her back."

So it's not surprising that the men who look for the city's chimps, the chief enjoyment at the zoo, the animals—if they are animals—that the children like best to watch—when their elders give them a chance; it's not surprising if the faces of these men look haggard.

There is Max Mail, the trainer, who had been sleeping on a temporary bunk in the bottom of the lion house ever since Sally took sick, so he could be near her all the time. And who continues to sleep there so he can be near Mike. For the chimps are being kept in a glass enclosed cage in the lions' home, where they lived before the new monkey house was completed, until all danger is passed.

Affected by Change in Climate.

St. Louis' climate is much different from that of Central Africa, where chimpanzees come from, and pathologists believe pulmonary diseases are so foreign to that part of the world, that the chimps are in no way immunized against them.

Yesterday Mike and Duffy and Henry were clustered around Max, who was sitting in a pile of straw, with a cup of sherry and beef broth in one hand, and in the other hand a spoon that was making the round of Mike's and Henry's and Duffy's mouths, for sherry and beef broth is what Dr. R. A. Kammerer, the zoo physician, who sees the chimps four times a day, prescribes as part of their diet. Suddenly Henry reached out and carressed Duffy's ear.

"See that," said Vierheller. "That's what Sally used to do. And now that she's gone, Henry seems to think it's up to him. He never did it when she was here."

CALIFORNIA GRIZZLIES REAPPEAR IN FORESTS

Huge Bears Thought Extinct 40 Years Ago Reported in Sequoia National Park.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 24. — The California grizzly bear, supposed extinct, has appeared after a lapse of 40 years in the Sequoia National Forest, according to a reliable report.

At one time the California grizzly ranged the Sierra Nevada and Coast ranges in such large numbers that he was made the official emblem of the State and still graces the State flag. He is considerably larger than the Rocky Mountain grizzly, is of a grayish tinge and has a distinct hump on top of his shoulders. As a fighter he was feared by all other animals of the early California days. Yet he was not considered by man a dangerous animal, and he usually took to flight on man's approach. He was even less carnivorous than the smaller black or brown bear and lived largely on acorns, berries, roots and grasses.

40TH EDITION OF WORLD ALMANAC NOW OFF PRESS

This Issue Contains 900 Pages, Carrying All Essential Facts on Events of Year.

America's standard annual is now in its fortieth year. The World Almanac and Book of Facts for 1925, just published, has fallen into its accustomed place as the one indispensable book of reference ready at your hand.

Compressed into its 900 pages is the history of the United States and of the whole world, in fact, for 1924. The index points the way to a million facts. The multitude of carefully revised tabulated statistics are up to date, as are all its familiar features.

Essential facts that everyone must have before him whereby he may form his judgment on the big problems of 1924-25, are here—from reparations and the Dawes plan to the balance-sheet of the American farmer; from the air fleets of the great Powers to the enforcement of the prohibition law; from the immigration law to the income tax. The aim of the editor is accuracy in collection of these facts; terseness in handling them, and accessibility in presenting them.

As a handbook of politics and public affairs it is unequaled. The record of the presidential year is given for all time in the 48 pages of election returns by states, the popular and the electoral votes in the last nine campaigns, and, further, in the reports of the national conventions, with the three party platforms in full. As many pages are needed also for the records of the great sporting events of the year.

It is a mine of information for the busy man.

Belgium to Hold Centennial Fair.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 14.—A world's fair is to take place in Belgium in 1930, in commemoration of the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the kingdom. Brussels and Antwerp, which at first were rivals for the honor of being selected as the seat of the fair, have buried the hatchet and agreed on a compromise by which exhibitions are to take place in both cities.

Concert at Moolah Temple.

A concert will be given by the Scottish Rite Choir and Moolah Chanters at Moolah Temple the evening of Feb. 6. Guest soloists will be H. Max Steindel, first 'cellist of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, and Alice W. Conant, soprano, with Esmeralda Berry Mayes as accompanist.

FORMER INN KEEPER DIES AT 103 YEARS

Michael Murphy, Who Knew Lincoln and Other Statesmen, Expires in Hopedale, Ill.

Michael Murphy, the genial Irish tavernkeeper at Tremont, Ill., in the old days when Abraham Lincoln, Stephen Douglas and other Illinois statesment were wont to stop overnight at Tremont House while enroue to Springfield, is dead at the age of 103 years.

At Murphy's home in Hopedale, Ill., is a heavy oak chair, one of a six of the tavern set, in which sometimes Lincoln sat as he debated informally with Douglas and the others as they gathered about the table in Tremont House.

Was Strong Democrat.

Murphy died quietly at his home Jan. 16. He had been a stanch Democrat throughout his life in America, and on Nov. 4 last, six days before his 103d birthday, he cast his fifteenth vote for a Democratic presidential candidate. All of Hopedale turned out for his funeral, held from St. Joseph's Catholic Church, where a choir composed entirely of his grandchildren sang requiem mass. He is survived by one daughter, 28 grandchildren and 47 great-grandchildren.

Murphy was born at Dongarven, County Waterford, Ireland, Nov. 10, 1821, and came to America at the age of 28. He had tried many jobs before he finally set up the tavern at Tremont, then the county seat of Tazewell County. Tremont was a day's horseback ride from Springfield and all itinerant politicians and statesmen used to make Tremont House their stopping place. Murphy recalled that Lincoln and Douglas, who were later to meet in historic debate, had discussed many things under his roof.

Took Daily Walk.

When Murphy abandoned Tremont House he bought a farm near Tremont where he lived until eight years ago when at the age of 95 he moved to Hopedale to live with his daughter, Miss Catherine Murphy, the only survivor of his seven children. While he had ostensibly retired, he took a daily walk downtown, tended his garden and each day spent some time at the woodpile chopping wood. For his great age, he credited a naturally strong constitution, abstemious habits, regular hours of sleep and daily exercise.

PALESTINE FOUNDATION FUND WILL CLOSE DRIVE TUESDAY

Workers Will Redouble Efforts in Visiting Business Houses in Final Appeal.

The Palestne Foundation Fund campaign, which opened Jan. 14, will be brought to a close Tuesday with a redoubling of efforts on the part of numerous teams of solicitors to put the fund over the goal. On that day, which has been designated "Palestine Foundation Fund day," scores of teams will visit Jewish business houses and residential sections with a final appeal for the rebuilding of the Jewish homeland.

Propaganda for the drive has been carried on in St. Louis for the last six weeks, with the assistance of Maurice Samuel, author of "You Gentiles;" Dr. Shmarya Levin of Tel-Aviv, Palestine, and Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver of Cleveland.

Banquet for Burroughs' Employes.

A banquet for the members of the St. Louis organization of the Burroughs Adding Machine Co. was held last night at the Missouri Athletic Association simultaneously with similar affairs in every large city in the country. The banquets were given by the company to celebrate the successful "Beat '23" sales campaign waged during the last quarter of 1924.

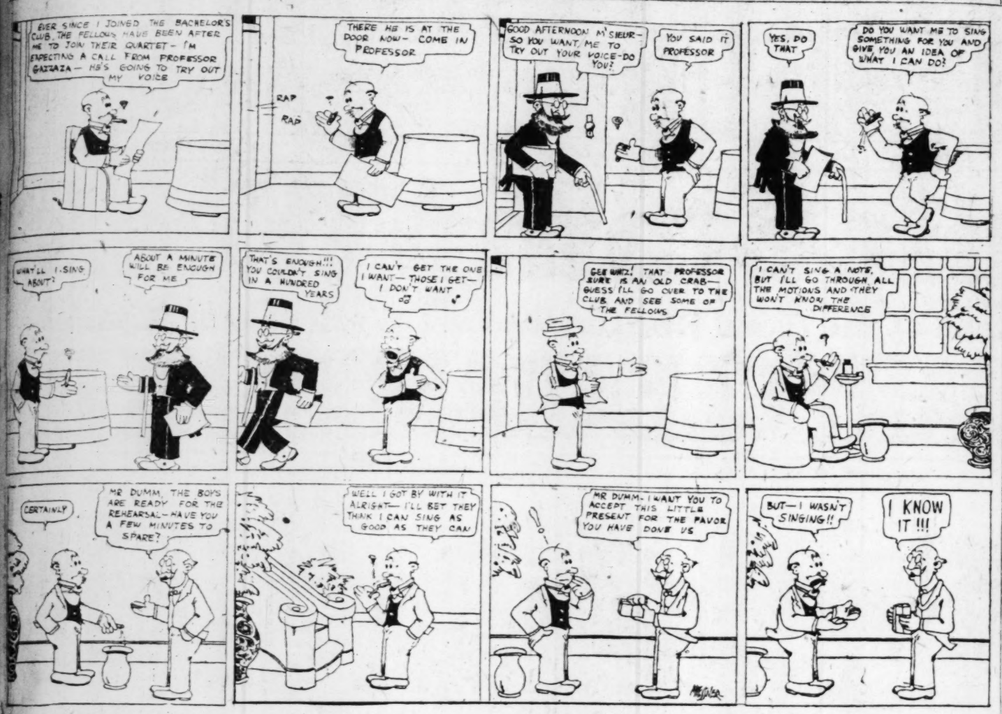
Winners of 11th 'Tangled Comic' Competition

List of Successful Solvers in the Twelfth of Series Will Be Printed Next Sunday



THE word "alright" was the stumbling block for many solvers of the eleventh Tangled Comic. While this word is frequently used it is not in any standard dictionary save one, and there it is followed by the explanation "erroneous form of all right."

There were a number of solutions which, save for this failure to correct a misspelled word would have entitled the authors to prizes.

The list of words spelled incorrectly is as follows:

bachalor for bachelor.
they're for there
hunderd for hundred certainly for certainly rehearsel for rehearsal
alright for all right

The Best Cough Syrup Is Home-Made

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? Thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will soon earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

New light on some of your common daily ailments that supplants former medical findings

How modern science now traces scores of our common discomforts to simple lack of "Acid Balance" in the stomach that determines amazingly the way we feel —the simple way recently discovered to overcome it

By F. MARTIN DE BRINON

THIS throws a new light on some of your common daily "ailments" and disorders.

On why you lack a constant flow of energy and vigor—get up two mornings in three feeling unrefreshed and logy.

On how to get relief from those frequent headches.

On how to overcome bowel irregularities, constipation, "sour" stomach, "gas," etc.

On how, literally, to make a new person of yourself.

* * * *

As part of a nation-wide movement for better health, a test is being offered. A test based on the method, today the most widely prescribed by medical authority in the world. Note the coupon below.

ACID—that's the trouble
A lack of acid balance in your stomach
You must re-establish it

Almost 80% of headaches, biliousness and stomach discomforts are now traced to a lack of acid balance in the stomach and to certain bowel conditions.

That means an abnormal acid condition from the food fermentation that fosters scores of stomach and systemic disorders. You must neutralize it. Former methods took only bowel evacuation into count. And that is where they failed.

That discovery has changed former conceptions of stomach and intestinal treatment.

Has changed the medical view of purges and laxatives, of the use of calomel, salts, etc. Has supplanted previous scientific findings.

Purging won't do it—drug dosing may tend to intensify it

Old-time methods call for purging. Others for pepsin, for calomel—soda.

Now, in acidity, these have been found inadequate.

Frequent drug dosage tended often to increase this condition, rather than to correct it.

Now new methods—based on a new form of magnesia

To meet that condition, men of medicine turned to a new form of magnesia—Mintrated Cream of Magnesia—that acts in these distinct ways, yet at once.

It combats absorption into the blood of toxic poisons from the intestinal tract that keep people below normal and constantly ailing.

It neutralizes excess stomach acids, thus aiding in re-establishing correct acid balance. It relieves the intestinal tract. And it acts to expel stomach gases as well.

Magnesia alone was incapable of effecting all those results. It lacked the stimulus of an active carminative—(a substance to expel gas.)

Now, in this new form, carminative mintration has been achieved. And that is making the use of this basic remedy a national scientific topic. It brings to thousands a new freedom from ailments and discomforts.

Make the test

Now a bottle is offered to you at our expense. Obtain it. Note the simple directions that come with it.

Then see what a difference a single day will make.

Note the freedom from gassy, sour stomach. From constipation—the almost clocklike regularity of your bowels.

Mark the relief from mental inertia, from the systematic poisons. See what a world of difference it will make in your general health and feeling.

IN STUDIO AND GALLERY

HARLAN FRASER, like many another young and extremely promising St. Louis artist of unusual ability, has decided upon migration from the St. Louis hearthstone. The depletion of St. Louis talent is invariably felt by the activities in which the migrators were formerly interested, but this disadvantage is thrust into the background in the face of the anticipated advantages to the itinerants.

An interesting and notable, yes, illustrious account might easily be compiled containing the history of Fraser's predecessors, many of them have brought high honor and distinction upon this well known midwest source of talent, ability and genius in the various arts. These encouraging precedents, however, are not the sustaining points in Fraser's certain success. With no such antecedents whatsoever, his career would progress with equal momentum. A scintillating mind, an inexhaustible fund of "personality," an innate grace, a natural sense of beauty and finesse and an inborn ability in any of the arts are the basic principles upon which his success will mature.

The Artists' Guild, where Fraser's participation in amateur theatricals and his occasional entries into various exhibitions of paintings have been so sincerely appreciated and admired, and Washington University and the St. Louis School of Fine Arts, his alma mater, and the present location of his occupation as instructor, will promptly feel his absence. Friends of the young artist and even acquaintances of short standing will miss his presence.

Fraser anticipates leaving St. Louis about Feb. 15 to go to Chicago where he will establish his studio and make his home.

FIFTEEN paintings by Eugene Francis Savage, whose beautiful decoration, "The Expulsion," is now owned by the City Art Museum, will comprise the major special exhibition for the month of February in that institution. The exhibit comes here from Chicago, its first destination on a small circuit outlined by the artist. Savage's technique and general manner of work prevents prolific production and so this display will have especial significance for those who wish to more closely study his works.

A minor but very interesting exhibition to appear simultaneously with the Savage show is that of 42 illuminated manuscripts exemplifying contemporary caligraphy in England. The exhibition is circulated among prominent art institutions in America by the Society of Scribes and Illuminators of Great Britain.

Both exhibits will be installed by Feb. 2 and will continue until the end of the month.

TWENTY-NINE St. Louis artists' works have been selected to form a traveling exhibition sponsored and circulated by the American Federation of Arts in Washington, D. C. A very fair representation of St. Louis art is assembled, the show being adequate to give a comprehensive idea of local work. Artists whose works were selected are as follows: Barnett, Bauer, Berdanier, Berninghaus, Brown, Carpenter, Cherry, Dawson-Watson, Eppensteiner, Fenske, Finkelnburg, Galt, Gleeson, Gleyre, Goetsch, Kajiwara, Kissack, Lodwick, MacNutt, More, McColl, Phelps, Summa, Vogel, Waldeck, Mildred Carpenter, Wuerpel, Loeffler and Maury.

Carpenter's painting "The Return of the Hebrews from Babylonian Captivity," was included in the Guild's Open Competitive Show just concluded. Its strength and color will be easily remembered.

Kajiwara's beautiful, decorative portrait, "Lucretia," represents this artist in the exhibit.

The still life decoration by Scott MacNutt, which was included in the recent Guild show, does not represent the artists' work in portraiture, but does illustrate his ability to paint well. We greatly admired this canvas when it was recently shown, and wish to take this opportunity of remarking upon its admirable composition, color key and technical handling all of which are so far removed from the artist's usual style employed in his portraits.

"Stolen Fruit," by Gisella Loeffler, the gleaming poster-picture which, in our estimation, overshadows the majority of her other recent works, was the one of her group selected for this show.

Emily Phelps' decorative still life, "A Piece of Chintz," was selected to represent her work.

"THE FRIENDS OF LOCAL ART," a St. Louis society composed of 30 public-spirited citizens who are interested in the promotion of artistic interests in the city from the standpoints both of the artists and of the local educational necessities, have recently purchased an important painting for use in the public schools. Each year one prominent picture by a St. Louis artist is purchased by the society and given to the Board of Education, which exhibits the painting throughout the various schools and finally decides upon its permanent destination in one of the edifices.

Soak Your Stiff Swollen Joints With Wonderful New Oil

New Discovery Brings Quick Relief for Joint Sufferers

If you are one of the thousands who suffer from stiff, swollen and enlarged joints, you can now get relief, as any druggist will tell you about Buhler Oil, the wonderful new discovery which soaks right into the affected joint and brings quick relief.

The wife of a court officer in St. Paul, had been afflicted with arthritis for eight years and suffered terribly with pains in her knee joints. She had tried about everything and failed to get relief. After using one bottle of Buhler oil, she wrote it was the finest thing she had ever tried—the only thing that had ever given her relief.

Swollen, painful and distorted stiff joints, whether it be in the ankle, knee, thigh, shoulder, wrist, elbow or fingers of your hand, are due to some infection which has involved the tissue lining of the joints. This, in most instances, can be traced to internal poisons, such as a blind pus pocket in a tooth or a diseased tonsil which gives off poisons which are carried in the blood to the joints, thereby setting up inflammation of the delicate membrane lining of the joints and causing the joints to become enlarged, swollen and extremely painful. Buhler Oil, when applied to the affected joints, is readily absorbed by the tissues and soaks right into the aching joint, neutralizing the pain-causing poisons in much the same way as milk of magnesia neutralizes an acid stomach, giving relief.

Get a bottle of Buhler Oil today and try a few applications in one evening. It gives good results because it soaks right in and contains a certain ingredient which at once penetrates to the poison-infected membrane in the pain-causing, swollen joint. Your druggist has it, and we guarantee it to help you or it costs you nothing. For sale by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Stores, Keiffer Drug Stores, Rieder's Drug Stores and Johnson Bros. Drug Co.

INSURANCE VOID ON AUTO WITHOUT TITLE CERTIFICATE

Missouri Court Virtually Makes Bill of Sale Worthless as Car Ownership Evidence.

Automobile owners in Missouri who have bought new cars withodt registering title with the Secretary of State, or have purchased used cars without getting from the sellers the certificates of title that should have passed with the sales, are out of luck because of a decision that has just been handed down by the Missouri Supreme Court. Their insurance is not collectible and they have no valid title to their cars, unless they procure the certificates. The decision will result in much trouble for those who have been careless, but it is expected to aid materially the efforts to reduce the number of automobile thefts.

Effect of the Decision.

The decision was made through the action of the Automobile Club of Missouri, which induced the high court to review a decision of the Court of appeals at Springfield which had held that any informal document which substantially complied with the law was sufficient to pass title to an automobile.

The following statement on the decision and its effect was given out by the legal department of the Automobile Club of Missouri:

"The law of Missouri requires owners of automobiles to register title to their cars with the Secretary of State and to receive a certificate of title from that officer. The law also provides that when a registered car is sold the certificate of title shall be transferred by the seller to the purchaser and a new certificate obtained from the Secretary of State.

"The validity of this law has recently been sustained by the Supreme Court in the case of the State of Missouri ex rel. Connecticut Fire Insurance Co. of Hartford vs. Cox. The court vigorously holds that the sale of a car without a strict compliance with the certificate of title law is fraudulent and void.

"In that particular case a Mr. Howell purchased a car and had it insured but, instead of having the certificate of title transferred and a new one issued by the Secretary of State, he accepted from the seller a bill of sale which contained substantially the same information required by law to be contained in the certificate of title. The car was destroyed by fire and Howell sued to recover on the insurance policy.

"The Supreme Court held that Howell did not have an insurable interest in the car and, therefore, could not recover because he did not have a certificate of title issued by the Secretary of State.

"In its opinion, the Court points out that the law was intended as a police regulation for the benefit of the public and to prevent the theft of cars, and, therefore, should be strictly construed and enforced.

"There has been much laxity in the past in observance of this law.

"Many used cars are sold without a proper passing of the certificate of title.

"Under the law and the decision construing it, no person now has a valid title to his automobile unless he has a certificate of title issued by the Secretary of State.

"Unde the decision, no person can recover from an insurance company on his policy, unless he has a certificate of title for the car issued in his name. Also, no person has a valid title to an automobile in his possession, unless he has a certificate of title.

ALL FLORIDA ROUTES REPORTED IMPASSABLE AS RESULT OF RAINS

REPORTS are that heavy rains have made impassable sections in Georgia, of all the roads into Florida. Tourists are warned to wait a few days, until the roads dry out, before trying to go from Savannah to Jacksonville, Macon, Ga., to Waycross, Macon to Valdosta, or Augusta to Waycross. Road conditions should be nearly normal within three or four days, unless there is more rain.

CAR LICENSE LAW DEFECT IS TURNED AGAINST THIEVES

Act's Failure to Increase Dealers' Fees to Be Remedied by Missouri Legislature.

The discovery that the new law increasing automobile license fees failed to raise those for dealers is resulting in making the way of car thieves harder even, as it is inconveniencing legitimate automobile dealers. All applications for dealers' licenses have been held up by Secretary of State Becker until the emergency measure, to rectify the omission in the law, is passed by the Legislature. Becker is seizing the opportunity to have every dealer application scrutinized with extra care, in an effort to prevent criminals from getting dealer plates.

More applications for dealer licenses than ever before are coming into the derartment, Becker said. He added that under the present law a great many persons, such as owners of repair garages, automobile wash racks and filling stations, were applying for dealer licenses. These are much cheaper than a regular license, costing $10 for two sets of plates and $5 for each additional set after the first two sets. Under the measure to be drafted, the rate will be increased to $21.50 for the first two sets and $10.50 for each additional set thereafter, the Secretary of State said.

Help to Car Thieves.

The worst feature of the matter, the Secretary of State added, is that criminals and automobile thieves open temporary auto sales agencies as dealers, get the dealer plates, then close up and disappear. The present law is defective in this respect, Secretary Becker said. He is investigating every person who applies for dealer license plates to see if he is entitled to receive them.

The St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association wrote to Secretary Becker protesting against an increase in dealer plates. Secretary of State Becker replied as follows:

"I have your letter of Jan. 21 in which you protest against the Legislature raising the price of dealer plates. Of course, you represent the Automobile Dealers' Association, and, being at that end of the game, you do not understand what we are up against. We have discovered that there are a lot of crooked automobile dealers in Missouri, and that these crooked dealers have been getting dealer plates for unlawful purpdses. This must be stopped if this Legislature can stop it.

Crooked Dealer Applications.

"If the public knew, when Proposition No. 3 was being submitted to the people, that prices of dealer plates had purposely not been changed, there would have been a lot of opposition. That sort of a proposition is in conflict with the fundamental proposition of the Constitution of the State of Missouri that all property must be taxed equally.

"It has become absolutely necessary to have this law changed, and the Legislature proposes to change it at once. We are holding up all applications for dealer plates, because we have been instructed to do so by members of the Legislature, in order to give the Legislature the opportunity to pass a law increasing the price of dealer plates, and in order to throw restrictions around the issuance of dealer plates so that crooked dealers cannot get them.

"We are overwhelmed with applications for dealer plates, now that proposition No. 5 is a part of our law. We have examined a large number of these new applications, and find that most of these applicants are not dealing in automobiles at all. A man with a wash rack thinks he is entitled to a dealers' license.

"We are asking the Police Department of St. Louis to pass upon applications for automobile dealers' licenses, because of the many crooked dealer applications coming in from the City of St. Louis."

STOP, LOOK AND LISTEN LAW FOR MOTORISTS IS PROPOSED IN OKLAHOMA

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 24. A BILL embodying a law requiring motorists to stop before crossing railroad tracks, similar to laws enacted in Arkansas, Louisiana and Mississippi, has been prepared for submission by the Corporation Commission to the Legislature. It requires the driver of a motor vehicle to make a full stop not less than 10 feet from any railroad or interurban track before driving across it, and to look and listen for trains. The law would not apply where flagmen or automatic signals were maintained.

MORE TROLLEY LINES ARE REPLACED BY BUSSES

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 24.—After having transported passengers through the streets of Rutland, the second largest city in Vermont, for 40 years, the trollery cars of that city have been withdrawn in favor of busses. This eliminates electric railways as a transportation factor in and around Rutland, other lines connecting Rutland with neighboring towns have been supplanted previously by bus service.

Among other trolley lines which have been displaced by busses in the last month is one between Providence, R. I., and North Scituate, Mass. The operating company has been authorized to operate busses as a substitute service.

The electric cars which formerly connected Lunenburg and Fitchburg, Mass., were abandoned last month and the Nassau County (N. Y.) Railway Co. stopped its cars on New Year's eve after having carried passengers between Sea Cliff and Glen Cove, L. I., for 22 years. Independent operators are now furnishing substitute bus service in both cases.

Among the latest cities on the Pacific Coast to abandon street cars in favor of busses are Astoria, Ore., and Santa Cruz, Cal.

Something Not to Do.

Where the emergency brake operates on the propeller shaft just rear of the transmission never apply it quickly when you can just as well come to a gradual stop with the service brakes and then apply the emergency. Many drivers pull up on the emergency quickly with the result that the whole car rocks backward and forward for an instant. This adds a more loose motion to the pinion and differential.

Another Good Rule.

It is a good rule to press out the clutch pedal when using the starter, as a means of saving the starter motor the work of turning over the main driving and countershaft gears of the transmission, but this is also a safety feature. If for any reason the gears are not in neutral, the operation of the starter cannot possibly start the car itself when the clutch is disengaged.

Car of Only 16 H. P. Runs 104 Miles in Hour — 12-H. P. Car Averages 85 M. P. H. for 800 Miles.

By a Special Correspondent.

LONDON, Jan. 6.—(By Mail.)—Despite adverse weather conditions the year 1924 was remarkable for the feats accomplished by British motor cars and British drivers in track and road events. The existence of Brooklands race track near London has allowed British cars to be tested for maximum speed, and it is now generally recognized that extreme speed constitutes the most searching test of a car.

British motors, as a class, belong to the small engine type, the cylinders being of small bore, with a relatively long stroke. High efficiency is aimed at and to obtain big power and reliable and smooth running at high engine speed over long periods is among the ideals of British engineers.

A heavy revenue tax is placed on engines according to their horsepower, as calculated by the bore of the engine cylinders, and this system of taxation has tended in some degree to keep British engines of small dimensions. So en-

ANNUAL AUTO SHOW OPENED IN CHICAGO

Virtually Every Car Made in This Country Will Be on Display.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Jan. 24.—Car manufacturers are looking forward with keenest interest to developments at the Chicago automobile show, which opened in the Coliseum this evening. This show is expected to establish a record in sales to dealers, as well as in attendance by the public. The manufacturers feel that the Chicago show, above all others, will prove the true indication as to the public's attitude toward the 1925 automobile and the ones that will be the best sellers.

Virtually every make of American car will be on display, with hundreds of attractive models.

The setting for the Silver Jubilee celebration is in keeping with the spirit of the occasion. A triumphal tower in the center of the exposition building dominates the scene, flashing its floods of light to the farthest corner, to the panels of buff, green and silver with a renaissance border of Louis XVI design. This tower, reaching to the roof of the Coliseum, embodies in the main the features of the Tower of Pharos at Alexandria, built by Sostratus in the third century, B. C., and regarded as one of the Seven Wonders of the ancient world. Upward of 560 flood lights, in various colors and hues, are used in the illumination. Each night 42 electricians are required to operate the switchboards. The History of Transportation is depicted on the tower. The dome is covered with silver leaf. Within the tower is a secret music chamber.

Hundreds of accessories are shown. A whole day or more could profitably be passed inspecting them.

The show will reopen tomorrow at 10 o'clock and will close at 11 p. m. These will be the hours for the balance of the week.

statement issued for the council, "to know what is the chief factor, or factors, in accidental fatalities which have occurred on our streets and highways. Most of the good results attained in industry through accident prevention campaigns were secured through comprehensive, intensive, continuous programs based on the causes of accidents. In many ways the street and highway accident problem can be compared to the industrial one.

Study Inquest Testimony.

Much time has been spent in the office of the Safety Council the past few weeks in analyzing the testimony in transcripts of the Coroner's inquests into the 187 motor vehicle fatalities in 1924. The analysis covers time of day, age of drivers and victims, causes of accidents and many other facts. The Statistical Committee of the conference will meet to study and further analyze this data and will be the first committee of the conference to make its report.

The Traffic Control Committee will deal with a problem that is largely a police function. The Police Department recognizes that public support of its efforts to safely control traffic is not only valuable but necessary if the best results are to be obtained. Reasonable, effective traffic laws, speed limits, pedestrian lanes, effectiveness and location of automatic traffic signals, stop signs, street markings, safety islands, segregation of traffic, parking, proper signals for motorists, control of mass traffic, proper control systems at grade crossings, control of pedestrians and licensing of motorists, are some of the problems which will be studied by this committee.

Street and Road Planning.

Only a small percentage of street and highway accidents can be attributed directly to construction and engineering defects. So rapid has been development of motor traffic, and so rapid will its growth be, that this subject must be considered in anticipation of a much greater volume and density of traffic. Congestion multiplies the dangers of the street. Safety requires that these increasing currents of traffic be able to flow smoothly and continuously with a minimum of conflicts between currents.

If hazards to life and property are to be decreased on our streets growing volume of vehicular traffic clearly indicates that street and highway systems must be carefully planned and individual thoroughfares must be designed to provide for the traffic needs of the future.

Authorities agree that street and highway hazards are due chiefly to vehicular traffic and that these hazards can be greatly reduced by a proper arrangement of streets and highways.

Elimination or improvement of grade crossings, resurfacing of streets and highways, proper street illumination, creation of by-pass highways and creation of a comprehensive traffic and thoroughfare plan, are some of the matters to be considered by this committee.

As to Public Relations.

"Unless the users of the streets and highways, including both motorists and pedestrians are familiar with the plans and recommendations of this conference, it will be difficult to get the best results. After the conference has met the Public Relations Committee will continue to function in assisting the other conference committees, informing the public of measures effected.

"National authorities agree that strict enforcement of traffic laws and vigorous prosecution of the offenders are the fundamentals which must be secured before other methods of reducing highway accidents can be truly effective. Unless the public co-operates there will be must waste effort. Law enforcement must prevail before the public or the reckless part of it at least, will see the wisdom of law observance and the folly of law violation.

Many phases of this porblem will be carefully considered by this committee so the result of its work will show the existing situation, expose many apparent and some covered weaknesses, and recommend ways of giving St. Louis an effective law enforcement program."

"The Mayor, Board of Police Commissioners and Traffic Council, have sponsored our plan and are enthusiastic over the prospect of making a comprehensive analysis of our local traffic problems," said Oliver Remmers, president of the Safety Council, in a recent statement.

"The mounting toll of motor vehicle fatalities and the enormous increase in personal injuries on our streets are a problem that commands serious consideration from the best minds in our community.

"The traffic problem is admitted to be the biggest one facing the large cities of this country.

"The local conference which we will call will be the first of its kind ever held in this country."

road, or a total of 194 westward from Memphis, and the road from Benton to Hot Springs is mostly hard foundation. The Benton gap always has been the worst on this road and now, with this section paved, the Little Rock-Hot Springs trip is much easier than in the past.

Bridges Replace Ferries.

It is planned to have the pavement completed all the way to Hot Springs in time for next summer's tourist traffic. This will mean 224 miles of all-weather highway westward from Memphis, which is accessible from St. Louis and Illinois cities over concrete roads to Cairo and all-weather roads thence through Sikeston, Mo., and Blytheville, Ark., except for a few miles of graded dirt between Hayti, Mo., and the Missouri-Arkansas line.

Completion of the Memphis-Little Rock highway sees the end of ferries over the White and Cache rivers that long have been a vexation to tourists because of steep, slippery and dangerous approaches. The length of the White River bridge and approaches at De Valls Bluff, including three 500-foot spans, is 6700 feet. The center span, weighing 200 tons, is a lift operated by a motor on two 80-foot towers. This is a toll bridge, the charge being $1 for auto and driver, with privilege of free return within 24 hours. The Cache bridge is free. Each ferry charged 50 cents.

Indications are that Arkansas will build 2000 miles of roads this year, making the total at the end of 1925 about 6000 of improved highways. State Highway Engineer R. C. Limerick states that 1596 miles of improved roads were completed in 1924, but his estimate for 1925 is in excess of 2000 miles.

Up to Dec. 1, 1926, there had been completed in the State a total of 615 miles of all kinds of improved roads. In 1921, the big road-building year, 2246 miles were built. In 1922, the figure fell to 954, and in 1923, to 725 miles. With the new statewide highway law in operation on a half year's revenue, 1924 showed a jump to 1596 miles, and 1925, with a full year's revenue, and a citizenship aroused to the possibilities of good roads, will show even greater results.

The State's improved highways include eight types—graded, graveled, macadam, surface treated gravel, surface treated macadam, asphaltic macadam, asphaltic concrete, and concrete. The type with the largest mileage is gravel, of which there are 3071 miles. There are 2144 miles of graded roads, 246 miles of macadam, 183 miles of asphaltic macadam, 333 of asphaltic concrete and 192 of concrete.

It is estimated that a total of $8,900,000 has been expended this year on highway work, and that the expenditures for 1925 will be between $7,000,000 and $8,000,000. There has been a total of 5000 men employed during the greater part of this year. This will be reduced in 1925 to between 3500 and 4000, the reduction being due to the completion of some of the major projects.

Worth Remembering.

When the clutch chatters as you are trying to coast through traffic you can stop the annoyance by coasting in neutral rather than with the clutch disengaged. It is better for the clutch and gears to resort to this expedient, although it must not be considered a cure for the trouble.

Did You Know—

That if the engine has a tendency to overheat it is best to use glycerine and alcohol in equal parts, added to the water in the proportion needed, when preparing for freezing weather? This combination raises the boiling point, whereas alcohol alone added to water lowers it, thus encouraging overheating.

A stock Cleveland Six made this famous 9½ mile California climb in 24 minutes 47.04 seconds—reducing the previous record by more than a minute and capturing the coveted Los Angeles Evening Express Trophy.

and Mt. Diablo!

A second new power and performance record was hung up when a stock Cleveland Six hurtled to the top of Mt. Diablo—covering the tortuous 11.6 mile roadway in 22 minutes 36⅗ seconds.

and Mt. Baldy!

With gears locked in high, a stock Cleveland Six reached the summit of Mt. Baldy in 14 minutes 31⅗ seconds. By this unexampled feat of high gear power and flexibility, more than 2 minutes were slashed from the existing record and the Pomona (Cal.) Bulletin Trophy was won.

and Frisco to Portland Run!

Driven through blinding storms, a Cleveland Six sedan traveled between San Francisco and Portland, Oregon in 21 hours and 29 minutes. This new road record lowered by more than 4 hours the schedule of the crack Shasta Limited, famous Pacific Coast flyer between these cities.

and 1000 Miles in 848 Minutes!

On the Culver City (Cal.) Speedway a stock Cleveland Six averaged over 70 miles an hour for 14 continuous hours without mechanical adjustments or even tire trouble. Never has any stock car given a more brilliant exhibition of speed and ability to withstand terrific punishment.

BY establishing five sensational new performance records in six weeks, the Cleveland Six demonstrated qualities of power, speed, stamina and roadability that have no parallel in motordom today!

WOULD MAKE STATE ROADS BOULEVARDS

Illinois Senator's Bill Requires Side Road Traffic to Halt Before Entering.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Jan. 24.—Designation of State bond issue concrete roads in Illinois as "boulevards" or "arterial highways" is made in a bill prepared by Senator J. L. Deck of the Macon County Senatorial District, which he will shortly introduce. He believes that traffic from intersecting highways should automatically halt before entering upon the hard roads and not advance until it is seen that the road is clear.

Senator Deck states that he has found a growing sentiment throughout the State for such action. "Something must be done to prevent the collisions which have become frequent at the intersections of county or township roads with the new State highways," he said. "If such a law had been in effect and properly observed, Gov. Small would have escaped his recent serious accident near Pontiac, in which his automobile was struck by a fast-moving car which came up from a side road without diminishing speed as it reached the main road. It is becoming a steadily increasing menace as our hard road system is increased and cars from the side roads enter the stream of traffic upon the main roads without halting. It is necessary to public safety that traffic rules of this nature be inforced in rural districts, the same as in cities.

State roads are through highways and it is my belief that traffic over them should have the right of way. I am confident that fully 10 lives will be saved annually if this measure is adopted, enforced and universally respected. I personally know of a dozen accidents during the last year which would not have occurred had cars approaching a main road from a side road halted until the way was clear. I have been assured of the support of a number of motor clubs and I believe the public generally will indorse the bill and ask their representatives to vote for it.

John Smith and His Car

SMITH'S plan for finding his car differed from mine. He wanted to hire a taxi and give chase, but my plan was to go over to the police department and review the list of recent automobile losses.

"The thief will probably be in Alaska by night," Smith complained. "That car of mine could show speed."

"Your car," I said, "will probably be standing in some side street garage being repainted and camouflaged. They will drive it somewhere else, but not until they have destroyed the usual means of identifying it."

"Then why not search the garages and repair shops?" Smith asked.

"The unscrupulous fellows in the business would get wise and tip off the crooks," I explained. "The car would be juggled around so that we would never be able to find it. We must first find the thief. Then it will be a simple matter to find the car. Unless I am a pretty poor prophet the thief who took your care will be on the job in front of some other bank tomorrow. His specialty is 'bank' cars. His plan is to study the habits of one particular motorist—a chap like you, for instance, who does the same thing regularly, but forgets to lock the car the one time when he should remember to.

"Now take this," I added, pointing to a list of cars on a card which the clerk in the detective office handed me. A particular item read: "N—— Sedan, Value $4000. Stolen from in front of Mutual Bank." "This happened a month ago. Isn't it about time for this crook to be working in front of the Mutual Bank again?"

Smith thought it quite possible. But again he displayed a desire to leave the matter to the insurance company.

"My advice to you is not to report this to the company," I said. "Make a report to your agent, but ask him not to press the matter for a few days. The company is now deliberating as to whether they ought to overlook your forgetting to equip the car with an extinguisher. If you now report that the car has been stolen they will be inclined to conclude that you are careless—perhaps purposely careless."

So according to agreement we pulled up to the curb opposite the Mutual Bank Building in my car the following day. Being noon hour it was difficult indeed to single out any one person from the crowd as the thief we were looking for. Any one of a number of men might have been observing the habits of some one motorist in particular. After waiting 20 minutes the arrival of a certain car, however, attracted our attention. The driver drove up to the curb, switched off the engine and jumped out. We watched him until he disappeared through the doorway of the bank. A moment later a short, stout man emerged from the crowd and stepped into the car.

"That's not the man we're looking for," Smith said, as I cranked my motor.

"That's not the man who owns that car!" I retorted. "There must be several of them working this game. We'll follow."

We did. It was not hard work, either. And apparently the thief never suspected that we were always just a few cars behind him. Finally right in the heart of the automobile section of the city he turned into a side street. I drew up to the curb there, jumped out and followed him mith my eyes. Noting what shop he turned into, I stepped into a cigar store and phoned to one of the detectives at city hall. A half hour later we had not only located the car just stolen, but Smith's car as well.

"There's my car!" Smith exclaimed, upon seeing his old faithful.

"Can you identify it?" the detective asked.

The garageman smiled. No wonder! Not a number corresponded with those originally on Smith's car. Smith was convinced new preparedness pays. He recalled that before he had taken his car from the dealer I had suggested that he put some secret identification marks on the car.

"You will find my initials scratched in the cover of the distributer," he said. The detective investigated and reported that he found the letters "J. S."

"They stand for 'John Smith,'" I explained. "This car was stolen from him yesterday."

The garageman ceased smiling. It was the detective's turn. And Smith's.

"Cannon Ball" Baker Beats Time of New York-St. Louis Train

"CANNON BALL" BAKER, noted cross-continental driver, who holds many records with automobiles and motor cycles, drove into St. Louis Monday in one of the new Rickenbacker sixes in which he had just beaten the time of the Pennsylvania Railroad's crack 24-hour New York-St. Louis train by two hours and 14 minutes. The actual running time of the Rickenbachker from city to city was only 20 hours and 57 minutes as compared with 23 hours and 11 minutes for the train. The run was made after midnight on a number of days in order to avoid traffic and consequent danger of accident.

Leaving New York at 11:17 p. m., Jan. 12, Baker stopped each morning at some Rickenbacker distributor along the route, resuming his run the next night. As his speedometer when he reached St. Louis at 5:11 a. m. Monday showed a total of 979.1 miles, his speed averaged just 42 miles an hour. Baker was accompanied by H. F. Van Horn and a mechanic. He drove over the Lincoln Highway from New York to Gettysburg, Pa., where he turned south onto the National Old Trail highway, which traverses the Uniontown grades over the Alleghenies. So icy were the roads that he had to use chains on all four wheels from New York to Dayton, O. On the slippery mountain grades, Baker said, he had the Rickenbacker running 45 miles an hour in second gear. The actual running time of this trip, he declared, beat any record he had made hitherto with automobile or motor cycle. Baker stopped while here at the Diesing Motor Sales Co., St. Louis district distributor of Rickenbacker sixes and eights. He always uses Veedol oil, and got a fresh supply from the Automobile Gasoline Co., local Veedol distributer.

7 H.-P. Cars Make 70 M. P. H.

As the roads of England are the finest in the world as regards surface and condition, there is a general desire for good average speed even from the smallest car. Thus we find vehicles of 7 h.-p. fitted with four-seater bodies, and expected to show good speed and hill-climbing powers, and we have racing tests at Brooklands of 7 h.-p. cars in which speeds of over 70 miles per hour have been recorded.

This testing for speed and endurance of small motors has done much to improve the breed, and it sets up a standard of quality in material and engineering which has been most helpful to the reputation of British cars all over the world. In addition to Brooklands track races, there are many stock car contests held by the motor clubs. But as road racing is not allowed over English roads, the club events usually take the form of hill climbs or of reliability trials at a set maximum speed. On various stretches of beach, however, unlimited speed trials have been held.

Parry-Thomas Is Driving Star.

The other activities of British motorists in 1924 have consisted in driving British or other cars in events held on the Continent. Here again we have evidence of the progress made by the British. Although much handicapped in these contests through lack of road racing facilities at home, they have gained a high percentage of success.

Of the individual efforts the most notable during the year have been those of J. G. Parry-Thomas, who with his Leyland eight holds the lion's share of the records. The success of Thomas is well deserved, as he has made a fine art both of tuning up his car and of getting the best out of it when driving. He also has made a minute study of Brooklands track, in which he has made so many records, and he can cut the margin of safety finer than perhaps any other driver.

Parry-Thomas' feats with his Leyland eight include: Five miles at 122.86 miles per hour; 10 miles at 120.46 miles per hour; 2 miles, average of 125.96 miles per hour both ways of course; lap of Brooklands track at 128.36 miles per hour; 3 kilometers at Bologne at 128 miles per hour at Brooklands track, 50 miles at 11.67 miles per hour, and 50 kilometers at 112.18 miles per hour. At Brooklands he averaged 117.5 miles per hour in an eight-mile race, at the time a world's record for racing.

Eldridge, with his Fiat, had the better of Parry-Thomas when he made five kilometers at Montlhery track from a standing start in 1 minute 27 1-5 seconds as against his rival's 1m. 27 4-5s. Eldridge was victor over Parry-Thomas at Montlhery, in a long-awaited 15-kilometer match race, but the result was generally held to be inconclusive. Parry-Thomas got off to a lead in his Leyland, but lost a tire and Eldridge passed him, winning at an average of 121 miles per hour.

Capt. Malcolm Campbell, another noted driver, put his 350-horsepower 12-cylinder Sunbeam over the Pendine Sands at the rate of 146.16 miles per hour. (A speed of 150 miles an hour was claimed for Capt. Campbell, but apparently was not given official sanction.)

It is to be noted that car speeds have progressed more rapidly than track or road design, and there is consequently an increasing difficulty for the driver to hold the course. The old type of just splendidly daring driving is giving way to the men who apply more scientific methods to the task of attaining the highest possible speed on a course. The engineering skill of Thomas is another great factor in his success.

Thrilling Road Race.

Road racing cannot be made such an exact science, however, and in the French road races new courses are selected each year, with natural difficulties which increase with the ever growing speed of cars. Four-wheel brakes have helped to reduce the dangers in some respects, although they tempt drivers to take new risks in the desire to derive full advantage from the greater stopping power. But if the brakes fail——!

One of the most thrilling road events of the year was the 387-mile race over bad Spanish roads at San Sebastian, and this resulted in a great victory for the Sunbeam car, which ran at an average speed of 64 miles an hour, a rate which is truly extraordinary if we take the nature of the roads into account.

Another road victory of high merit was the 24-hour race at Le Mans, won by the Bentley car at an average of over 53 miles an hour. Two drivers, Duff and Clement, shared the honors of this trying contest. A Sunbeam won the 100-mile race at Miramas with the average of 93 miles an hour.

Teamwork Race Record.

While races on a track are less exciting and sporting than racing on a road course, there has been excellent sport at Brookland. In the 200-mile race there was made a record in teamwork which will take much beating.

Three Darracq cars took part, with a large number of other competitors. So confident were the Darracq team—Guinness, Seagrave and Duller—that they planned to finish in the pre-arranged order of first, second and third. This they did with differences in average speed measured in hundredth parts of a mile. The manner in which they kept their positions throughout a hard-fought race run at over 100 miles an hour never has been equaled. The first Darracq car averaged 102.27 miles per hour; the second 102.25, and the third 102.24 miles per hour for the 200 miles.

High Speed by Light Cars.

Of the other cars which have scored at Brooklands there is special interest in the little 7-h.-p. Austin. In its commercial form this is a popular and very lively car on the road. Prepared for track work, with an engine of the same dimensions, it has done 50 miles at an average of over 77

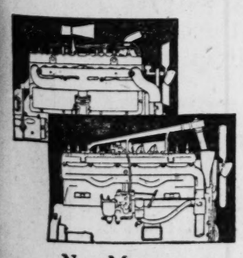
Why NEW PAIGE and NEW JEWETT

Have New Smoothness—New Ability—New Comfort—New Silence—New Dependability

THERE are reasons for these new qualities in the New Paige and New Jewett. And there are reasons why these new qualities are permanent. Certain brand-new features have been added. Certain old features—proved satisfactory in our years of use—have been retained, with improvements where possible for even finer service. We did not sacrifice proved goodness to cry "new." It is the combination of these features, new and old, that makes a new engineering achievement possible—Permanent Perfected Performance. Besides all this we have created twelve new beautiful bodies—with new grace of line and finish and equipment.

Paige and Jewett prices have not been increased as they might justly be to cover these improvements. Judged by comparable cars—the New Paige and New Jewett are actually underpriced $150 to $200.



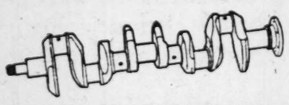
New Motors

New Paige and New Jewett motors are sixes—perfected in smoothness and simplicity. More cylinders would just add complicating parts.

New ability is produced by piston displacement adequate for the weight of the cars. They are not skimpy-sized motors that must run at wearing speed to get enough power. They last more miles, years.

And they give a sure ability that cannot be produced by any other engineering means. A range of ability unmatched for hill-climbing, quick getaway, hard pulling.

All this without ever overtaxing, straining these powerful motors.



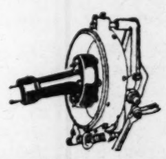
New Balanced Crankshafts

Balanced crankshafts give new smoothness to Paige and Jewett. Vibration cannot be detected—regardless of speed. Silken smoothness at all speeds.

Silent Chain Drive

Paige and Jewett motors are built with silent chain drive for pump and timing shafts. Chains wear, stretch after a while. So we provide an automatic take-up sprocket that keeps a constant tension on the chain, completely offsetting the effects of wear (stretch), preventing back-lash and retaining timing accuracy. Silence is permanent.

This chain drive was successfully used for two years in Paige. Now, refined, it is in the New Jewett.



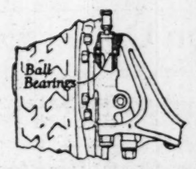
All-Steel Universal Joints

Paige and Jewett universals are all-steel. Lubrication, good for 15,000 miles, is sealed in. Wear—back-lash—is postponed indefinitely. A hundred thousand Paige-Jewett owners know the advantages of these universals. Owners of New Paiges and New Jewetts are learning them.

Clutch that Smoothes Gear-Shifting

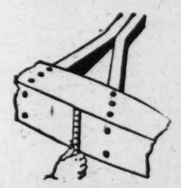
The saw-blade steel clutch, used in Paige and Jewett, engages so gently that even a novice will rarely jerk or stall the car. No need to hesitate in shifting—there's never a "miss" or gear-clash. The reason is a driven member so light that it stops spinning almost instantly when you throw out the clutch. It quickly adjusts itself to speed changes. With this clutch and the perfected transmission in the New Paige and New Jewett, you can shift quietly and easily from high to second at 30 miles an hour.

Millions of miles' fine service for Paige-Jewett owners prove this feature "right."



Ball-Bearing Steering Spindles

Paige and Jewett have been noted for their remarkably easy steering—finger-touch control, thanks to ball-bearing steering spindles. With the advent of balloon tires, Paige-Jewett engineers insisted on a complete redesigning of steering to offset the increased road friction of balloon tires. So in the New Paige and New Jewett, ball-bearing, special-geared steering lets you have the benefit of balloon tires without the usual hard steering. You probably never handled a car so easy to steer.



Extra Strong Frames

Frames of the New Paige and New Jewett have four heavy cross-members and special bracing for diagonal stresses. They are built to handle the cars' ample power without strain and to stand up under the punishment of bad roads. These are typical of construction throughout in the New Paige and New Jewett.

New Spring Design

To get the fullest comfort from balloon tires, our engineers completely redesigned spring suspension. Paige's rear springs are more than 5 feet long—Jewett's, practically half the length of its wheelbase! This length of springs, with newly-designed suspension, balloon tires, and weight of cars, give unsurpassed riding comfort in the New Paige and New Jewett. You can ride all day without tiring.

Two Cars—One Quality

If you wish these new qualities in a moderate-size car—then buy the New Jewett. If your desire runs to a big car with all the added advantages of larger size—then the New Paige suits your needs. But both are alike in this—

Real Hill-Climbing Feat.

AN UNUSUAL hill-climbing feat is related by M. Nanson Whitehead, secretary of Nesher-Whitehead & Co. of St. Louis in a letter to the Weber Implement and Automobile Co., distributor of Hup cars. Whitehead wrote that on Thursday, Jan. 15, he drove his new Hup "straight eight" with three other persons as passengers from De Soto to St. Louis over the Lemay Ferry road in high gear. Continuing, he wrote: "Those of you who are familiar with this road know that Rogers Hill, Seckmann Hill and a few others on this route have been made in high gear by only two or three makes of cars. Seckman Hill especially has been a stumbling block to most every car. Although on this trip I never drove over 25 miles an hour (my car having been driven only 350 miles at the time) at any time I took all these hills with ease. The one thing which impressed me most was the fact that in pulling these hills the motor was absolutely free from any vibration and just as quiet and smooth-running as when on level ground. No one could have been more surprised than I was when I made all these hills with such ease, especially since my car is hardly broken in as yet and it still tight. Lordy, what can I expect of it when it is broken in?" (It is only fair to state that the writer is mistaken as to the number of cars which have climbed Seckman Hill in high gear, for at least seven makes of car have done it. But to climb it and never go faster than 25 miles an hour, as Whitehead states he did, is a real feat). Incidentally, his "straight eight" is the third Hup he has owned.

Takes Position in Minneapolis.

Leo Huff, who has been transportation superintendent for the Lubrite Refining Co. of East St. Louis, has departed for Minneapolis to take a similar position with the northwestern division of the Oil Co. Huff was equipment superintendent for the Texas Oil Co. for 11 years, and later was president of the South Side Auto Supply Co., resigning to go with the Lubrite Co.

Going to Chicago Auto Show.

Among those from St. Louis' Auto Row who will attend the Chicago show will be: W. H. Willcockson, Vesper-Buick Auto Co.; J. J. Benjamin, Benjamin Motor Co.; Philip H. Brockman, De Luxe Automobile Co.; A. E. Spielberg, Franklin Motor Car Co.; Walter H. Yelldell, sales manager, Gardner Motor Car Co.; H. W. Kardell, Kardell Motor Car Co.; E. J. Krause, McNiece Motor Co.; E. A. Hatfield, Mississippi Valley Motor Co.; Stewart McDonald, president, Moon Motor Car Co.; F. C. McDonald, Southwest Nash Co.; Spalding-Spalding Motor Co.; Frank R. Tate, Tate Motor Co.; George Weber, Weber Implement and Automobile Co.; Edward Weber, Weber Motor Car Co.; Carl Spiegelberg, branch manager, Willys-Overland Co.; Sam Breadon, Western Automobile Co., and others.

Many Dealer Applications.

A total of 61,167 persons visited the salesroom at Broadway and Fiftieth street during the seven days of the New York auto show. The sales increase over the 1924 show was 134 per cent. All previous records were surpassed for orders received for Willys-Knight and Overland cars. The company is sold two months ahead on some models, with orders being booked for April. Carl P. Speigelberg, local branch manager, received a telegram from L. G. Peed, general salesmanager of Willys-Overland, Inc., that Willys-Overland was leading the field, having had 600 new dealer applications the first three days of the show.

Another Used Car Branch.

The South Side Buick Co., 3456 South Grand boulevard, has opened another used car branch at 4415 Manchester avenue, just east of Kingshighway. It is in charge of Alfred W. Schulz, who manages the used car business of the firm, with headquarters at another used car branch at 2646 Lafayette avenue. According to Schulz, the opening of the new branch has been necessitated by steady increase in used car sales during the last year.

2,000,000-Car Record Near.

Factory schedules warrant the expectation that in July, at the latest, the 2,000,000th Chevrolet car will roll off the assembly line. Chevrolet will be the second company in the world to achieve that feat.

Miss Midget Compton, the tiny young woman who represented the Cleveland 6 in the exhibit of the Cleveland Motor Sales Co. at the recent St. Louis closed car show, departed Monday for Austin, Tex., to be married. Miss Compton has been staying since the show at the home of W. W. Mitchell, secretary of the Cleveland Motor Sales Co., and Mrs. Mitchell. While at the show she met "Buster" Brown, a well-known traveling representative, and it is he who is to be the bridegroom.

Lee at Show Managers' Meeting.

Robert E. Lee, secretary-manager of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, will depart tonight for Chicago to attend the annual meeting of the National Association of Automobile Show Managers, of which he is national president.

Moberly Firm Takes Dealership.

Shumate & Lamb of Moberly have become associate dealers of the De Luxe Automobile Co., St. Louis distributer of Olds cars. They sold two of the new Olds coaches the first day, and two days later came to St. Louis for two more coaches which they had sold.

250 Fords Bought Every Hour.

People of the United States in 1924 bought Ford cars at the rate of more than 250 an hour, 24 hours a day, for the 300 working days of the year. This brought to the Ford Motor Co. its greatest sales record. Domestic retail deliveries in 1924 totaled 1,873,531 cars and trucks, an increase of 87,736 over sales in 1923. Retail sales of Ford trucks went over the 200,000 mark for the first time, exceeding those of 1923 by 15,013.

Russia Buys More Tractors.

Demands of Russian agriculture for Fordson tractors has brought another large order, and shipment of 2000 has just been made. The shipment also included a large stock of tractor parts. The first sale of Fordsons to Russia was made last August when 900 of these tractors were delivered.

Heads Commercial Car Bureau.

At a meeting of the Commercial Car Bureau of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association at Hotel Clarjdge Friday, A. S. Johnson, branch manager of the G. M. C. Truck Co., was elected chairman, and G. C. Stevens of the Diamond T Truck Co., vice chairman. Robert E. Lee, secretary manager of the Dealers' Association, was elected secretary.

Visit Detroit Factory.

Joseph N. Kellerman, retail sales manager; A. B. Siegfried, S. F. Estaque, R. R. Andrews and William O'Conner, all of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Co., organization, recently made a trip to the Hudson-Essex plant at Detroit. They were the first of several such delegations which will visit the factory from time to time to study Hudson and Essex production methods and meet the factory officials.

New Auto Tube Invented Here.

A new automobile inner tube which is declared to be wholly puncture proof is being put on the market by the Iner-Guard Tube and Rubber Co., 1131 South Broadway. Some of its tubes have stood up without puncturing under severe tests. The tube is made up of several layers of rubber and fabric.

SECOND EDITION TROUBLE.

PSYCHOLOGY plays a queer frank on the car owner who is overanxious to avoid a second edition of some trouble that he has worked hard to get rid of. It seems that as soon as he takes the wheel of the new car he commences looking for the sort of trouble he had with the old one, and he very shortly begins to find it, for the unique reason that he starts to do the things that develop the particular trouble.

In other words, in trying to see whether the particular unit of the car has the particular failing he makes certain tests which, in themselves, are nothing more nor less than trouble breeders.

Suppose his old trouble has been that the engine rapped whenever accelerated quickly. Along comes the new car, and he is naturally interested to know whether it will do the same. To his way of thinking there's only one way to find out. Thus he steps on the accelerator at most illogical moments and listens. The chances are 10 to one that nothing will happen. He tries it again the next day just to be certain that his judgment was good. Then he falls into the habit of trying it every day, just to be sure that the engine is not going to the bowwows.

In the meantime the engine is being punished by the test itself. Piston pins and bearings are being strained. Soon this strain manifests itself in audible noises. The owner is alarmed, and disappointed. He thinks he has been unlucky again.

As a matter of fact, he has simply been unfair to the engine. A second edition of maltreatment.

AUTO HOME ARRIVES.

A Parisian coach builder has taken a lead on the world by developing what he terms "The Traveling Home." It is a three-piece caravan for those who, in motoring, so often regret at not being able to loiter en route. Thousands of motorists have dreamed of such things, and now here it is.

It is, in reality, a luxurious cottage. Starting from the driver's seat you pass through the servant's bedroom, lavoratory, kitchen and dining room. Stepping across to the second car you pass through the entrance with cloakroom, drawing room, bath and bedroom.

These are no mere names for compartments. Running water is found throughout. Electric lights, of course. Your bath in a tub is ready within half an hour. The kitchen carries a home-size gasoline stove. The drawing-room furniture and fittings are in Circassian walnut.

The third car is the service car, used to carry various supplies for home as well as car. All this can be purchased for $30,000, or rented at $2000 per month with everything included except food.

TIRE PRICE INCREASE SAID TO BE SCHEDULED FOR ANNOUNCING SOON

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Jan. 24.

AUTOMOBILE owners might as well prepare for an early increase in tire prices. One ranging from 5 to 10 per cent is in prospect. Tire prices are at rock bottom and, because they allow makers a very thin margin of profit, they certainly will not continue there, especially as that margin is being further thinned by rising crude rubber and already high cotton prices.

Tire makers have had rough sledding in the past four years and they have learned a lesson they are not likely soon to forget. Weak rivals have been eliminated and others are likely to fade away. The factories see a business of 56,000,000 tires in 1925, with 40,000,000 of this total replacement and the remainder going on cars to be made.

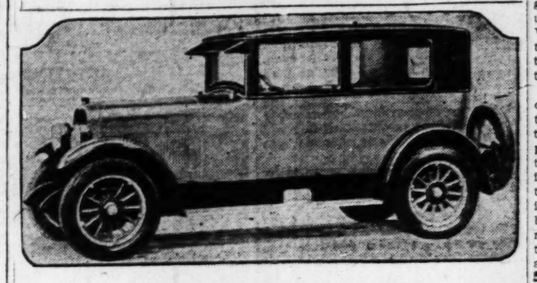
NO EXCUSE FOR IT.

Have you discovered how little it costs to replace many of the parts on the car that are giving trouble? If you haven't, the chances are that you are still making apologies for the worn and broken things about the car and are still ignorant of the pleasure of having your car shipshape. For $25 it is possible on majority of cars to buy enough new parts to brighten them up considerably, which is a very small sum compared to what majority of owners lose when they trade in because they have let the car go to seed. Nothing is more unsatisfactory in a car than door catches that do not work properly. People will go for months with something on this order and never know that for 86 cents or thereabouts and a half hour's time they could put the door in order.

SWITCHING OF IGNITION.

Motordom is still handicapped by rules of car care that have gone out of style by reason of changes in design. This is best illustrated in the matter of switching off the ignition when descending hills. Formerly this was considered an excellent way to hold back the car, but tests today show that it makes very little—if any—difference whether the ignition is on or off if the engine is to be used as a brake. With the "tub" cylinders used in the early days each power stroke of an engine delivered a lot of motion to the crankshaft, and thus to the car itself, even if the throttle were closed to the idling position. Switching off the ignition, then, robbed the engine of this driving power and offered its full compression force as a braking force. Today, however, with small cylinders it is a different story, and the motorist should bear it in mind when he is using the engine as a brake. The individual power stroke of each cylinder when the throttle is in the idling position is hardly sufficient to be detected when descending hills.

Another New Coach Model Is Displayed in St. Louis



THE new Cleveland coach Premier, which has just arrived in St. Louis and is being shown by the Cleveland Motor Sales Co. It has a two-door Fisher-built body on the standard Cleveland chassis, and its body is only four inches shorter than that of the Cleveland de luxe sedan. The doors are 35 inches wide and the rear seat is of extra breadth. Adjustable side windows, one-piece windshield and automatic windshield wiper are features. The upholstery is gray taupe worsted and the body is finished in Bloomfield gray Duco, with black above the belt. Barrell lamps and balloon tires are standard.

m. p. h. At the French Montlhery track, it has averaged 73½ miles an hour in a race of over 100 miles.

At Brooklands, the 16-h.-p. A. C. was the first light car to travel over 100 miles in the hour. It averaged 104.19 miles an hour, covering the 100 miles in 57 minutes and 35.30 seconds.

A really wonderful performance was that of four Austin seven-horsepower cars in the Grand Prix du Motocycle Club de France. George England drove one to a win, averaging 73.6 miles an hour for the 103.5 miles. Another Austin was a fifth of a second behind him, another was three-fifths of a second behind the second Austin, and still another Austin was only two-fifths of a second behind the third car.

In larger cars, the main sensation has been the feats of the Lanchester. This car normally is built as a most luxurious road carriage, and has been kept aloof from racing. A standard type of Lanchester chassis was modified to put it in racing trim. In August, Thomas, driving this Lanchester, made 11 world's records, including from two to four hours, and from 200 to 400 miles. Later in the year, Thomas and Duller with the same Lanchester smashed 27 records, including those from five to 12 hours, records from 500 to 1100 miles, and from 700 to 1800 kilometers. As showing the difference between road and track work, it may be noted that the Bentley car in the 24-hour road race travelled 1290 miles, while the 12-hour track record of the Lanchester is 1078 miles at an average of 89.8 an hour. An Alvis car, built of standard parts, broke 39 class records in one run, and averaged 85 miles an hour for 800 miles. This car is rated at 12-h.-p.

117 Miles an Hour on Road.

Of foreign cars driven by Britishers, the 300-horsepower Fiat has been the most notable. It shows the highest speed, 147 miles per hour, made over a course of 4¼ miles, and an average of 122 miles an hour in a 10-mile contest at Montlhery, the new French racing track.

A match between Thomas' Leyland and Eldridge's Fiat was held on the Montlhery track. Thomas lost the lead by shedding a tire, so Eldridge won.

Stock car events on the track find little favor in England, and there are no Brooklands records of this kind. For track work a good deal or special preparation is usually needed. But firms such as Vauxhall give a guarantee of a certain speed on Brooklands with their sporting models as sold to the public.

On the road a number of stock car events have been held, but these are not in the nature of speed trials, since unlimited speed is not permitted on the highways. The trials are in the nature of reliability tests at set average speeds. In the case of the six-day trial held in Scotland the route was very hilly and the test most severe. Yet nine out of the 16 car entries came through without the loss of a mark, and all but two finished. The Royal Automobile Club also held a severe trial for light cars, concluding with a speed trial at Brooklands. The first award went to the eight-horsepower Gwynee, and other notable successes were gained by the Trojan (a car which runs on solid tires), the Rhode and the Lea-Francis.

133 Cars in One Road Trial.

The year ended with a road trial of 133 cars running from London to Exeter and making various hill tests in very wet and stormy weather. The vehicles were mainly of the light car class and under atrocious road and weather condition 113 finished within the time limits. As in the case of the Tour de France reliability trial earlier in the year, when 2400 miles were covered in eight days, it was shown that the modern car can tackle any road trial, while the most uncertain feature now is the endurance of the drivers.

The human element is being of more importance as cars prove in speed and endurance, it looks as if in the future we need a special race of intelligent trained drivers to control the racing cars at the speed which they can develop and maintain.

WIRE HIGHWAY GUARD PREVENTS AN ACCIDENT

Keeps Sedan That Struck It From Leaving Road or Being Damaged.

An incident on the California State highway just north of San Diego has justified installation of a highway guard on a sharp curve at a railroad grade crossing.

This guard, which is a ribbon of strong link wire, two feet wide, attached to posts, was struck recently by a light sedan traveling at high speed. But for the guard, the sedan would have left the road and there probably would have been another fatal accident.

As it was, the guard absorbed the shock and although one of the guard's supporting posts was broken off near the ground and a short stretch of the wire fabric somewhat damaged, the car was held on the road and nobody was hurt.

New wire was stretched on the fence to replace that damaged by the sedan, and this was done at a cost of only 95 cents a lineal foot, or a total cost of about $15—only 16 feet of the wire fabric requiring replacement. The original cost of this wire guard was a trifle less than 95 cents a foot, so the replacement expense was barely more than the cost of the original installation.

Many Defective Cars Found.

A statement shows that of 73,000 automobiles inspected in New York City last year 13,000 were defective. Fines were imposed on 2006 drivers, but the statement fails to aid that the fate of a large number of the remaining 11,000 will be found among the automobile accident and fatality statistics.

Not Always as Safe as It Looks.

Motorists who trust to pointing the steering mechanism in toward the curb as protection against having the car coast away when parking on a hill would profit by keeping in mind the old saying, "The worm will turn."

In a booklet sent out to motorists an accessory manufacturer says, "Remember, your battery's always thirsty." Apparently it isn't necessary to be reminded about the thirst of the gas tank.

The only Four Door Coach-Brougham on the American Market

Performance

Speed—regardless of all arguments for and against—the buyer of today demands speed.

He will use his own judgment as to when, where and how he will use it—but he does insist the maker build speed possibilities into his car.

Sixty miles per hour is the minimum requirement—and on occasion, the American owner, who thinks and acts in terms of time, wants sixty-five and more, always on call.

He has learned too, that the same reserve power—the same pulling quality—which make for extremely high speeds—also guarantee that his car will take any ordinary grade as if it were level, at thirty-five to forty-five miles per hour.

This (New Series) Rickenbacker Six is designed and built for the most critical and progressive class of buyer.

It will not only give you all the speed you desire under any conditions, but still more important, it is capable of sustained performance at very high speeds.

Step on her!—In less than 7 seconds she has passed the 25 M.P.H. point. In less than 11 seconds, 40, and in 19 seconds she is flying over the road at 50 miles per hour; and before your stop-watch records 30 seconds the speedometer registers 60.

Hold her there—an hour—two hours—all day!

The "red" in your motor-meter will hold as steadily below the safety point as your car will maintain its speed.

And there will be absolutely no variation in that, save at your own will.

Then, with her wonderful 4-wheel brakes, she will decelerate at an even faster rate.

In fact, this Rickenbacker Six responds to your every thought—seems as if she acts even before you have given the signal.

Here is a wonderfully built car—and therefore one of wonderful capabilities.

Perfect balance—marvellously accurate machining—the most advanced engineering principles.

Nothing less than the quality that is designed in and built into this Rickenbacker, can guarantee a phase of performance such as this.

Speed, more than you will ever need, for as long and as far as you will ever care to drive.

Drive this Rickenbacker Six yourself—'twill be a revelation to you.

SUPER-STATION OF WLW TO BE OPENED TUESDAY

CINCINNATI, Jan. 24.—Dedication ceremonies will officially open the new Crosley WLW five-kilowatt broadcasting station here next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. This is said to be the first remotely-controlled super-power station, and is located at Harrison, O., about 25 miles from the studios and auditorium of the Crosley Radio Corporation in Cincinnati. Telephone lines connect the studios with the station.

A feature of the initial program will be the appearance of Fritz Reiner, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra, who will conduct an orchestra composed of 50 musicians from that organization.

All Up to Detector.

A vacuum tube regenerative set, using only one tube, will bring in signals from nearly the same distance as a set having an audio-frequency amplifier. The amplifier serves to increase the strength of signals brought in by the detector tube, for the purpose of operating a loud speaker or making the signals louder in the phones.

The neck of an old bottle makes a good insulator when running wire through a stick of wood.

PARTS SHOULD SHINE

The parts of a radio set work best when they are bright. A dull surface usually means that corrosion has taken place, which offers resistance to high-frequency radio currents. As radio currents travel on the surface it may pay to brighten the parts of the set sometimes.

Enemies of Efficiency.

A few specks of dust between the variable condenser plates or on the coils, loose connections and run-down batteries lower the range of many sets. Generally, most of the trouble, squeals and howls in a radio set are caused by little things which go unnoticed and seem unimportant.

CARE IS ESSENTIAL

Never strike the cabinet to test for poor connections. A sharp blow is liable to destroy the filament of one of the tubes in the set, or it may even knock a wire carrying high potential current loose and touch a filament lead, thereby burning out the tubes and running down the batteries.

Keep Set Dry.

Never let the radio set stand before an open window. It might rain and the set would be damaged if it were to get wet. Even if the set were not touched by the water itself, it might be damaged by the moisture carried in by the atmosphere.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Post-Dispatch Radio Department cannot undertake to answer questions by mail.

Q. Some time ago you published the Zahorsky circuit in the radio column. Please give the data as to how to prepare the spark coil used with this circuit. E. S.

A. As a number of queries have been received in regard to this hook-up, we are printing it again. Fig. 1. The 10 mil-henry choke coil used in this circuit is simply one section of the secondary of a Ford spark coil with the center of the coil filled with iron wire.

Q. (1) I am using a UV-201-A tube for a detector in the Freshman Masterpiece. Would a softer tube give better results? (2) Also can I get better selectivity by moving the variable grid leak? (3) What should be the length of an outside aerial to get the best results? J. McA.

A. (1) UV-201-A tube is a good detector, not at all critical as to plate voltage, and the quality of tones reproduced by it are superior to those received from a softer detector tube. The UV-200 is more sensitive as a detector than the UV-201-A. The plate voltage used with the UV200 is more critical. (2) No, the grid leak is not an important factor as far as selectivity is concerned. Selectivity is determined mainly by the coupling between the tuned circuits and the characteristics of these. However, the grid leak controls the maximum voltages applied to the grid of a tube and by adjusting the value of the leak you increase or decrease the sensitiveness of the tube. The main purpose of the grid leak is to stabilize the action of the tube which results in better quality of reproduction of tones. (3) An antenna having an overall length of about 125 feet, measuring from the far end of the antenna to the set, is best. A shorter antenna will decrease the volume, but will improve the selectivity. Make the antenna as high as is practical and try to get it above most of the surrounding objects in its immediate vicinity.

Q. Please tell me the best type of tube to use in a single circuit regenerative hook-up such as the diagram published in your radio section Jan. 4. We have such a set and get such howling sounds that we cannot hear the stations, B. B. C.

A. Good results can be obtained from almost any of the UV or C tubes. The particular kind that you use depends mostly on what kind of A battery supply you prefer to light the filaments with. If you have a storage battery the UV 200 or C 300 would be best as it is the most sensitive detector tube made. However, the other tubes work almost as well so if you prefer to use dry cells the UV-201A or C-301A or the WD-12 would be more economical. Your trouble apparently is in the tuning of the set rather than in the tube itself. The tickler is the rotor of the vario coupler. This should never be advanced far enough to cause the tube to oscillate or howl. It is practically impossible to tune in a station properly after you have passed this point. Stations come in best just before the tube starts howling. When your set is annoying you with squeels it also annoys all of your neighbors who happen to be listening in. Try to have some one who has operated a set tell you how to tune yours.

Q. 1. What is the proper connection for a by-pass condenser? 2. What capacity should be used? 3. How many plates has a .00023 variable condenser? S. B. K.

A. 1. In a detector circuit the by-pass condenser should be placed across the phones and the B battery. This connection is shown in Fig. 2. 2. The capacity of the by-pass condenser should be .001 or .002. The value may vary somewhat as it is not critical The purpose of this condenser is to permit the radio frequency component of the plate current to flow freely from the filament to the plate without having to pass through the resistances of the battery and phones. 3. A .00023 mf variable condenser usually has 11 or 13 plates.

Q. Could you kindly give me some information on what causes howling or whistling in a one-tube set? C. G. D.

A. See the answer to the question asked by B. B. C. in these columns. In addition to the howling that is caused by a set itself there has been some such interference locally because of heterodyne tones caused by the wave length of one station being too close to the harmonic of another. It is hoped that this trouble will be remedied in the near future.

Q. Will you please publish a Harkness reflex circuit using a Diode tube as a detector. J. B. H.

A. The circuit is shown in Fig. 3.

Q. Since I changed my single circuit set from storage battery tubes to dry cell tubes I do not get near the volume. Should I be getting more volume? V. R.

A. Your experience is proof of the fact that the dry cell tubes do not give the volume obtainable from the others. The only way to get more volume from your set now is to either add another stage of audio frequency amplification or go back to the storage battery tubes.

Q. Can I use WD 12 tubes in a Freed Eisemann neutrodyne set? G. G. F.

A. It is the general opinion that WD 12 tubes do not work well in a neutrodyne set.

MONOPOLY CASE IS SET

The Federal Trade Commission has notified the respondents in the alleged radio monopoly case to appear in New York on March 18, for the taking of testimony. Hearing will be conducted by Attorney Edward L. Smith of the commission's staff.

The following attorneys will represent the several companies: N. T. Guernsey, Wm. P. Sidley, John W. Davis, and Stetson, Jennings, Russel & Davis, for the Western Electric Co., and for the American Telephone & Telegraph Co.; Darius E. Peck, and John Walsh, for the General Electric Co.; Wm. K. Jackson, and J. Harry Covington, for the Wireless Specialty Apparatus Co.; Gravath, Henderson & DeGersdorf, for the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. and for the International Radio Telegraph Co. and Joseph P. Cotton and Cotton & Franklin, for the Radio Corporation of America.

The Federal Trade Commission's complaint charges that the respondents have combined and conspired for the purpose and with the effect of restraining competition and creating a monopoly in the manufacture, purchase and sale, in interstate commerce, of radio devices and apparatus, and other electrical devices and apparatus, and in domestic and transoceanic radio communication and broadcasting.

COLLEGIANS BUILD BROADCAST STATION

Knox College Outfit Cost Only $175, But It Has Been Heard Over Wide Area.

GALESBURG, Ill., Jan. 24. — Dreams of the undergraduate members of a little class in radio at Knox College at Galesburg, Ill., of establishing a Class "A" broadcasting station were fulfilled here this week as a result of their own efforts when WFBZ, the Siwash station, took the air for the first time and broadcasted a Knox-Monmouth basketball game to nearby States with an outfit costing but $175 which made a good showing within a radius where there were many stations costing from $10,000 to $60,000 sending forth their programs.

The boys have constructed their station as a classroom project and there were no funds with which to make a general announcement of the opening of their station, which they believed was a reason their response was limited to Illinois, Iowa, Missouri and Wisconsin. Operating with both phone and code under their amateur license, which they have had since September, they have been heard 1700 miles, receiving cards from West Hartford, Conn.; Ridgefield Park, N. J.; Schenectady, N. Y.; Adeline, Tex.; San Angelo, Tex.; North and South Dakota points, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Ohio, Tennessee, Missouri, Nebraska and Iowa, each saying that the station was "OSA," which is radio slang for very loud.

The equipment of the station is of advanced design, consisting of a 5-watt master oscillator, working into a power amplifier of 20 watts. Modulation is accomplished by means of a 5-watt speech amplifier tube actuating the grid of a Heising constant current modulator tube of the same capacity as the power amplifier.

In plain English, the station consists of a lot of tubes, batteries, switches and coils mounted on two tables in a 10x12 room at the top of the stairway in the George Davis Science Hall at Knox.

The generator is off by itself in another room. The power from the generator goes down to the station proper, where the members of the class sit at tables with their headpieces and make their tests.

The microphone, which is radio terminology for the transmitter, is off in a third room, the studio, which has been rigged in the large attic of the Science Hall from canvases used in concealing football practice from the eves of the curious, and other materials to deaden the sound. Sawdust covers the floor, over which is the canvas. The sides of the studio are lined with purple football blankets. As the blankets will be needed next fall they are pinned up with safety-pins so no harm can come to them.

The success of the station has been due to the care with which the boys have tried to eliminate all possible resistance.

Publisher Started the Fund.

The story of the founding of the station is one of persistency in the face of constant disappointment. William B. Bohannon, instructor in the physics department, with the members of the class last year, made an unsuccessful attempt to have the station financed by the college.

Hearing of what the boys were doing, and their enterprise arousing his interest, S. S. McClure, the veteran editor of McClure's Magazine, and a trustee of Knox, gave the boys $10 on condition they could get similar amounts from other trustees. Through his encouragement the boys were able to get together $150 by the fall of the present school year, and went to work continuing the construction of the station, which had been started on a small way last year. In September they were granted an amateur license, 9KU, and with the same equipment as that now have but under 175 watts made tests which resulted in the success mentioned above. On June 6 Knox was granted the license under which the boys are now working and was given the designation WFBZ. The license permits them to send at 254 meters, using 5 watts.

Although there are 10 men in the radio class, the personnel of the station in addition to Mr. Bohannon is as follows: Robert B. Kyle of Cincinnati, O., chief operator; Roswell Lowry, Galesburg, announcer and musical director; Harold Hierke, Al Marthens and William O'Neil, assistant operators. Other members of the class assist in the work.

O'Neil, who was fullback on the Knox football team, is the son of Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neil of Downers Grove, Ill., the first woman member of the Illinois Legislature.

The music and speaking sent out by the station takes the air by means of a six-wire antenna, 12-inch copper 80 feet long and 25 feet above the science building, which is 70 feet high. Inductive coupling is employed.

The plan of the station is to broadcast programs, using the equipment of the college and the conservatory of music. There will be glee club concerts and solo work and instrumental numbers, as well as addresses and results of experiments.

BRITISH SUPER-STATION IS NEARING COMPLETION

LONDON, Jan. 16.—The new high-power station of the British Broadcasting Co. at Daventry, now in course of construction, will incorporate a number of interesting features designed to give a maximum output. The site stands 600 feet above sea level, and for 300 feet to 400 feet above the surrounding land, which is all open country. Two masts, 500 feet high and 800 feet apart, are being set up to take a T-shaped aerial. The wavelength will remain at 1600 meters, on which the temporary station 5XX, at Chelmsford, is now working. The power rating will be 25 kilowatts, although the actual consumption on the station will be about 100 kilowatts.

An interesting feature is the ground system, which consists of a continuous metal plate, laid underground, like a flat ring, with a radius of 100 feet. The station will be in the middle of the ring, and from a circular support at the top of the station, through the center of which the aerial runs, the building, wires will run out to posts 10 feet high, planted all around the circle. The wires will be insulated from the posts and connected down directly to the buried ring-plate below. An overhead telephone line will connect the station with the London studio of the B. B. C. The station should be open in the spring.

COIL WINDING

The easiest way tape may be taken off is by winding on a certain number of turns and then twisted together at the point where to make a five or six inch loop. After a certain number of turns have been wound on the tube and the first tap made in a similar manner, a neater looking job is made by winding on a certain number of turns before making a tap and then allow six inches for a tap; punch a hole in the tube and push the wire through it; push another hole in the tube about a quarter inch from the other and close to the last turn of wire and allow six inches for the tap and join the two six-inch ends on the inside of the tube.

REALLOCATION PLAN HELD IN ABEYANCE

Too Many Stations and Not Enough Wave Channels Cause Big Interference Problem.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24. — The extremely critical stage in the allocation of wave lengths to broadcasting stations has been reached and developments during the next week or two may have great effect on the public.

Hope has almost been abandoned by the Radio Bureau of the Department of Commerce that the reallocation plan for class B stations can be put into effect, due to the point where expert opinion with the reduction of separation between the wave lengths of the stations were believed successful, the Radio Bureau has almost definitely decided that the plan will not be put into general effect.

Complaints from radio broadcasters, broadcasting stations, and fans in all sections of the country of interference is responsible for the practical abandonment of the general allocation plan.

The wave lengths of nearly a dozen class B stations have already been changed. In other words where there are no complaints of interference the changes may become permanent. In other words additional changes will be made so that interference will result.

The trouble with the whole situation, according to officials of the Department of Commerce, is that there are too many broadcasting stations for the number of available channels.

"There is no use in trying to create new channels," said one authority. "Just as soon as one new channel is created, two new stations spring up. We have reached a point where the only solution seems to be the limitation of stations.

"I believe that if we could announce tomorrow that there would soon be available 100 new wave lengths for class B stations that within side of 48 hours we would have 200 new stations which would begin to come on the air. I believe there are quite a number of large companies right now which could complete the erection of stations if there is room on the air for them.

Under the present law, the Secretary of Commerce has no authority to refuse a license to a station which meets the requirements. Practically the only thing the Department of Commerce can do about it is to regulate the time each station may operate.

If the general reallocation plan is finally abandoned, as seems likely, the reduction between some stations will be made so that interference will not result. This will accommodate a few of the new stations which will want to come on the air shortly.

The other new stations will be compelled to divide time in various ways with stations already established.

Just how the situation will finally work out, no official in Washington cares to predict. It is only said that they are none too optimistic.

Round Corners of Wire

A sharp bend in a wire offers a good point for energy radiated from, but it also increases the resistance of the wire. All bends should be led directly to the aerial terminal without bending, if possible. Where it is necessary to bend a wire at right angles, use a pair of pliers or some other tool to make the curve a large one.

REALLOCATION PLANS HELD IN ABEYANCE

Too Many Stations and Not Enough Wave Channels Cause Big Interference Problem.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—An extremely critical stage in the reallocation of wave lengths to class B broadcasting stations has been reached and developments within the next week or two may have a great effect on the public.

Hope has almost been abandoned by the Radio Bureau of the Department of Commerce that any reallocation plan for class B stations can be put into effect. Almost to the point where experiments with the reduction of separation between the wave lengths of stations were believed successful, the Radio Bureau has almost finally decided that the plan will not be put into general effect.

Complaints from radio supervisors, broadcasting stations and fans in all sections of the country of interference is responsible for the practical abandonment of the general allocation plan.

The wave lengths of nearly two dozen class B stations have already been changed. In cases where there are no complaints of interference the changes may become permanent. In other cases, additional changes will be made so that interference will not result.

The trouble with the whole situation, according to officials of the Department of Commerce, is that there are too many broadcasting stations for the number of available channels.

"There is no use in trying to create new channels," said one authority. "Just as soon as one new channel is created, two new stations spring up. We have reached a point where the only remedy seems to be the limitation of stations.

"I believe that if we could announce tomorrow that there would soon be available 100 new wave lengths for class B stations that inside of 48 hours we would hear of 200 new stations which would like to come on the air. I believe there are quite a number of large companies right now which contemplate the erection of stations when there is room on the air for them."

Under the present law, the Secretary of Commerce has not the authority to refuse a license to any station which meets the few requirements. Practically the only thing the Department of Commerce can do about it is to regulate the time each station may operate.

If the general reallocation plan is finally abandoned, as seems likely, the reduction between some stations will be made so that interference will not result. This will accommodate a few of the new stations which will want to come on the air shortly.

The other new stations will be compelled to divide time three ways with stations already established.

Just how the situation will finally work out, no official in Washington cares to predict. It can be said that they are none too optimistic.

Round Corners of Wires.

A sharp bend in a wire not only offers a good point for energy to be radiated from, but it also changes the resistance of the wire. All wires should be led directly to the proper terminal without bending, if possible. Where it is necessary to bend a wire at right angles, use roundnose pliers or some other tool to make the curve a large one.

Review of the Amateur Game From 1912 to 1925

By R. W. E. DECKER

THE grand old transmitting game has pushed ahead in grand style. In fact, the changes have come so fast fans have almost been unable to keep up with them.

In 1912 the first transmitting licenses were issued to amateurs. There were very few amateurs who took the exams in those days, many waiting to see whether the law would be enforced by the Government officials. In 1913, though, most of the amateurs decided that a license was necessary, so wandered over to the Brooklyn Navy Yard, where the examinations were held.

Many amusing experiences were had at this old meeting ground of the amateur. As the Navy Yard also had classes for the would-be sailor ops, there was plenty of chance for cheating at the table. The writer remembers particularly one instance that is still thought of as the best joke of the operator's hard breaks. It seems that an applicant dreaded the thought of taking the 20 per, as he was sort of doubtful of giving a correct copy. He had been informed by another sailor outside that he could fix up the code sender by a small bribe of $10. The embryo op gave the $10 as desired and went in and sat at the table for his exams. When he had adjusted his single phone and started to copy the code, he found out to his sorrow that the sailor had forgotten to tell the code sender about his agreement and the result was loss of $10 besides failure of the exam. He was also kidded for some weeks by his brother students.

Another experience which differs greatly from that experience is about a young student from the old Marconi school, whose name I shall refuse to divulge, as it might affect his present standing in the amateur world. He was very poor in the code work and the director was not over-anxious to have him try the examination. He made a bet with this director that he would pass easily. The bet was quickly made and the operator-to-be went over with a number of fellow students who were inclined to doubt his ability. When he was assigned to a table it was by chance alongside of a number of sailors from a training station who were taking a final examination. The code test started and the wise boy copied everything from the expert sailor seated alongside of him. He passed with few errors checked up against him and the director lost his bet.

This, of course, would not happen in the modern examination days at the Custom House. Here the automatic sender is required and also a short sending test is conducted. The amateurs in the old days were only required to pass a five-word-per-minute test. Now the 10-word-per-minute test is conducted, with additional technical knowledge required. In fact, the restrictions are due to be closer, in accordance with the number of operators on the air. At the present time there are in excess of 20,000 amateur operators pounding away, sending messages and experimenting nightly.

In the early wireless days, the old-timer preferred to say wireless instead of radio, as it is known in modern days. The restrictions as to wave length were not very severe.

In fact if the ham was within 20 meters of his required wave length, it was satisfactory. The writer has often heard stations over the 200-meter mark as the operators did not seem to realize his error. In these low wave days, the amateur is generally within the law. The reason for this is mainly the use of modern measuring instruments. Many different types may be found in an amateur station which in most cases resembles a laboratory.

The amateur of today is also great for efficiency. I remember when we used to test with a carbon lamp for the radiation. If it was bright, the transmitter was tuned correctly. Can you imagine an amateur testing his radiation that way these days? He must have his thermometers, etc. The ordinary hot wire ammeter has also gone its merry way. This type of meter was a merry liar at its best.

The insulation question also plays a big part in today's installation problems. The present type amateur is careful what type of insulator he chooses for his antenna. It must be of high quality with an additional strength test.

The spark transmitter is obsolete; in fact it is hardly even mentioned, except in a general way. The spark was at one time the pride of the writers' heart, but he saw the handwriting on the wall and admitted that the once proud transmitter has had its day. The entrance of the new class of radio listeners required the discarding of the spark set. He could not tune out the broad wave emitted, which naturally interfered with the reception of the broadcast programs. As this type of fan quickly outnumbered the transmitting amateur his requests were followed. In fact the once free transmitting amateur has a required silence hour which must be obeyed to the letter. The new short wave bands which have been assigned to the amateurs are being visited by more stations each night. The 150 to 200 meter band is being deserted slowly.

The short wave bands have opened up a new world for the amateurs, who have taken to them quickly. They realize that these short waves will do away with practically all of the former interference; the Government does not require any silent hours on this band. The CW type of transmitter is only permitted with a coupled hookup. This was chosen with the the idea of least interference to broadcast programs.

How well the amateurs obey the law is brought out by the fact that the radio inspector receives few complaints, and these are easily adjusted, being usually due to misunderstanding on the part of the one who makes the complaint.

The distance records which are made those days are startling, to say the least. Who would have thought of talking with New Zealand a few years back? Nowadays the hams thing nothing of working an amateur in some foreign country.

The writer's advice to the man who wonders what those funny dots and dashes on the low waves are, is to study the code and you will get the thrill of your life when the stations sign off with the call letters of a foreign country, perhaps 5000 miles away. Here is the real DX work. The amateurs of today are making radio history which was thought impossible a few short years ago.

An analysis of the American radio exports during November, which totaled $948,993, the largest recorded, shows that our shipments to Canada, which takes nearly half of our monthly exports, increased by $112,284 over the October total. Exports to Australia were $24,803 more than in October; shipments to England increased by approximately the same amount; while exports to France, Germany, Cuba, Brazil, and several other countries also gained. CONDENSER CAUTION

When purchasing a condenser do not specify the capacity of the condenser by the number of plates. The number of plates used in a condenser is only a fair indication of the capacity of the condenser. The reader will find that the number of plates for a given capacity varies with the manufacturers' standards. If you are constructing a circuit be sure to find the exact capacity specified and then order the condenser by that capacity.

BROADCASTING IN SWEDEN

Pending the erection of the regular Swedish broadcasting stations to be operated under the "Radiotjanst," the Swedish Telegraph Administration will operate temporary stations for the benefit of some 40,000 radio fans. Stations of this type are in service at Stockholm, Malmo, and Gothenburg. During January the equipment of the Boden station will be installed, and it is expected that another will be erected and equipped soon at Sundswall.

On Jan. 1 new regulations went into effect, and new licenses were required of all. Licenses for private receiving sets cost 12 kronen, but when loud speakers are employed in public places or for advertising, special permits at increased fees are necessary. The regulations require that regular receiving sets must not be connected with automatic recording apparatus, and also that listeners must maintain secrecy as to all communications heard, except of course the broadcast programs. The copying of news items broadcast by a publisher is prohibited for commercial purposes. All licenses issued carry a provision that the sets covered may be inspected at any time by either the telegraph and military authorities.

If Mozart could hear "The Magic Flute" on a FADA Neutrodyne

—his trained ear would approve the tonal fidelity to the original in his famous old opera. The peculiar charm of this woodwind instrument is caught in all its purity by the famous Fada Neutrodyne. With equal tonal truth, Fada reproduces the deep rolling bass of the pipe-organ.

The Fada Neutrodyne has the range of the 88-key pianoforte. McCormack's pure tenor, Bori's delicious soprano, create the illusion of standing beside the actual artists when you hear them on a Fada set. Bass and baritone voices are reproduced with equal fidelity. Nor does Fada create those raucous distortions that have kept many discriminating folks from investing in radio.

Fada selectivity is one of its chief charms. Turn the dials to predetermined numbers, and in rolls the very station you want to hear—provided the waves from that station are reaching your neighborhood. Fada also excels in distance and volume. In short, Fada is radio at its very, very best.

There are six models to meet every taste and pocketbook. $75 to $270. Fada is adapted to either dry-cell or storage-battery tubes, and either indoor or outdoor aerial. Hear Fada. It will be a revelation in radio! Buy your Fada now and be ready to hear the world's famous artists whenever they sing or play for you over the radio.

PROTECTING CORD TIPS

The extra string tied between the two main ends of a telephone cord has a very definite use and is not merely a hangover from the cord covering. The cord, attached to the small ring on the jack, takes the strain off the tips when the phone cord is suddenly jerked, either accidentally or purposely. The tips of the phone cord are not soldered very strongly and a good tug will separate them from the ends of the cord, which is not wire at all, but heavy tinsel. The trick is to pull the string through the ring or hook so that the short tip cords are hanging loosely. All the strain is thus placed on the string, which can easily bear it.

New Flexadyne Receiver

Absolutely the most powerful and sensitive single-tube radio set in existence. Receives from coast to coast. One tube does the work of three. So simple anyone can build it.

RADIO ABROAD

Of 20,000 radio receiving sets operated in Mexico and about 12,000 more in the other parts of the country, nearly 95 per cent are reported to be of American make. Government licenses, regulations and inspection are required for all these stations as well as the four large and six small broadcasting stations on the air in Mexico.

Use Transformer.

Many sets in Europe are equipped with telephone transformers and low resistance telephone receivers, which are claimed to be a better combination than the headset alone.

THE EVOLUTION OF A JAZZ-MANIAC—How a California Flapper Went From Gin to Sin and Ended by Murdering Her Mother

Mrs. Anna Ellingson Was an Old-Fashioned Mother, and When She Ventured to Reprove 16-Year-Old Dorothy for Staying Out Until 4 A. M., the Girl Shot Her in a Drink-Crazed Rage—Now Slayer Sobs Repentance While Experts Call It a "Psychological Case."

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Jan. 24.

IT started by her liking the boys so much. The other girls at grammar school said Dorothy Ellingson was boy-struck, yes, she certainly was. When a boy pulled her hair she didn't slap him very hard. If a boy stole her books she would most likely walk blocks trying to make him give them back. Giggling. Shaking her red curls and flirting. She was awfully silly, a few good little girls confided to their mothers.

The boys liked Dorothy. They were not boys who would say, "Miss Ellingson, I think you have charming verve." If they chose to compliment her at all it would be: "Kid, you're there. Lotsa pep. Atta girl." The talk she heard from them was jazzy talk. She learned to think of these boys as "boy-friends" or "men," according to the company. They were much in her mind, and she soon began to loiter on corners after school bantering them. She learned what it was to "throw a hot line" and when they told her to go cut herself a piece of cake she knew she was supposed to giggle.

Well, she giggled. She liked to be liked by the boys. It set her apart, or rather set her among the minority who "went" with boys. She joined surreptitious excursions to cheap picture shows after school or sat in drug stores with "a man," consuming ice cream soda. At home she said: "I was over at Mabel's house," or, "A bunch of us girls went skating." Her mother accepted the fibs for a time. Dorothy reveled in her daring. She was 14 and already had a beau.

Making of a Jazz-Baby

Her taste turned to older swains. She saw them on the neighborhood street corners or in front of pool halls—real men of 18 or 20 who had jobs and could make dates for vaudeville houses downtown. They were a step beyond her, yet, but she had hopes. "Breaking into the big league," she would call it, when she broke in.

Dorothy was large for her age and she had wheedled her mother into buying near silk hosiery for her. She had a little dorine which she kept hid, and when safely away from her mother's old-fashioned primness, she would put rouge on her face, touch her eyebrows a bit and make her lips redder. She learned to call this "dolling up in the war paint." She was proud of her wisdom. Harold told her she was a sweet mama, and John said she threw a smooth line, and even Tom said she sure raced his pulses when she looked at him that snaky way.

So before she started for business college Dorothy Ellingson was known as a hot one and a jazz baby. Not that she had made the acquaintance of real jazz yet. Real jazz did not reach its height until two years ago. But at 14 Dorothy graduated from grammar school and was ready to enter business college. Here the teachers addressed her as Miss Ellingson and her final maturity was reached, she felt.

The Dates

She had it out with her father and mother at home.

"I'm going to have dates," she announced.

"At your age? Running with boys?" snorted her father.

Mrs. Ellingson had her misgivings but she sided with her daughter. Something of the new spirit of the age had been borne to her by Dorothy's chatter. She wanted her child to have a good time. Although she would not have used the expression, she wanted Dorothy to be a live one.

"Well, Papa," said Mrs. Ellingson, "things have changed since our day. The child has a right to be like the other youngsters, I suppose. Lord knows she'll have to go to work and settle down soon enough. But I declare—I don't know what we're coming to—"

It was agreed after much bickering that Dorothy should be permitted to go with men. She was going with them, anyway, but she felt better about it when the folks knew.

"Gosh, my folks!" she would sigh to her boy-friends, "they're a million years behind the times."

A Tire Fully Inflated

She wanted so not to be a flat tire. She saw them—the flat tires—going home from business college alone or grouped together. She saw these girls who had no jazz in them at picture shows in manless groups or with their parents. She judged by extremes, being young. There was no middle ground for her. You either went the pace or you didn't. You either kept up with the boys or they left you behind. Dorothy vowed to keep up.

Hurling herself into the cheap amusements provided by cheap and callow youths, she was ready to go with the regular men, the old, old men of the world, 18 to 20 years old. She was ready for jazz. Hot dog! Let them trot out their high-pitch saxophones and musical saws; their songs about lovin' sambos and cheatin' papas; their gin and joy rides. Little Dorothy was "primed for the dirt," she told the world. "Life," she heard a vaudeville gag artist say, "is a jazzy fox trot well oiled with gin."

She Meets the Sheiks

She found plenty of "regular men" anxious to introduce her to life of this definition. They were rather meek and inefficient filing clerks and bundle wrappers by day, but gallant swains by night. They wore sideburns and put pomades on their hair and went in for bell-bottomed trousers and patent leather shoes. Their talk ran to stolen lines from musical comedies, to bootleggers and flasks, to dance orchestras and "blues" songs. Dance halls and roadhouses called them nightly. They organized parties and cramming four couples into a rented Ford, went howling down the road.

Dorothy drank synthetic gin and doubtful whisky, at first because the other girls did, and later because she liked it. Her giggles came easier when she was stewed, she discovered, and everything seemed more fun.

The Mornings After

She could not keep her escapades from her family, entirely. Her late hours grew later, and later. The first time she came home after midnight with a suggestion of spirits about her clothes there was a scene. Her father was for spanking his wayward daughter but her mother seemed defensive. Mrs. Ellingson, bewildered by the problem, urged patience. She and her husband quarreled.

Dorothy left the business college and got a job. But late hours made her late for work in the mornings, gin gave her headaches which led to irritability, and she drifted from one position to another. Ordinary workday existence palled. She was a jazz-baby. Work and Dorothy disagreed.

It was inevitable that she should be caught in liquor raids. The first time she was arrested her father raged and her mother sobbed. The Juvenile Court Judge scolded Dorothy, but let her off on promise of good behavior.

Taking a brace, she was good for a time, but the lure of jazz drew her back. She liked the fetid, garish dance halls, the whine and clatter of the music, the false jollity of gin. She and others of her set aped the behavior of the gilded girls and boys they saw portrayed in "Flaming Youth." Dorothy and her crowd tried to do with home-made wine and Fords what the movies said the wealthy younger generation was doing with champagne and Packards. It was the life!

Followed more arrests and a growing crisis at home. Ellingson and his wife were estranged, largely because of Dorothy. Her brother, Earl, a few years her senior sided with Mrs. Ellingson in the quarrel and said, "Oh, Sis'll snap out of it, all right." Ellingson went away and Mrs. Ellingson tried to keep a home together for her children. Her own temper not sweetened by the turn of events, she nagged Dorothy for her misdeeds, and the girl, her nerves raw from dissipation, went into tantrums.

"Dorothy," her mother would say, "you'll just have to cut all this out and get a job. I can't support you in idleness."

The Quarrel

There were nasty, bitter scenes, between the two, those mornings-after when the mellowness was all gone from Dorothy's jaded body and her giggle had vanished. The mother accused her daughter of immorality, with good reason, and the daughter defended herself by incoherent outbursts of temper.

On Tuesday morning, Jan. 13, it happened. Dorothy had been out until 4 a. m. Her mother was determined that she should get up and look for work.

"I can't," said the girl, "I've got to rest. The bunch is throwing a big party tonight."

"Well, you'll come home early or I'll bolt the door and you can stay out," snapped Mrs. Ellingson.

The Shooting

"I'll come home when I get good and ready."

"You will, will you? I won't have any daughter of mine sassing me. Now I'll tell you what I'm going to do, young lady. I'm going to have the Juvenile Court send you to the home for wayward girls!"

Jazz-babies are not themselves the morning after. Dorothy was not herself. Too many saxophones, too many cigarettes, too much gin. She flew into a violent rage.

Running to her brother's bureau drawer she grabbed up a big revolver.

"Are you going to have me sent away?" she screamed.

"Yes," said her mother.

Dorothy pulled the trigger. Mrs. Ellingson fell, shot through the head.

The slayer, in a panic, thrust some clothes into her bag and fled. After establishing herself in a furnished room she kept her date for the party that evening. No funeral dirge for Dorothy! She danced to a mama song.

One of the young men with whom she had been friendly led detectives to her room next day. She was asleep when the officers arrived. At first she denied the shooting, but after lengthy examination broke down and confessed.

Her father and brother, greatly moved by grief said they would not help her. "She can hang as she deserves," the father told reporters. But in a day or so he came to a calmer state and announced he would employ an attorney to defend Dorothy.

A Jazz-Baby No Longer

"After all," remarked Earl Ellingson, "she is our own flesh and blood."

Dorothy waits in jail now, far outside the range of saxophones. Her bobbed red hair is disheveled, but not from dancing. She is a jazz-baby turned murderess.

"I'm sorry I killed mama," she tells reporters.

Alexander Mooslin, the attorney who will defend her, is considering the psychology of the case. He thinks he sees a parallel between Dorothy and the Franks murderers. If they were products of jazz-thinking, Dorothy is a product of jazz-living, he argues. If Leopold and Loeb are psychiatric cases, so is Dorothy.

The public is much aroused. Women's clubs are proposing drastic legislation to curb jazz-maniacs and solons are at work on a law to prohibit the sale of firearms.

Dorothy has turned against the life that brought her to this sorry pass. She has no flippancies to offer. Stunned by the tragedy, she stares with set lips and vacant eyes. Now and then she dabs at her lashes with a handkerchief, as if hoping for tears.

SHE FLED WITH THE CHICKEN MONEY TO SEE WORLD; HE WANTS HER BACK

Farmer, Who Admits He Doesn't Understand Women, Has Spent Life Savings in Search

Now, With His Money Gone and No Wife, Henry Swearengin Starts in to Make a New Stake So That He May Continue to Look for Fugitive Spouse — She Couldn't Stand Farm Life With a Husband Who Was Affectionate but Didn't Know How to Dance.

By F. A. BEHYMER,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Jan. 24.

THE day was long, the October day that Henry Swearengin helped drive the cattle from one pasture to another on the Nebraska range, but when the day was done he would go riding home, and his wife would be waiting for him there. So what did it matter that the day was long?

But when one day was done, and he went riding home, his wife was not waiting for him there. With nothing but her "chicken money" to see her through, she had gone away.

If the day, out on the range, had seemed long, it was only as the dawn of a longer day, stretching into a sleepless week, as he searched for her hither and yon, dropping at last into the deep sleep of utter exhaustion and despair, dreaming that he had found her and awakening to new despair.

Since that, life has been nothing but night for Henry Swearengin. He has groped through it blindly, wandering and searching, aimlessly and without method, with nothing to guide his feet, pursuing a figure in the crowd that seemed familiar, peering into faces, hoping always that somehow, somewhere, he will find her.

His money gone and his hope almost gone, he has paused now in his search.

Why Catherine Swearengin went away is one of the mysteries which must be solved by someone who knows more about the ways of women than Henry Swearengin pretends to know. If you ask him he slumps where he sits, with a little gesture of helplessness, and says: "Well, sir, I couldn't tell, I just couldn't tell. It's beyond me." He has pondered it without ceasing since she went away, through troubled days and sleepless nights.

If he knew for certain, as he wearily says, he might try to resign himself, but it is the mystery of it that keeps him pondering, tortured by conjectures that come unbidden and will not be put away.

Swearengin was a Missouri farmer when he met and married Catherine Hale seven years ago. He was 39 years old then and she was 28. She had lived most of her life in the towns, but she knew that as the wife of Henry Swearengin her life would be on the farm and the prospect was pleasing and she seemed to be happy on the farm to which he took her near Johns' Mill in Christian County.

She was vivacious and pleasure loving and affectionate and there was nothing that she could not do with the big fellow who was her husband, coddling him and calling him "Honey" and wrapping him around the smallest of her fingers. He was undemonstrative and his inventiveness in endearments was exhausted when he contracted Catherine to "Cat," as a substitute for the nickname Dollie which her friends had given her. Sometimes he even awkwardly called her "Kitten," for diminutives belong to the language of the farm, but he was so covered with confusion when he caught himself talking that way that she was never quite sure whether he was in earnest or not.

A Flirtatious Wife

It is just possible that the one who knows the ways of women and can solve the mystery of Catherine Swearengin's going away would say that there is no mystery about the going away of a woman who is uncertain whether her husband's pettings are spontaneous or forced.

The fireside was more to Swearengin's liking than the frivolities of the countryside, but his wife liked to go to the country dances and he took her to them. She was pretty and she knew it, and he was inclined to be jealous and she knew that, too, and she thought it good fun to plague him by dancing with other men; but there was no harm in that, and he admitted it when he was dour on the way home and she chided him for it.

All the same, it pleased him when an opportunity came for them to go to Kansas. Out there, as he anticipated, there were not so many dances, and he liked it better so, but in other respects Kansas was not up to specifications and last winter they came back.

Toward spring John Toppen was visiting here from Western Nebraska and looking for a man and wife to take to his ranch near Gurley, the man to be his foreman and the woman to keep house, for Toppen is a bachelor. Swearengin was ready for another adventure in the West and he and his wife were engaged by Toppen and in March they drove out there in their Ford coupe.

Toppen was prosperous and had a big ranch house, with conveniences and luxuries, and life was pleasant on the ranch and to Henry Swearengin it appeared that his wife was happy and contented, albeit neighbors were few and scattered far; but, after all, Henry Swearengin is a plain fellow who does not pretend to understand women and it may well be that in his own happiness and contentment he mistakenly thought his wife was happy and contented.

MRS. CATHERINE SWEARENGIN
The Missouri farmer's wife who wanted to see the world and was, apparently, tired of life on a farm and a devoted husband.

HENRY SWEARENGIN
He has spent all his life savings in a vain search for the wife who voluntarily left him, but still he hopes that she will return or that he can find her with a new stake and persuade her to come back.

For one thing, dances were rare, except when there was a rodeo or fair, and even at these Mrs. Swearengin did not have much chance to indulge her love for dancing, because she did not know the men and she did not choose to arouse her husband's anger by dancing with strange men.

Would Not Dance With Her

They went to a fair a month before she disappeared and there was dancing, but there were no dancing men that Mrs. Swearengin knew. She asked her husband to dance with her but he made excuses and she had to be content with dancing with another woman.

On the way home she complained of his refusal and they had a little quarrel, one of the harmless "spats" which he says were all that ever marred the harmony of their relations.

Afterward life at the ranch was as it had been before, or if there was any change Swearengin did not notice it. Mrs. Swearengin was a good housekeeper and caring for the well-furnished home and preparing the meals for herself and the two men and Melba, Swearengin's young daughter by a former marriage, who had come to live with them, was not burdensome. It was lonely there, but she could drive the car and she drove to Gurley or Sidney or Dalton whenever she pleased. She helped her husband save and they had $600 in the bank. He says he never denied her anything, but all the money that she could really call her own was the "chicken money," which custom awards to farmers' wives.

Early in October she took some of her chickens to town and sold them for $9.75 and kept the money. Also she had obtained from Toppen an advance of $5, but Swearengin did not know that until after she had gone. Apparently she was saving her chicken money and adding to it for her contemplated break-away from the monotony of life on the plains to the life of the crowded places that she liked best.

Saved the Chicken Money

The night of Oct. 15 Toppen said: "Tomorrow we will go and drive the stock to the new pasture."

So, next morning, they had breakfast early and Toppen and Swearengin rode away to the grazing range, 25 miles to the north.

Mrs. Swearengin took Melba to school in the Ford. At the school she said: "If I'm not at home when your father returns tonight, tell him he will find the car at Gurley." And she drove away. But Melba thought she was only joking.

Back at home she went about her household tasks and the two men who were painting the buildings heard her singing as she worked. And there was a good dinner for them when the time came. Afterward she brought out the Ford and drove to the chicken yard. She had concluded, evidently, that the $14.75 she had was not enough to take her where she wanted to go.

The painters heard the fluttering of the fowls as she caught them and tied them and placed them in the car, and presently she drove away toward Gurley, nine miles across the plain. What they had not noticed was that she had slipped her suit case into the car. She was going away and she wasn't coming back.

Melba came home and found her gone and wondered what it meant. The painters told her Mrs. Swearengin had gone toward Gurley, and the child remembered what she had said about finding the car at Gurley.

Now it was the end of Henry Swearengin's long day, and he was coming home, weary from the day's riding, but his wife would be waiting for him, and so what did it matter that the day had been long.

Darkness had come when they reached the barn. The windows of the ranch house glowed but Mrs. Swearengin did not come out to hail them as was her wont. Melba came running to the barn. Mrs. Swearengin had gone away, she said, and she had left word that the car would be found at Gurley and could her daddy tell her what it meant.

He could not tell her why his wife had gone away, if that was what she wanted to know, but for him it meant that the light had gone out.

The painters were questioned and told the little that they knew. Swearengin must leave at once for Gurley. They drove him there in their machine. Yes, Mrs. Swearengin had been there, the poultryman told Swearengin, and he had given her $8 for the chickens, and she had asked him to put the car in the garage, for it was nearly train time and she was going to Sidney. And yes, the station master told him, he had sold a ticket to Mrs. Swearengin and she had gone away on the branch line train to Sidney.

Then on to Sidney, but it was the middle of the night by then, and the station was closed and the agent could not be found and it was not until the next day that Swearengin knew that his wife had taken the main line train East.

The main line train East might have taken her to Omaha or Kansas City. Swearengin knew that his wife had relatives in Kansas City. He thought she might have gone to them. He had not slept the night before but he started at once his search for her and, except for times when he paused because he did not know which way to turn, he has kept it up until now.

The Kansas City relatives had not seen Mrs. Swearengin. Her husband's judgment then was that she had gone to Omaha. So to Omaha by the next train. There he asked the police to help him but they were apathetic. Had the woman done anything to be arrested for? No. Well then they did not see how they could do anything. What they meant, although they didn't put it just that way, was that a woman had a right to run away from her husband if she wanted to. They might have added that a husband who ran after a runaway wife was a particular kind of fool, but the tears in the eyes of Swearengin and the anguish written on his face stopped them. They were sorry but there was simply nothing that they could do in a case of that kind.

So Swearengin had to carry on by himself and he had no idea how to go about it. He drifted back to the railroad station and asked the travelers' aid matron if she had seen his wife. From his description of her she could not say that she had. He told her his story and she was sympathetic and telephoned around to places she thought Mrs. Swearengin might have gone, but without result. So that was all that she could do.

A snapshot of Swearengin taken in working garb.

Then Swearengin went about it the only way he knew. He walked the streets and haunted the entrances to picture shows. At first he had high hopes. He would find her soon. Maybe around the next corner or in the middle of the next block he would find her, alone and lonely in the crowd, more lonely than ever she had been on the ranch, sorry that she had run away and longing to be home again.

He would slip up to her and startle her by the suddenness of his appearance, and she would be so glad to see him and beg him to take her home and on the way back in the train she would try to tell him why she had run away and he would tell her he understood, even if he didn't.

Goes Back Home

But he walked hours and hours, through troubled days and sleepless nights, and he did not find her. Several times he thought he saw her, something familiar about the back of a woman's head or the turn of a woman's shoulder, in the crowd or the flutter of a dress like hers, and he would push his way to her side and perhaps peer into her face, startling her with the wild look in his eyes. But always it was a strange woman and not the one he sought.

Always, when exhausted from walking the streets, he drifted back to the railroad station, where a countryman in a city feels most at home, and there he sat and watched the travelers as they came and went, hoping that if his wife came there, on her way back home, he could find her there and make her homecoming easier for her.

A sleepless week of this and Swearengin went wearily back to the ranch. He would try to get himself in hand and wait awhile and maybe tidings would come. At the end of another week a letter came. It had been written in Omaha and sent to the postmaster at St. Joseph, Mo., with instructions to mail it there, but there are postoffice rules against such deceptions as that and the letter went forward to Swearengin with the notation that it had been received under cover from Omaha.

It was a simple little letter and not very coherent. She did not think her husband loved her any more, and she never wanted to see the ranch home again and she was going further away, she didn't know where.

Back to Omaha went Swearengin and there was repetition of the weary round of searching. Then to St. Joseph, for she had once lived there and might have returned there. And on to St. Louis, where her sister used to live. But nowhere a trace of her.

From St. Louis he came back here and he is here now with his daughter at 1400 West Florida street, waiting. "If I only knew why she went away," he says, "it wouldn't be so hard. But we were always happy. We never had any trouble except little spats that didn't amount to nothing. Maybe I fussed at her a little sometimes but I was never mean to her. She was the finest housekeeper in the world. If she was lonesome out there she didn't let on. She seemed to be happy as a lark. But if she don't like the farm I'll take her anywhere that she'll be satisfied. Maybe she thinks if she comes back I'll hurt her for running away. But, sir, I wouldn't hurt her for the world. I want to find her and make up with her and if she comes back to me I'll never speak another cross word to her. They tell me somebody may have coaxed her away. Well, that wouldn't make any difference, because if somebody coaxed her away she wasn't to blame."

As to why she went away, it is just possible, again, that when the explanation is made by the someone who knows more about the ways of women than Henry Swearengin does, it will be not the loneliness of life on the ranch entirely, but the insufficiency of the egg money unaugmented from any other source to supply the farm wife's needs and make her happy and contented.

PATRIOTIC WOMEN PURCHASE HOME OF BETTY WASHINGTON

By the Associated Press.

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., Jan. 21.—America's newest national shrine, Kenmore, the mansion that was the home of Betty Washington Lewis, only sister of George Washington, is to be dedicated May 1, and President Coolidge has been asked to attend the ceremony.

In the drawing room of the historic house a simple ceremony, on Jan. 1, marked the transfer of the last $1000 of the purchase price of $30,000 to the former owner, and the property passed into possession of the Kenmore Association, a national organization with headquarters here.

Three years ago the property was about to be cut up into building lots and sold when a group of women, representing the Washington Lewis Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, conceived the idea of purchasing the estate and preserving it for posterity. Accordingly the Kenmore Association was organized and an active campaign was carried to every State in the Union.

Kenmore was built in 1752 by Colonel Fielding Lewis to be the home of his bride, and it was there that he and Betty Washington lived for many years. At that time the mansion house of an 800-acre farm, it now occupies a quiet and dignified spot in the residential section here. Stately and imposing without, its interior walls are adorned with stucco work which George Washington himself designed and had executed at his orders by Hessian prisoners of war.

True to the older type of colonial buildings, there is no veranda, or porch; steps lead directly into the front entrance. The drawing room, where the presentation exercises were conducted, was the gathering place of the flower of colonial aristocracy, and later, when the new nation was born, it was the scene of many celebrations in which both American and French officers toasted the victories [illegible]

WAR, SPORT AND ART ARE HIS RELAXATIONS BETWEEN MARRIAGES

Three Heiresses Already Have Married and Divorced Preston Gibson and Now a Fourth Is Planning for Wedding in the Spring

His Friends Attribute His Fatal Charm to an Abiding Faith in Women and His Youthful Opinion of Love—A Niece of Marshall Field, a Granddaughter of H. H. Rogers and the Granddaughter of U. S. Senator McMillan Are His Former Wives—Now He Will Wed Miss Evelyn Spaulding of Old Boston Family and His Friends Are Saying "Bravo! He Is the Greatest Champion of Marriage in the World!"

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.

PRESTON GIBSON is 46 years old now, and has given up tournament squash almost entirely. His friends admit that his cross shots at polo are not what they used to be. There are some who maintain that he bears less heavily on the accelerators of his faster automobiles than he did in former years. Others profess to see in him a tendency to play short of the trap on long carries and take a second iron over. He has even been accused of underbidding no trump hands.

Thus is Preston Gibson, the clubman, being pushed toward staid, sober fifty. Nor is Preston Gibson, the playwright, treated more kindly. Whenever he puts a play on Broadway the critics are sure to speak of Preston Gibson's earlier manner, or if they refuse to concede him a manner they say, "Several of his lines limped. Was it from old age?"

It is only in affairs of the heart that Preston Gibson, millionaire and man of the world, holds firm to his place in the ranks of those perennially young. Washington, New York, Paris and Chicago society—he is well known to all four—have never questioned his youthful viewpoint on woman, lovely woman. Therefore, when it was announced a few days ago that he would marry Miss Evelyn Harris Spaulding of Boston in the spring, society nodded. In the spring? How youthful! So Gibson was to take a fourth wife. How hopeful! How young. Youth and Hope go hand in hand, say the poets.

A Marrying Man

Announcement of the engagement was made by Miss Spaulding's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Spaulding of Boston. It has been remarked of Gibson that he either marries unconventionally or conventionally. Two of his former marriages were elopements. One was a church wedding with the blessing of the bride's family. His fourth marriage, it appears, will make the record even; two and two.

Hitherto, the public has learned little of Gibson's romances until they reached the divorce courts. Spectacular in all things, Gibson has managed to suppress most of the details of his courtships. He is credited with the most meticulous taste in the matter of his marriages so that between the first and the second, the second and third, the third and the fourth the newspapers have had little to mull over. Respectable marriages and as far as possible respectable divorces have been the rule with him.

All that is known of the present romance is that the prospective bride comes of an excellent Boston family. She is descended from John Hopkins, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. She was educated at the Farmington school and Barnard College and finished abroad. It is presumed that she met Gibson at a social function, but at what social function or where is not known by the impertinent public. Newspapermen have three stock phrases for use in recounting Gibson's marital affairs.

The First One

One is: "Neither Gibson nor his fiancee would discuss their romance." Another is, "Neither Gibson nor his wife could be reached for a statement." The third: "Neither Gibson nor his former wife would make a statement."

Gibson's first marriage was in 1900 and it might be said that in this affair he set himself a high mark—a mark which he managed to equal in his other marriages, for not one of his wives was a chorus girl. The three women who have borne his name have been of the socially elect; all were either immensely wealthy in their own right or the daughters of wealthy parents. The social and financial standing of the Spauldings of Boston would indicate that the fourth Mrs. Gibson will maintain that high position expected of a wife of Preston Gibson.

As the son of the late Senator Randall Lee Gibson of Louisiana, young Preston found himself welcome in the best New England homes when he went East to college. He started at Fordham and later changed to Yale. Here he made a name for himself as an athlete and fraternity man. His father had left him $1,000,000, and he early displayed capacity for large and graceful spending.

When Gibson was a senior at Sheffield Scientific School he received an invitation from Mrs. Thomas Nelson Page to attend a ball given in honor of her daughters, the Misses Field, at Washington. Mrs. Page's first husband was Henry Field, a brother of Marshall Field, the Chicago department store owner. So it came about that young Gibson met Miss Minna Field, an heiress to millions.

She was attending the Misses Masters' School at Dobbs Ferry, N. Y. and her teachers after the manner of that strict day would permit no men to call who did not have the family sanction. Gibson doubtless would have been allowed properly chaperoned interviews with the young lady, but neither he nor she had platonics in mind. They fell in love that night of the ball, and Gibson determined to marry as soon as he could contrive an elopement.

The lovers hit upon a scheme of code telegrams. Gibson would wire Miss Field, "Father slightly ill. Nothing serious. Thought you might arrange to come to Washington." She would reply stating that was impossible unless the case was urgent, the telegram probably meaning "Love and kisses." When the elopement plans were perfected Gibson sent this telegram:

She Meets "Uncle"

"Uncle is better and will be in New York Saturday." Miss Minna took the message to the Misses Masters and they readily gave her permission to visit "Uncle" in New York. Gibson met her and they were married.

The newlyweds went to Chicago where Gibson worked for a while as a reporter. They traveled much and were social leaders in many circles. A son was born to them and they named him Henry Field Gibson after Mrs. Gibson's father.

In Chicago Gibson made a name for himself as a sportsman. He gained the reputation of being the best polo player at the Onwentsia Club. On the golf links he performed in championship style, but never concentrated long enough to make permanent ranking for himself in tournament play. It was rather in the social graces that he shone brightest.

He was credited with being the best cotillion leader in Lake Forest in the days when cotillion leaders were cotillion leaders. His presence on the ballroom floor was so distinguished as to win for him the post of official cotillion leader of the Taft administration. So good was he at leading the polka and maxixe that he was mentioned prominently for Assistant Secretary of State. His friends never could see why he wasn't given the appointment. It was said that the administration could not have found a man anywhere who would wear kid gloves more perfectly nor possess a better drawing room manner than Preston Gibson.

Being a nephew of the late Chief Justice White of the United States Supreme Court Gibson always has dabbled in the social side of politics. During the Wilson administration he was known as the kid glove advisor of the diplomatic corps.

Chicago friends do not speak so well of him as a playwright. They say that Gibson, being author was also angel of his plays, which is to say that he financed his own brain children. His friends attended opening nights out of courtesy and he kept the productions going for awhile from his purse, but few of the Gibson plays could have survived on their merits.

Of course the most interesting development in Gibson's Chicago career was the divorce suit filed against him by his first wife. As Minna Field she had been Chicago's own daughter and news of her matrimonial wreck was read avidly on the North Shore. Newspaper files of those days yielded the following allegations made by Mrs. Field:

"He seized me with his hands at my throat and snook me until my hair came down. He struck me on the shoulder. He attempted to break in the door of my room. He made three attempts. He often used vile language in my presence. Almost every day he displayed great anger whether he was violent or not.

"In August, 1900, at York Harbor, Me., he threw an apollinaris bottle at me. His language was abusive."

A separation occurred and in the spring of 1907 Mrs. Gibson brought suit. A year after the decree was granted she married Algernon Burnaby of England. She was awarded custody of Henry Field Gibson.

The Second One

Two years after he had been divorced by his first wife Gibson married Miss Grace McMillan Jarvis, granddaughter of the late Senator James McMillan of Michigan. The affair took place in Washington and was a great social event. Reginald C. Vanderbilt and Paul Rainey were among the ushers.

Gibson as a dilletante in letters had established a reputation for amateur playwriting. Before his first divorce he had written "Mrs. Erskine's Devotion, "Fate," "Cupid's Trick" and the "Turning Point." The last named play was produced at Hackett's Theater in New York. Critics accused Gibson of cribbing many of his lines from Oscar Wilde. His best dialogue, they said, had appeared in Wilde's "A Woman of No Importance" and "The Ideal Husband." The only explanation that ever came from Gibson was that if the lines had been written before he wrote them he must be guilty of "unconscious absorption."

He continued his dabbling in literature during the period of the second marriage, but spent more and more time in the social whirl. Acquaintances by this time had begun to mark his zest for feminine companionship. He was seen on several occasions with a lady not his wife and matters grew tense at Newport in the summer of 1914. However, Mrs. Gibson's mother and the mother of "the other woman" who was a prominent society girl, joined forces to save Gibson's matrimonialship. Mrs. Gibson was assured that the other woman would drop out and all would be as before. However, within six months she was asking "Which other woman?" She had discovered that there was more than one.

In 1915 Mrs. Gibson engaged a detective to shadow her husband. The detective's findings were made the basis of a suit of divorce. The detective trailed him on gay parties to Boston and Baltimore. Whatever the truth of these charges, Gibson entered no denial and the second Mrs. Gibson was granted her decree in 1917 with custody of their two children, James McMillan Gibson and Mary Preston Gibson.

Mere Diversion

In the interludes between his marriages and divorces Gibson afforded the public several bright bits of news. Once he bet a Washington friend $1000 that Charley Street, a ball player could catch a baseball thrown from the top of the Washington Monument. He won the bet. Another wager of his was to bet a fellow clubman that he could not find a four footed animal with blue and white stripes, the stripes not to be more than two inches wide.

"I hope I will lose," said Gibson, "because I'd like to see such an animal. It would be worth the wager."

On another occasion the public was informed that Preston Gibson had been turkey-trotting so much he had developed appendicitis. Scarcely had this announcement gone over the wires when it was recounted how Gibson had submitted to an operation for the removal of his appendix without anesthetics, telling the surgeon to go ahead and cut while he looked on. It was also reported some time after that Gibson had been badly injured in a boxing match at one of his clubs.

These, however, were the mere diversions of the man, the whimsies of one whose talents were varied. The public sensed that Gibson was primarily a matrimonial expert. He had proved his gameness and stamina on the operating table and in the prize ring. Now he was ready to try the altar again.

But it was not to be right away. Instead, Gibson felt that his nerves needed a rest, after two divorce hearings. So he went to France and enlisted in the ambulance service. He was twice cited for gallantry under fire,

He Steadies His Nerves

When the United States entered the war, Gibson joined up with the marine corps as a private, although his training would have entitled him to a commission. He fought through the war as private, and noncommissioned officer and finally won his right to wear the shoulder straps.

Having seen war at its worst and having met the test nobly, Gibson came home. His admirers said: "He'll get married again. This war has taken the memory of those earlier battles from him. He will marry again."

And he did. His third wife was Mrs. Beatrice M. Benjamin Pratt, granddaughter of the late H. H. Rogers, Standard Oil millionaire. They met in New York where both were social lights. One evening Gibson chartered a taxicab and they eloped to Greenwich, Conn. Neither the Benjamin nor Rogers families approved the match, although individual members afterwards relented. The marriage occurred Oct. 17, 1919.

The Third One

A little more than a year later Mrs. Gibson III took up her residence in Paris. Despite attempts by her husband to effect a reconciliation Mrs. Gibson finally sued for divorce and in 1922 was granted a decree. The charges were not published.

Sadly, Gibson went back to his playwrighting, his club chairs, his squash and showers. He produced "Success," "The Vacuum" and "The Derelicts." But the critics said he should stick to matrimony. He entered a few horse shows and played in several bridge tournaments, but the public said, "He should not be discouraged. He should marry again For it was all too clear that Gibson's abiding enthusiasm is woman.

In vain bachelor friends urged Gibson to take refuge in his clubs. He belongs to many. There are the Bazerius Society of Yale, National Steeplechase and Hunt Club of Chicago; the Yale Club, the Lambs, the Strollers and the Players of New York; the Metropolitan, Chevy Chase, the Playhouse and the Racquet and Squash of Washington and the Clam Bake Club of Newport. At any of these he might have found a welcome.

"He won't," said the public, "he'll marry again. He has faith in marriage."

It is to be in the spring.

Announcement of Betrothal of Miss Grace Wallace, Former Veiled Prophet Queen, Made Engagement to Marion Niedringhaus Becomes Known at Mixed Tea—Miss Frances Hope Compton and Turner Clarkson to Be Married.

Of the scores of betrothals announced during the year, when the young women chance to be the daughters of prominent families, that of a former Veiled Prophet queen incites perhaps the most interest. Her very title conjures up the brilliant picture of a young miss, not out of her teens, gowned in a manner befitting her rank, walking calmly down the aisle of the Coliseum, the cynosure of 10,000 pairs of eyes, to receive the highest gift in the power of St. Louis society.

Yesterday, at a mixed tea at her home, announcement was made of the engagement of Miss Grace Whitelaw Wallace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon B. Wallace of the Ladue road, and consort of the Veiled Monarch of 1923, to Marion Niedringhaus, son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Niedringhaus of 10 Westmoreland place. The marriage, for which plans have not as yet been made, will unite two families of impeccable social position.

Miss Wallace is a graduate of Mary Institute and Holton Arms in Washington, D. C. She made her debut in the year of her coronation, and was invited to become a member of the Junior League and Imperial that year. Mr. Niedringhaus is an alumnus of the University of Virginia and during the war served in the navy. He is also a member of the Imperial, and holds cards in the St. Louis Country and Racquet Clubs. About 75 guests were present at the tea yesterday. In addition of the younger members of society, there were a number of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace's friends, and some of the young married set. The occasion was a prenuptial dinner given by Miss Compton in honor of Miss Dorothy Claggett and Donald Danforth, who are to be married March 3, and a dance following. While the 42 guests were seated at dinner, an orchestra wended its way through the dining room singing improvised verses about the guests, and during a pause in the conversation announced the engagement. The bride is a graduate of Mary Institute and Vassar College, and made her debut last year at a Japanese ball

NUN'S BODY REMAINS PRESERVED 300 YEARS

Special Correspondence of the Chicago Daily News and the Post-Dispatch. (Copyright, 1923.)

MADRID, Spain, Dec. 28.—The Blessed Mariana of Jesus, a nun who died in 1624 and whose body has been for many years an object of veneration in the church of Don Juan de Alarcon in Madrid, is the source of much wonder. In 1731 and 1873 were other occasions when the body was examined.

The mystery, as far as science is concerned, is to explain the preservation of the body. It is well known that desiccation of some sort is necessary for a human body to be preserved. Both natural and artificial processes of mummification consist in drying processes, of which there is no evidence in the case under consideration.

Mariana of Jesus died in the month of April and 24 hours after death was still exposed in the church. Therefore mortification must have set in. It is certain that the first stage did. Why was it interrupted and not followed by the second stage?

The Bishop of Madrid recently asked for another medical report on the corpse, to which miraculous conditions are attributed. The body was examined by Dr. Thomas Maestre, professor of the faculty of medicine of Madrid, assisted by two other specialists.

Coffin Opened.

The seals and locks closing the coffin with a glass side, in which the body lay exposed, dressed in the white habit of the order of mercy, were opened with due ceremony in the presence of many witnesses who, during the three days the examination lasted, were present whenever the body was approached.

The corpse gave off a strong balsamic odor. It was quite rigid beneath the fine linen underclothes in which it was dressed.

The arms were folded. The hands did not rest on the body but were erect. Flesh had been cut from the calf of one of the legs by relic hunters and several incisions were in different parts of the body, evidently made long after death and probably evidence of the ill-treatment inflicted by Napoleon's soldiers in 1809.

Dr. Maestre, after prolonged research in the laboratory, offers the explanation that the bacillus butyricus, discovered by Pasteur, developed and arrested the process of destruction of the tissues initiated by nature.

Queen Pays Tribute.

He discovered the bacillus butyricus and came to the conclusion that the color was produced by butyric acid and colestrina. Taking these two commercial products he actually reproduced it. What Dr. Maestre declares admits of no explanation is the origin and existence of the microbe in the body for 200 years.

Dr. Maestre read his report in the presence of the patriarch of the Indies, Prince Louis of Bavaria, who is also a doctor in medicine.

The 300th anniversary of the death of Sor Mariana de Jesus has been celebrated with great pomp in Madrid. Her body, replaced, after examination, in the funeral urn that has held it for so many years, was taken to the cathedral, where multitudes came to pray in the presence of the uncorroding corpse. Among those who thus paid their tribute of devotion was Queen Victoria Eugenia.

Then Sister Mariana's body was conducted back to its shrine in the church of the convent where she lived her holy life in the heart of Old Madrid. A great new "Broadway" of 15-story houses now runs through the city, hardly a stone's throw away, but the ancient convent survives in the quiet backwater of a side street, letting the tide of modern life rush by. There Sor Mariana rests. For how long? Three times now has it been disturbed.

LAFAYETTE'S EXPERIENCE ON SINKING RIVER BOAT RECALLED

Was on the Na... After Visit in Illinois When Craft Sank in Ohio River.

By the Associated Press.

SHAWNEETOWN, Ill., Jan. 24.—Shipwrecked at midnight on an unknown river, Gen. Lafayette, Revolutionary War hero from France, underwent the most harrowing experience of his entire second visit to America as he was returning east from a trip to Illinois, it is recalled in connection with the centennial celebration of his visit here, now being planned.

The General with his party had left Shawneetown on the river boat Natchez, whose captain had been instructed to make all possible haste. In the pitch of night, after all but the watches had retired, the boat suddenly struck a snag on the Ohio River, 120 miles below Louisville, and all was confusion. Although the boat listed and became almost entirely submerged in 10 minutes, all the passengers reached land safely.

Col. Lavasseur, Gen. Lafayette's private secretary, in describing the incident, remarks that although there was but one boat in which to escape from the sinking vessel, every passenger's first concern was for the noted General. In spite of their frenzy, when someone shouted "Here is Lafayette," the noise quieted, and the demoralized crowd stood aside to allow the General to descend into the boat. On the morning following, another boat which happened to pass the spot, picked up the party and took them to their destination.

The Frenchman's visit to Shawneetown was shorter than his stay in Kaskaskia. Citizens from near and far had come to Shawneetown for the occasion, and when his boat landed, they formed a double line from the wharf to the hotel. The officials passed down the line, met the General and escorted him back through it to the hotel, where the people stood bare-headed.

Several toasts were drunk, Lafayette's being "The citizens of Shawneetown and Gallatin County: may they long continue to enjoy the blessings which are justly due to industry and love of freedom."

INDUSTRIAL SAFETY COURSE

Instructions on industrial accident prevention will be given in a course of 12 consecutive Friday night meetings, starting this week, by the St. Louis Safety Council, at the Community Center, Grand and Vista avenue. Enrollment is open to anyone interested in industrial safety and the course is especially designed to be of value to foremen, master mechanics, plant superintendents and others at the head of departments that involves an element of hazard to employes.

This will be the sixth annual series of industrial prevention meetings.

Gasoline-Electric Cars on M-K-T.

Gasoline electric cars and trailers will be put into service on the M-K-T Railroad between Joplin, Mo., and Parsons, Kan., a distance of 54 miles, as soon as the cars can be built, it was announced yesterday. The service is being installed to meet the demand for cheaper transportation created by motor-bus competition.

Gain Beauty

And keep it—as I did!
By Edna Wallace Hopper

As a girl, I multiplied my beauty until it brought me world-wide fame. After 40 years in a stage career, I have kept that beauty. To the thousands who see me daily I look like a girl of 19.

That is due to cultivation and to scientific care. Not to ordinary beauty helps. I have spent years and fortunes to secure the utmost science offers.

Now I have had those helps combined so a dozen are applied at once. And I am placing them at every woman's call.

One is a super-cream. It is supplied by all druggists and toilet counters as Edna Wallace Hopper's Youth Cream.

It is far more than a cream. It contains products of both lemon and strawberry. Also all the best that modern experts know to foster, soften, feed and protect the skin. All in one application. I cannot believe that there exists another beauty help to compare.

My Youth Cream comes in two types—cold cream and vanishing. They contain the same important ingredients. I use the cold cream as a night cream, the vanishing in the day. Never is my face one hour without it. The result is a complexion for 40 years admired.

I wish I knew how to induce all girls and women to adopt this super-cream. It means so much to them. I will gladly send you some to try if you will mail this coupon. Please do that if you wish to know how much a cream can do.

This old herbal remedy has been used for 60 years in all parts of the world in bringing blessed relief to sufferers from kidney and liver ills. For your health's sake take care of your kidneys.

PIMPLY? WELL, DON'T BE

People Notice It. Drive Them Off With Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets.

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed wit a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c and 30c.

CAPITAL SOCIETY IS BUSY WITH MANY FUNCTIONS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22.—The judiciary held the center of the stage socially and officially in Washington this week, culminating in Thursday's reception in honor of the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court and the Associate Justices at the White House by President and Mrs. Coolidge.

The Chief Justice and Mrs. William Howard Taft, followed by the Associate Justices and their wives, were the first to be received by the President and Mrs. Coolidge and the retiring Attorney-General and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone. It was indicative of the changeableness of the official atmosphere in Washington to recall that less than 20 years ago Chief Justice and Mrs. Taft stood on the same spot to receive the guests at a judiciary reception as the chief executive and first lady of the land and that the next judiciary reception the Attorney-General and Mrs. Stone will doubtless be among the honor guests of the judiciary.

The meeting of the Missouri State Society at the Roosevelt Hotel last Monday had been widely heralded in congressional circles in Washington. Mrs. Phillip North Moore of St. Louis, who is busy preparing for the quinquennial of the International Council of Women, of which she is the president, looked very attractive in her becoming gray lace gown. Other visitors from Missouri were Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Cloud of Kansas City, James E. Smith of St. Louis, Mrs. Henry N. Ess of St. Louis and Kansas City, Mrs. St. Clair Moss of Columbia, and Otto Mather of St. Louis.

Senator Seldon P. Spencer spoke on a recent trip he took with Mrs. Spencer to Bermuda, and Maj. Charles Trowbridge Tittman sang a group of songs. The next meeting of the Society of Missourians will be held Feb. 16.

Col. and Mrs. James Carson Breckenridge have as their guest Miss Gladys Braezaele of New Orleans, who came to Washington as the first woman messenger with a presidential vote. Mrs. Breckenridge and her sister-in-law, Mrs. James M. Thomson of New Orleans, formerly Miss Genevieve Champ Clark of Missouri, are close friends of Miss Braezaele. Miss Braezaele was one of the most ardent women workers for Mrs. Thomson when she ran for the nomination for United States Representative last year. When Mrs. Coolidge heard that Miss Braezaele was here and anxious to attend the judiciary reception at the White House, she sent her an invitation by special messenger.

Mrs. Leigh C. Palmer and Mrs. Breckenridge Long are two of the busiest women in Washington just now, for not only have they the responsibility of playing Mah Jongg with the human tiles made up of society men, women and children of Washington for the benefit of Belleau Wood memorial, Feb. 6, but they are in charge of costuming some of the groups. Mrs. Palmer, who lived for several years in the Orient, has many beautiful Chinese costumes which will be used for the mandarins and flowers.

Miss Bessie McKeldin, daughter of Mrs. Palmer, was one of the guests in whose honor Miss Janet Moffett, daughter of Rear Admiral and Mrs. William A. Moffett entertained at luncheon on Thursday. Miss McKeldin will give a dinner dance next week.

Princess Cautacuzene and her mother, Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant, were among those entertaining at luncheon after the Wednesday morning musical. Princess Cautacuzene was also a guest at the tea given at the Grace Dodge Hotel of the Y. W. C. A. by Mrs. John D. Rockefeller Jr. last Thursday. Mrs. Curtis D. Wilbur, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, and Mrs. Robert Lansing, wife of the former Secretary of State, were among those assisting Mrs. Rockefeller.

Mrs. Bessie Parker Bruggeman has taken a box for "the game of Mah Jongg" Feb. 6 and will entertain at dinner before the event. Mrs. Bruggeman will also entertain a party of guests at the opera "Faust" by the Washington Opera Company in the new Washington Auditorium next Monday night.

Mrs. Edwin Puller, Mrs. Breckenridge Long, Mrs. Selden P. Spencer, Mrs. John R. Williams, Mrs. James Carson Breckenridge were among those attending the Wednesday morning musical arranged by Mrs. Lawrence Townsend Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Charles P. Grandfield, Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins and Mrs. Edwin Puller were among the guests at the reception given in honor of Mrs. John R. Sherman, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, and Miss Belle A. Sherwin, president of the League of Women Voters this week.

The dean of George Washington University and Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins attended the White House reception for the judiciary. Mrs. Hodgkins wore a handsome gown of white lace over white satin.

Mrs. Cleveland Newton, wife of Representative Newton, was also at the White House reception wearing a smart costume of black velvet draped to one side and with a square train embroidered in stripes of rhinestones.

VARIETY—MONOTONY

What a glorious condition of affairs it is that we all do not follow the same trend through life!

Can you imagine what would be the result if we did?

Picture in your mind what life would be without variety!

Suppose we all dressed alike; indulged in the same pastimes; patronized the same amusements; conversed on the same subject; what would be the result?

Monotony dulls the brain; variety sharpens it.

Truly variety is the flavor of life.

Simple Application That Dissolves Blackheads

No more squeezing and pinching to get rid of those unsightly blemishes, blackheads. There is one simple, safe and sure way to get them out and that is to dissolve them. Get about two ounces of calomite powder from your druggist—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub briskly over the blackheads for a few seconds—wash the parts and every blackhead will be gone.

Pinching and squeezing out blackheads make large pores and you cannot get all of the blackheads out this way—while this simple application of calomite powder and water dissolves every particle of them and leaves the skin and pores in their natural condition.

WHAT WOULD YOU GIVE TO GET THIN?

It cost me only a few cents a day to lose 50 lbs. You can do the same in a remarkably short time. Let me tell you how.

No diets, exercises dangerous drugs or girdles

DO you ever stop to think how costly it is to be too fat? How much have you spent on doctors' bills and medicines, either for high blood pressure, headaches, heart trouble, dizziness, bachaches, puffing, swollen limbs, etc., which generally are due to obesity, and could be done away with by reducing. What about the extra money you pay for clothes to fit you? Yet, to-day, it is easy to get rid of excess fat and the various ailments which go with it.

What would you give to be able to get into smart-looking, ready-made clothes? How would you like to be able to do your work at the office or at home and still be full of pep at the end of the day? Wouldn't you love to be able to sit at the table and eat nearly everything you like? How many times have you said to yourself when admiring a slender, youthful looking woman, "Oh! how I wish I could look like that!" WELL, YOU CAN look just as you want to look if you use SAN-GRI-NA. To-day fat people can easily and safely reduce, and while reducing, improve their health, thanks to this marvelous scientific discovery called SAN-GRI-NA.

The wonderful part about SAN-GRI-NA is that it will not leave you flabby or wrinkled. Neither will it make you look skinny or angular, but in a remarkable short time you can mold your figure into beautiful, slender, attractive form; your skin will be firm, healthy and clear; your health will be improved, and your entire system will be revitalized. You can weigh exactly what you wish to weigh. All you need to do is to take SAN-GRI-NA until you attain the desired measurements, then stop; just as I did!

It only took me a little over nine weeks to lose 53 pounds, after I had been a slave to excess fat for years. I had tried everything known to reduce, without success. Diets did nothing but weaken me. Exercises never helped me a bit and rubber girdles made me feel dreadfully uncomfortable.

The first three weeks I took SAN-GRI-NA I only lost a few pounds, but I felt so much better in health and spirit, that I was encouraged to keep it up, and I determined then and there to become slender. I faithfully used SAN-GRI-NA for nine weeks, and the transformation I went through was simply marvelous. To-day, I am active, slender, filled with ambition and strength. I look and feel far younger than I did ten years ago, and although I have not taken SAN-GRI-NA for months, I have not regained one pound. Start to take SAN-GRI-NA to-day. Don't postpone it. You have done that too long. Get a box from your drug store, and see how quickly you can become slender and attractive. SAN-GRI-NA is guaranteed entirely harmless by leading physicians, and sold with money-back guarantee. On sale at any of Stockert Bros., Draper & Maguire's, Otto's, Judge & Dolph's, Wolff-Wilson's, Johnson or Kranson Bros.' Drug Stores or any department store.

FATHER HELPS SEND SON TO REFORMATORY

Tells Court He Believes Boy Guilty of Many Automobile Thefts.

A 17-year-old youth of neat appearance stepped to the bar in Federal Judge Davis' court yesterday and plead guilty of violating the Dyer act, covering the transportation of stolen automobiles. The youth, Kenneth Kramer, 3655A Arsenal street, started to explain that he had taken the automobile as a lark.

At this point, a spectator in the courtroom advanced and identified himself as the boy's father, Frederick Kramer.

"This boy is incorrigible," he asserted. "I have tried to raise him right. I've put him through grammar school and into high school. I gave up a good position as a traveling salesman to be with him constantly, but to no avail. He has taken up with bad company and I am satisfied he has stolen more automobiles than this one."

"The Government maintains a good training school for boys—the National Training School at Washington, D. C.," remarked the Judge. "Do you want me to send him there until he is 21?"

"I hope you will," was the reply.

Sentence was pronounced, and the father, without a word, turned and strode out of the courtroom.

SALES DAYS FOR WELLSTON

Merchants Adopt Plan of Attracting New Customers.

Wellston merchants are co-operating in a plan to set aside the first three days of each month as "gala sales days," in order to attract new customers from other parts of St. Louis and from the communities lying beyond the St. Louis city limits.

During the first sales period, Feb. 2, 3, 4, each of the co-operating merchants has announced he will offer two items of his stock at wholesale prices. Outdoor entertainment and other features are planned for future months as weather permits.

15 MULES DIE IN FIRE

$35,000 Damage in Blaze at Brick Factory.

Fifteen mules were burned to death and two frame structures destroyed, with a loss estimated at $35,000, in a fire at the plant of the Progress Press Brick Co., Kingshighway and Fyler avenue, discovered at 1:45 a. m. yesterday.

The fire originated in a one-story shed, where the mules were stabled. Eleven other mules were led to safety by Joseph Lutz, private watchman, who discovered the fire, and Patrolman Charles Byes of the Magnolia avenue station, both of whom were partly overcome by smoke. The fire is thought to have been caused by defective wiring.

AD CLUB PLANNING FOR MERCHANDISE MEETING HERE

Sessions Will Be Held in Connection With American Retailers' Association.

The St. Louis Advertising Club has announced tentative plans for the Move-More-Merchandise Conference to be held in St. Louis, Feb. 9, 10, 11, in connection with the annual convention of the American Retailers' Association. An educational program of ideas and demonstrations in the problems of merchandising, advertising and store operation will be offered.

The Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, has been secured for the feature address. He is a popular speaker at business conventions and his topic at the forthcoming conference will be "The First Line of Defense."

Some of the topics to be discussed at the various sessions are "Making Newspaper Publicity Pay," "Making More Money in Retailing," "The Importance of Window Display" and others related to the modern and efficient operation of the retail store.

The Move-More-Merchandise Conference is an annual affair, and the Advertising Club endeavors to shape its programs to meet particularly the needs of the small-town retailer.

Telling How and When to Use Trustworthy Products and Reproducing Extracts of Patrons Letters Relating to Cadomene, Balmwort, Sulpherb, Arbolone, Su-thol, Mentho-Laxene, Minyol, Hypo-Nuclane, Vilane, Etc.

Faulty Kidney Function

I wish to mention a discomforting condition which is likely to attack every person at some time in life. Generally it is certain to trouble those past forty. It is a mild inflammation but especially prone to the bladder. Through the day, it seems to give little annoyance, but at night it causes much distress through loss of sleep, as its victims are compelled to be up and down from two to a dozen times each night, to relieve the bladder of its contents. This is unnatural and tends to weaken the whole body. It is often due to weak-acting kidneys.

Correcting the trouble is a simple matter in nine cases out of ten. I recommend the non-secret remedy, Balmwort tablets to be taken as per directions. Relief follows quickly, much to the delight of those who have thus suffered.

Mrs. K. L. B. asks: "I have had a continued attack of rheumatism for over a year. Aching stiffness and soreness keeps me confined, and being unable to do housework, please advise at once."

Answer: I advise that you try Cardiol tablets for a month or two, taking regularly as per directions. This tablet in my opinion is unequaled for the uncomplicated rheumatic affections. Five-grain Su-thol tablets afford quick pain relief and may be taken with Cardiol tablets as needed.

R. B. J. writes: "I have a trembling of the nerves and 'shaky' sensation in arms and legs which annoys me greatly. I am in a nervous, run-down state, with poor appetite. Don't sleep well and am both weak and easily irritated all the time."

Answer: If constipation is one source of your trouble, take Sulpherb tablets as a liver and bowel tonic, while taking Cadomene tablets as a tonic for the blood and nerves. They may be taken at the same time.

N. S. M. asks: "When I arise in the morning I am covered with red splotches which itch terribly. I am troubled with constipation and pimples (Acne) on face and neck. Is my blood impure?"

Answer: Poisons due to retention of waste matter in the bowels give rise to skin troubles, pimples (acne), hives, etc. I recommend the continued use of Sulpherb tablets.

K. R. writes: "I read a letter of a registered nurse, who reduced 42 pounds by using a remedy which you recommended several years ago, but I have forgotten the name, now that I have decided to try it."

Answer: The name of the preparation is Arbolone tablets. It may be procured of leading druggists, and often proves effective when other medical treatment does not.

Mrs. A. C. writes: "My two children have been out of school for two weeks because of a severe cold and cough. Nothing we have used has seemed to help them and I write for advice."

Answer: Obtain essence Mentho-Laxene and dilute it with sugar syrup or honey. Give this to your children every hour or two. This is being used by thousands of mothers, because it is quickly effective and contains no opiates, chloroform, or narcotics to upset the little stomachs.

Mrs. R. T. asks: "What do you advise for a case of stomach trouble? Have bloated feeling after meals, drowsiness, with belching, sour risings and often bad headache annoys me."

Answer: Impairment of the digestive processes may be due to overeating, constipation, or to the wrong selection of foods and lack of exercise. Try to correct diet while getting prompt relief from the use of Triopeptine tablets.

R. L. J. writes: "I am suffering with terrible rheumatism pain and want a safe relief without morphine or kindred drugs."

Answer: Ask druggist for 5-grain Su-thol tablets (pronounced soothe-all). Contain no opiates or narcotics, but act quickly in relieving pain.

B. X. R. asks: "Will you please tell me a treatment for catarrh of the nose and throat?"

Answer: Locally use a solution of warm water with Vilane powder as per directions accompanying. Also, twice daily apply triple strength Mentho-Laxene Salve in nostrils.

Mrs. C. C. asks: "Is it possible for one who is very, very thin and of delicate constitution to add flesh by food or medicine?"

Answer: A nutritional tonic, Hypo-Nuclane tablets, is a most effective aid, taken with meals.

Answer to Many: So many write asking for a good laxative to counteract constipation. I think the most perfect is to be found in Cascara Royal Pills, as their action is pleasant and does not cease to be effective.

Answer to Miss C.: The use of plain yellow Minyol is quickly effective in stopping dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair. After using the hair becomes beautiful, lustrous and healthy. Especially good for beautifying bobbed hair, if coarse or oily.

NOTE: For many years Dr. Lewis Baker, Medical Director, The Blackburn Products Co., College Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, has been recommending trustworthy medicines to millions of people through the medium of the newspapers, and doubtless has helped in relieving the ailments and minor infirmities of the public more than any single individual in the world's history; and by an inexpensive method.

The medicines mentioned by him are pure and free from habit-forming drugs. They represent the combined wisdom and experience of physician and chemist.

Progressive druggists can supply them.

By reading his answers to others you should find a case similar to your own.

A copy of Dr. Baker's great guide book, "Health and Beauty," will be mailed to anyone sending ten cents (coin).

Thousands have written him expressions similar to the following:

Letters to Dr. Baker

WAPPINGERS FALLS, N. Y.: Mrs. Amelia Jageman writes: "I got two boxes of Arbolone tablets, took them and in eight weeks reduced from 219 to 197 pounds. My friends all said, 'you will be sorry, it will effect your heart.' I went to my doctor the other day—heart in fine condition. I am so glad I used it, etc."

ST. LOUIS, MO.: Mrs. L. Gastreich, 2906 Salena St., writes: "My husband had very bad backache for years. In the mornings he could hardly get up and always felt so draggy. We tried everything until I read about Balmwort tablets and he used just one box and to this day he never has had any more backache. Etc."

ROCHESTER, N. Y.: G. Cook, 16 Greenwood St., writes: "I had been suffering for years with indigestion. Could find nothing to relieve me, until I started taking Triopeptine tablets. After taking one box I was so relieved that I felt like a new man. Now I can eat well, and sleep sound all right. Etc."

BUFFALO, NEW YORK: Mr Bruce Slenker, 178 Niagara Street, writes: "Before taking Hypo-Nuclane tablets I was in a very much run-down condition. My day's work would tire me so much that I was in misery until I could go to bed. Life was a 'daily grind' for me. I was so tired that I was alienating myself from my wife and children. Then I heard of Hypo-Nuclane and tried a box. The result was marvelous. In a week's time I was beginning to feel livelier and stronger. Now when I come home I can romp with Junior and Alice. I feel like a new man. In the past two weeks I have gained 16 pounds, and think I have never spent money more wisely, etc."

NEW PORT RICHEY, FLA.: Oscar A. Ericson, Box 95, writes: "I cannot say enough for Mentho-Laxene Salve, Sulpherb and Cadomene tablets. These I have taken for the sickness I had and I am well today. I felt happy when I began to recover health and strength and could eat three meals a day, knowing that I could stay a while longer on earth, and feeling like a new man. Yours, etc."

DEARBORN, MICH.: Ernest E. Aber, Lock Box 491, writes: "Recently I saw your advice in the Grand Rapids Herald. I purchased Cadomene, Sulpherb, Su-thol tablets and Mentho-Laxene and have been using them for several weeks. I am delighted with the results! I had a severe cough and was completely run down and the least task was an effort. Now I feel like a new person. I take pleasure in recommending these remedies. With sincere good wishes, etc."

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.: Mr. C. J. Courtney, 4533 Snelling Ave., writes: "A few years ago I was suffering terribly with the itch, and tried everything. No help! I wrote to you. You sent me a recipe for salve and told me to get Sulpherb tablets. The second time I used your salve the itch disappeared—and what a relief. Then about 18 months ago I began to fail. I tried four different doctors. They failed to help me. I could not walk I was so weak. My blood was down to thirty. Then I started taking Sulpherb tablets and Cadomene tablets. Am on my second box of each and have been gaining right along. Now, wherever I can I recommend these good medicines, etc."

LINCOLN PLACE, PA.: Henry William Hunt writes: "I am writing these few lines about the stopping of a chronic cough and the restoration of my voice, after I had lost it, from the after effects of pleural pneumonia. I thought I would never get cured, but later tried Mentho-Laxene Cough Syrup and Mentho-Laxene Salve. I got relief right away, and after using for some time I got my voice back and am feeling in the best of health, thanks to Dr. Lewis Baker's advice, etc."

Information. If your regular druggist does not supply the medicines mentioned by Dr. Baker, the following can do so: Wolff-Wilson, Judge & Dolph Drug Stores, Johnson Bros., and all good druggists everywhere.

DENTAL SOCIETY PLANS BUILDING FOR PROFESSION

Fourteenth and Olive Streets Is Site Considered for New 12-Story Structure.

WILL BE DISCUSSED AT EARLY MEETING

Roxana Petroleum Company to Erect 9-Story Building at Thirteenth and Locust Streets.

By Berry Moore.

Outstanding developments of the week in the real estate field embody plans for pretentious building enterprises, notably for the business district, and Lindell boulevard.

The most interesting of these involves the northwest corner of Fourteenth and Olive streets, which is under discussion as a site for a building for members of the dental profession. This project contemplates a 10 or 12 story structure with ownership restricted to members of the St. Louis Dental Society.

One of the leading sponsors of the project said that a building of this nature was under consideration and would be a matter for discussion at a meeting of the St. Louis Dental Society Tuesday evening. It has been conceived, he stated, as an ethical proposition, which means that dentists who advertise, or others not eligible to membership in the society, will be excluded from participation in the enterprise.

The building is to belong exclusively to members of the society on a co-operative basis, with the units or offices owned by the occupants. This is to be effected through sale of stock in the building corporation, designating the number of units, or offices. Dividends from the stock will reimburse holders of the shares for the rental paid.

To Have Dental Library.

The scope of the building also may provide conveniences for research work and X-ray facilities. Space in the building will be reserved for the society's library, now housed in the Public Library.

The corner will overlook the Memorial Plaza and thus will form an attractive site for a building of this description. The site is owned by interests represented by the Holbrook-Blackwelder Real Estate Trust Co., through which the members of the society are negotiating.

As provided under the Bond Issue, the widening of Olive street will give to this thoroughfare the status of a boulevard which will enhance its aspect, especially for buildings along this line.

This is the second large building enterprise to be disclosed recently west of Twelfth boulevard, the other embracing the northeast corner of Thirteenth and Locust streets, for the general offices of the Roxana Co.

The Roxana Petroleum Investment Co. was incorporated Thursday, with F. Godber, president; P. R. Chenoweth, secretary, and T. F. Lydon, principal agent, to erect a nine-story office building on the Thirteenth and Locust street corner, for the general offices of the Roxana Co.

This building will occupy a position commanding both the Memorial Plaza and Locust street. Negotiations for the site were conducted through the Mercantile Trust Co.

Jefferson Hotel Plans.

In addition, plans have been announced for the erection of a 12-story addition to the Jefferson Hotel, through financial arrangements completed with the Mercantile Trust Co.

A building to cost $250,000 has been promoted by William A. Federer, of the Federer Realty Co., for the 3900 block of Lindell boulevard and one for Lindell boulevard and Whittier street, by Frank Morris of the Dougherty Realty Co.

Eugene Altheimer, in connection with Edward Thornhill, announces large building plans for St. Louis and Marcus avenue. Details of these projects, also those of the hotel and theater building to be erected on the Laclede Hotel site, are given elsewhere.

LACLEDE HOTEL SITE VALUED AT $560,000

A valuation of $560,000 is placed on the site of the Laclede Hotel, southeast corner of Sixth and Chestnut streets, according to the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co., which conducted the negotiations under which H. A. Sodini obtained a 99-year lease on the site. The valuation is on the basis of $4140 a foot for the Chestnut street frontage of 135 feet. The depth on Sixth street is 110 feet. The lease calls for an annual rental of $28,000. The hotel building which also is embraced in the lease, is regarded as of negligible value.

The lessee is required to erect at least a five-story building on the site within 20 years, to cost not less than $300,000, but he has announced his intention of erecting in the near future an eight-story hotel structure and theater, to cost $1,500,000.

Theater to Seat 1700.

The theater will have 1700 seats. There will be shops and stores on the first floor, which will include also a lounge, the hotel office and dining rooms. The upper floors will provide for 240 rooms with bath.

The lease was acquired from the estate of Joseph L. Griswold vested in Nellie Griswold.

Landmark of City.

The late Joseph Griswold acquired the property on June 11, 1881, from Moses Hiller and George H. Pegrum of Wilmington, Del., each of the parties owning a one-half interest. Griswold paid $45,000 for each interest, subject to a deed of trust of $110,000, the property costing him $200,000. He operated the hotel from 1881 until his death in 1914, at which time same was leased to Fred B. Michaels.

Soldini operates the Majestic Hotel, and is interested in the St. Francis Hotel in Minneapolis, and the Park Hotel in St. Paul.

A. F. LEONHARDT HEADS BUILDING LEAGUE

R. J. Richardson and J. L. McQuie Chosen Vice Presidents and E. A Kamp, Secretary-Treasurer.

The St. Louis Incorporated League of Building and Loan Associations, at its January meeting at the American Hotel, Wednesday, re-elected A. F. Leonhardt president by acclamation. Robert J. Richardson and James L. McQuie were elected vice presidents, and E. A. Kamp secretary-treasurer. The 1925 Executive Committee, besides the officers, includes John C. Hall and Hugh H. Stewart. Hall and McQuie are also members of the Legislative Committee of the Missouri State League of Building and Loan Associations.

The legislative measures the Missouri State League and the State Finance Department agreed upon at the midwinter conference at Kansas City recently and in St. Louis last November will be introduced in the General Assembly this week.

The importance of building and loan associations to Missouri is emphasized by the fact that the House now has a special building and loan associations committee. It consists of Representatives William F. Weinrich of St. Charles County, chairman, and Horace G. Beedle of St. Louis, W. L. Tucker of Stoddard, John F. Rees of Montgomery, Charles A. Young of Washington, W. H. Kittridge of Buchanan, W. M. Dewees of Grundy, I. T. St. Clair of Howard, Sam J. Galloway of Howell, Martin Mumma of New Madrid and O. J. Papke of St. Louis.

Hall, who is chairman of the Missouri State League, urged the creation of the committee. A similar committee is to be created in the Senate. The Legislatures of Eastern states have such bodies.

Nation-wide thrift week, which closed Friday, was observed by the 251 building and loan associations by a general drive for members. Returns from the larger associations indicate that more than 4000 men and women in St. Louis, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Jefferson City, Springfield and other Missouri cities became affiliated with such organizations, according to information in possession of officials of the State League. The total assets of these associations approximates $110,000,000 and the membership 160,000.

Committee Is Formed To Co-operate With City On Building of Homes

To Study Requirements of Dwellings and Flats —Will Encourage Sane Methods of House Building.

By WILLIAM C. E. BECKER, Building Commissioner of St. Louis.

The subject of home construction has been of great concern to man throughout the ages. It is a most timely subject today in view of the high cost of building construction.

A committee has been formed to co-operate with the division of building and inspection in making a study of that part of the St. Louis building code pertaining to the minimum requirements for the construction of small dwellings and two-family flats. This study is to be based upon the report of the building code committee of the Department of Commerce, entitled "Recommended Minimum Requirements for Small Dwelling Construction."

The committee is made up of a number of representatives of professional and business organizations, together with city officials. The personnel includes: Wilbur T. Trueblood, St. Louis Chapter American Intsitute of Architects; F. S. Woermann, Engineers' Club of St. Louis; Louis H. Grone, Master Builders of St. Louis; Harold M. Hess, St. Louis Chamber of Commerce; W. W. Butts, St. Louis Real Estate Exchange; F. L. Bock, Missouri Inspection Bureau; H. L. Block, cement industry of St. Louis; H. A. Boeckeler, lumber industry of St. Louis; F. C. Aschmeyer, clay products industry of St. Louis; Herman C. Kralemann, chairman Public Safety Committee of the Board of Aldermen; M. C. Emmanuel, chief engineer, Division of Building Inspection; E. O. Aegerter, deputy Building Commissioner, and the writer.

Report Is Excellent.

The report of the building code committee of the Department of Commerce is a monumental piece of work. It is the summary of an exhaustive investigation of the subject, extending in all parts of the United States. About 130 building codes were investigated and a tentative report submitted for criticism to more than 900 municipal officials, architects, engineers and officials of trade organizations. In its final form the report makes available much important data, and serves admirably as a basis for study and improvement of the sections of the St. Louis Building Code regulating the construction of small homes.

It is proposed to embody the results of the studies of the St. Louis committee in a report, and circulate the report for constructive criticism. This procedure will secure the best thought on the subject. It is proposed then to submit a final report in the form of an ordinance for consideration by the Board of Aldermen.

Ordinance to Be Complete.

It is intended that this ordinance shall be complete itself, except for the administrative sections of the building code. Its application is to be limited to small dwellings and two-family flats. Also, it is to be so plain and direct in its wording as to make it a real aid to the prospective home builder. In order to add to its usefulness, it is proposed to add an appendix that will be explanatory, and not mandatory, in its nature. This appendix is to contain recommendations and illustrations of safe construction practice indorsed by the Division of Building and Inspection.

Consideration will be given by the committee to various materials and types of construction, not now definitely permitted by the St. Louis building code, but which experience has proved to result in safe construction in other cities. A building ordinance should not exclude the use of any material, if it can be safely used; its function should extend only to defining the limits of safety.

Bringing the regulations for the construction of homes down to a safe minimum will have a very important bearing upon business and social conditions. It will tend to stimulate the building of homes, involving the sale of more building material, and creating more work for the building trades. The individual ownership of homes makes for social equilibrium. The citizen who owns his own home has an entirely different view of society and government than the one who does not.

To Encourage Home Owners.

Every effort should be made to encourage the ownership of homes. It is believed that the work of this committee will contribute toward this end and accomplish everything possible through the medium of a building code to encourage the building of homes.

The value of competent architectural advice in home construction cannot be overestimated. A complete set of plans and specifications, together with competent supervision of construction, make for economy. Attempting to construct a home from an incomplete set of plans generally results in expense for "extras," far in excess of the charges which would be made by an architect for furnishing complete plans, specifications and competent supervision.

Country Club Court

Hanley Road, One Block North of Wydown Boulevard

Country Club Court, when completed, will be one of the most attractive residence districts to be found anywhere. It will consist of 18 high-class homes surrounding a 30-foot grass plot embellished with evergreen trees and shrubbery.

Five of these homes have already been completed and more are in the course of construction. Three have been sold and two, a seven and an eight room residence, are ready for occupancy.

These houses are being erected with the same care and consideration that would be given a home being built under your own supervision. No detail to make them comfortable, efficient and beautiful has been omitted. A few of the attractive features in these seven and eight room residences are the large sunrooms, front and rear porches, oil burners for the hot-water heating plants, instantaneous hot-water heaters, electric refrigeration, garbage consumers, ventilating fans, white glazed brick garages for two cars, built in the houses, tile baths on each floor, pedestal lavatories, showers, double drain board porcelain sinks, cork linoleum on kitchen floors, bevel plate mirrors in doors, imported crystal prism lighting fixtures, Los Angeles Bachelor Tile Mantels, large closets and cabinets, and many other details which can only be appreciated when seen. Huttig's Satin Brand mill work is used throughout.

Homes in this Court range in price from $20,000 to $26,000. Residences such as these are usually offered at much higher figures, but our volume of construction makes possible these low prices. Satisfactory terms can be arranged if desired. Houses open for inspection. Come and see them today. Now is the time to buy and save money.

"JAZZ INSANITY" TO BE DEFENSE OF GIRL SLAYER

NUMEROUS THREATS AGAINST PRISONER

Police, Disturbed by Situation, May Remove the Defendant to Jail in Another City.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Jan. 24.—"Jazz insanity" will be the defense of Dorothy Ellingson, 16-year-old "dance mad" girl who murdered her mother.

A bitter fight was indicated today when Alexander Mooslin, attorney for Dorothy, announced if the girl went on trial for murder he would prove she was "mentally sick."

District Attorney Matthew Brady declared emphatically that "Dorothy is perfectly sane and we will resist an insanity plea at every step."

Mooslin said psychiatrists would establish the child defendant's mind was unbalanced when she shot her mother.

Belief of police that Dorothy's life is constantly in danger may cause her removal to another city. It was stated by Captain of Detectives Duncan Matheson today that unless threats against the girl ceased she would be placed in jail in a nearby city.

Attempts to make Dorothy pay for her crime with her own life reached a crisis when she was mailed a hangman's noose. The noose, with its grim knot, was anonymously sent to the girl by mail, but did not reach her hands because of precautions taken by police to examine the girl's heavy mail.

An investigation of the mailing of the noose was begun by the police and efforts will be made to trace the writer of a letter found attached to the rope. The letter said:

"You had the courage to kill your mother, now have enough courage to use this on yourself."

A large quantity of candy and fruit received by the girl during the past few days was destroyed by the officers.

COMPULSORY VACCINATION ORDER IN EAST ST. LOUIS

Ordinance Covers School Children and Industrial Factory Employes.

School children and industrial plant employes in East St. Louis must submit to vaccination beginning tomorrow, in compliance with an ordinance adopted by the East St. Louis City Council to prevent the spread of smallpox from negro districts.

The number of active cases now in the isolation hospital is 18, four less than a week ago. Of this number, only four are children, and all are negroes. Five cases were discharged last week, and only one new case was reported.

Health Commissioner Connors said the disease was under control, but that department inspectors would continue their investigations in an attempt to discover any hidden cases. Vaccination may be had at the City Hall basement after 9 a. m. tomorrow.

MURDER PAROLES WON BY EMOTION OF PAID LAWYER

Prison Board Understood A. G. Knight of Trenton Was Acting Without Pay, Warden Crawford Says.

RESULTED IN RELEASE OF 4 TRENTON MEN

Attorney Broke Down and Wept When Reading Letter Written by Himself About Case, Warden Asserts.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Jan. 24.—The emotion of A. G. Knight, Trenton lawyer, in pleading before the State Prison Board last December for the parole of four Trenton men, convicted of murdering a nonunion railroad shopman, became so great that he broke down while reading aloud to the board a letter he had written himself, thereby greatly impressing the board with the sincerity of the plea, former Warden J. S. Crawford said today.

But that was before the board members had learned that Knight was paid a $1000 fee and $200 expense money to obtain the paroles from Gov. Hyde. These payments to Knight by relatives of the convicts were testified to by witnesses appearing this week before the Senate committee investigating the granting of the four paroles by Hyde, two days before he went out of office.

Understanding as to Fee.

"It was the clear understanding of the Prison Board that Knight was not receiving any remuneration and was appearing solely through his expressed desire to heal a community breach in Trenton," Crawford said. "If the board had known he was being paid for his emotional plea, I don't believe the paroles would have been recommended. He told us Trenton was torn asunder by dissension over these cases, that lifelong friendships had been broken and that granting of the parole would end this strife.

"I, personally, was not so much impressed with his plea on behalf of the convicts as I was by his apparent earnestness to end a source of strife in his home community," Crawford continued. "Recent developments would indicate there might have been additional grounds for his emotion and tears."

Wept at Own Letter.

When the parole hearing was held before the board on Dec. 8 last, Knight made an impassioned plea for the paroles, Crawford said, after explaining his civic interest in the case. Knight then began reading a letter he had written to the general counsel of the Rock Island Railroad at Topeka, who had opposed a parole, urging the attorney to withdraw his objections.

In the midst of reading his own letter, Knight's voice choked, Crawford said, and he displayed visible emotion and dramatically threw the letter down on a table before the board, saying, "I can't go on. You read it."

When the four men were charged with the murder of a nonunion shopman at Trenton during the railroad strike in 1922, Knight was appointed a special Assistant Attorney General by Attorney General Barrett, at the request of Hyde, to prosecute the cases. As has been related, witnesses before the committee testified he urged the four men to plead guilty, which they did, on the ground that, if the State was put to slight expenses in the case it would be easier to get paroles for them after they had served part of their terms.

History of the Murder.

The men were sentenced to 10 years each and had served less than two years each when released. The murder victim was beaten to death with stones and clubs, when intercepted on a Trenton street while walking from the railroad yards to his home.

Crawford confirmed reports which had indicated the usual procedure in granting paroles was not followed in the parole of the four men. Former Gov. Hyde frequently declared he would grant no parole unless it had been taken up through regular channels with the State Prison Board, which sits as a parole board, and a recommendation for clemency made to him by the board. He had declared he would not call for cases from the board.

In this case, Parole Commissioner Pool and Warden Crawford were not entirely convinced, it was said, but agreed to abide by any recommendation that Gov. Hyde and Director H. F. Hoffman, both of Trenton, would make. The first proposal by the board was that the sentences be commuted to five years, Crawford said, but finally on the Governor's suggestion that the case be closed up by paroling the men, the board made a parole recommendation to Hyde. The Governor then issued the paroles in the closing hours of his administration.

COMMUNITY FUND TO HOLD SECOND ANNUAL MEETING

Session Will Be Open to Public and Distribution of Funds Will Be Explained.

The second annual meeting of the Community Fund of St. Louis will be held in parlor A of Hotel Statler at 3:30 p. m. tomorrow. The meeting will be open to the public and A. O. Wilson, treasurer, will tell how $1,425,000 was collected last year from 90,000 givers and distributed to 50 charities and philanthropies at a cost of less than 3 per cent. Other talks will be delivered by Harry B. Wallace, general chairman, and Elwood Street, director.

The St. Louis Chapter of the American Red Cross, which is a member of the Community Fund, in December gave assistance to 1872 former service men and their families in obtaining Government benefits, according to a report issued recently by P. H. Byrns, executive secretary. Of this number 882 were aided in filing applications for adjusted compensation and 990 were assisted in claims for service disabilities.

In addition to this work, the chapter reported the distribution of 39,606 bottles of milk and 1355 pounds of crackers through 14 milk stations, besides caring for 1072 indigent school children at three dental clinics financed jointly by the Red Cross and George A. Meyer.

Editor Disarms Assailant.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Jan. 24.—The once popular pastime of beating up the editor was tried unsuccessfully by the son of the militant communist Rappoport last night on Camille Aymard, director of the conservative newspaper, La Liberté. Aymard, after receiving a blow on the chin, took his assailant's cane from him and handed him over to police, but refused to prosecute against him. The elder Rappoport is said to have been angered by the article to which his son took offense.

Centerville Ia Illinois
Dec 9 1924.

My dear Dr Coe

It is indeed a pleasure to be able to write these few lines thanking you for the splendid service you have rendered to our family, by your splended treatment to my mother.

Just a few months ago, on July 1st to be exact I persuaded her to accompany me to your office, as I had been constantly reading your published testemonials. As you will recall it became necessary to have your nurse assist me in bringing her from the car to your office. And very often you were compelled to treat her at home due to her weakened condition.

You pronounced her case a very dangerous one but in spite of her extended different case just two weeks ago she left your office a different woman than she had been for ten years or more, pronounced absolutly cured.

Again I thank you and only hope that all those who are now suffering as my mother did for the past 10 years from this seemingly incurable disease may be fortunate enough to receive your splended reasonable and efficient treatment.

I am willing, yes eager to recommend you to any one who should so desire.

Sincerely Yours
W B Ennis

College toys for college boys (and girls, of course) at M.U.

Yes, even the students at the great University of Missouri still love childish things—Why, there's a young lady poet whose chief inspiration is an elephant built of felt —"Topsy" is a young man's idol, and she dances well, which may be why — "Gertrude" is an orange gingham pup that everybody loves —And there are others! :: ::

By RUTH MARY PACKARD.

ALTHOUGH university students usually have outgrown their first childhood and seldom have reached their second, yet they have not "put away childish things." The toys owned by the girls—and even the boys—of the University of Missouri would furnish half a dozen nurseries.

These toys of the adolescents are not playthings in any childish sense, but are cherished possessions, loved and kept because of unique histories, or peculiar personalities given to them by their imaginative owners. In a large variety of animals and dolls, dogs are the favorite and predominating figures.

By pedigree, the dogs are wooden, candy, gingham and mixed breeds, the gingham ones being at present the most popular and aristocratic. Unlike the campus pests, none of them are strays. They stay at home closely and are in no danger of the dog-catcher or of a premature death as a "hot dog."

One of the best known of the pups is the gaudy "Gertrude," made of orange gingham with white stripes which would make a zebra of her, were it not for vivid blue legs with white dots on them and long, floppy ears lined with the blue material. Gertrude was created last summer in the North Woods of Wisconsin by an enthusiastic mistress, who caught the fever in a dog-making epidemic which swept that part of the country. The dog was endowed at birth with an enormous brain capacity, if size of the head is any indication of that quality, but she has the nature of a light-headed flirt, judging by her rolling green eyes.

Of a very different character is "Check," a demure brown-and-white-checked gingham model who was made last summer to be a companion for its little freshman mistress, who entered the university in the fall. When Check first came he stood alone with a rather confident and knowing air, but he has been shocked off his feet and so disillusioned about life since then that he can only lie sadly on the mantel with his limber legs in the air and his shoe-button eyes rolled in horror at the ceiling.

"Narcissus," a lavender-and-white-checked affair, is surviving boldly and enjoys college life with a grin of contentment.

"Doc" is a wooden acrobatic pup who rivals the performers of the Ringling Brothers' circus. With five joints of tan, purple, yellow, blue and red, respectively, he can stand on either front or back legs and execute the most amazing contortions, maintaining all the while an expression of wide-eyed innocence and optimism on his puppy face.

To complete this canine group, there are "Flop," the spineless, whose only accomplishment is to live up to his name; "Felix," the wooden, straight from Aesop land, and "Peppy," the cheerful, made of peppermint sticks.

There are hardly enough cats to put up a good fight against these, their traditional enemies, but "Felix" and "Pat" would not be lacking in courage. Felix, like the dog of the same name, stepped out of the fables into life. She is of black varnished wood, with only a white nose and tail-tip to keep her from being a bad omen. No matter how far from home Felix might stray, she would never be lost, for, like a child traveler on a Pullman, she wears a breastplate bearing her name in large letters.

Pat gets her name from her peculiar kind of skin, which is patent leather, and from the name of her mistress, which is Patricia. She is endowed with a realistically feline voice and is encouraged by a proud mistress to cultivate it so that all her spare time is spent in bowing and "meowing."

With a biography that deserves a volume in itself, there is "Jacky," the gray elephant. "Jacky" was born in Asbury Park, N. J., and was purchased soon therafter by its present owner, with whom it has slept and traveled continuously ever since. Jacky has come to be the guiding Muse for its mistress, who is a talented writer of poetry and song, and who declares that without the little beast she could do nothing.

Jacky, with all due respect to his value, is dirty. On account of his composition—felt which spots with water—he cannot be bathed, but he does not seem to mind. His left hind leg, slightly sprained, is putting a kick into life, and his right eye is raised in an expression which is at once quizzical and intelligent. Jacky gets the best of everything. A blue ribbon decorates his neck and he always wears flowers on festive occasions. He travels not in the baggage car, where most of his species would be proud of a place, but first-class, along with his owner. He has been in the South and in the Far West, and twice has revisited the scenes of his birth on the Atlantic shore. Jacky had all the broadmindedness of a college plus a traveling education.

Second to none in his lifelike appearance is "Agamemnon," the monkey, lifesize and a perfect representation of our hairy forefather. "Aggie" seems to be an antidote for trouble, and is used mainly to console his mistress when blue.

In a bevy of dolls, several stand out as most attractive. "Topsy," the wooden "Hula-hula" dancer, belongs to a boy. He is proud of her dancing ability and of the fact that by means of a button on her back, her hair can be made to stand on end.

"Raggedy Ann" hangs by a certain dressing table suspended by a rubber, and leads a really pitiful life; for, in spite of her blandishing smiles and her fancy ruffles, she serves as a punching bag for her athletically inclined mistress.

"Boo," the French doll, on the other hand, has a happy and useless life. With her long, slender arms and legs tied in artistic and painless knots she decorates the chiffonier day in and day out.

A very definite purpose in life has His Satanic Majesty, the little red rubber devil. His only attitude is a pulpit position with an accusing finger pointed straight at whoever comes within his glance. He was a gift to his owner to serve as a reminder that she must say her prayers. His Majesty now is standing with face to the wall.

On the dressing table of a certain sorority president stands a miniature telephone about three inches high and perfect in every detail. It has a silent number.

The demand for toys has been recognized by the local gift shops. One has a fascinating collection of wooden animals imported from Italy, which are decorative, entertaining and useful. Another has a shipment of rag dolls which delight the toy fans.

Santa Claus has had to add the grownup children to his gift list in the classic college town of Columbia, Mo.

Why Home Looks Good to Harold

Othello, Moor of Venice, "had nothing on" Harold Ewing of Wichita, whose tales of hairbreadth 'scapes by field and flood are calculated to cause any modern Desdemona to gasp — State Department investigating his charge that he was shanghaied into the Spanish Legion, with several other young American adventurers, and forced to fight for a whole year against the remorseless Moors — His tale of what happened to "every other man" in the line of prisoners is ghastly, and Harold still has nightmares when he dreams about it :: :: ::

"The Moors lined us up and picked out every other man. They took the men on both sides of me, marched them out in front, severed their heads then their ears, placing the ears in the mouths, and then forced the living to carry the heads to the burying grounds."

Harold Ewing as he looks in his new suit.

"For 45 days we were forced to carry stones from one jail to another, and back again."

"HOME," said Harold Ewing, the other day, "looks good to me. Yes, it certainly does look mighty good. Little old Wichita is not anything like so big as Paris or London or New York, but it's big enough for me. I think now it'll hold me for some time. The home folks, whom I never expected to see again, are the very best ever. I've had my little whack at adventuring, and now I'm in the market for a steady job—something peaceful and quiet for me, please."

Harold is 19 and a measurably handsome youth. He looks considerably handsomer in the nice new suit and the rest of the natty sartorial shuck in which he has been enabled to encase himself since he got back home from the wars, than he looked when he reached Wichita recently. Yes, Harold has been to the wars—anyhow, that scrap still going on in Morocco, where the Spaniards are trying to subdue a very large horde of extremely militant Moors, seemed to Harold like several wars.

If all he tells his Kansas friends and relatives about his adventures be reliable—and upon present returns Handsome Harold is entitled to be credited with true reports—then this young American who grew up mostly in the thriving little city at the confluence of the Arkansas and the Little Arkansas rivers is extremely lucky that he has a corporeal person left upon which to hang his new clothes.

Harold came mighty near to losing his head, over in Africa, in a rather humiliating, not to say painful manner. But chance saved him and his head—plus ears. If the bloodthirsty Moors had begun at the other end of the line of prisoners nobody would know today just what ever became of Harold Ewing, and some other story would occupy this page.

Harold says he still shudders when he thinks about that narrow squeak, which is several times every night if he happens to be restless; and sometimes he awakens suddenly from a fairly sound sleep and feels above his neck to find if his head is still there, and then he rubs his fingers across his mouth. This latter gesture is merely to learn if his own ears have been crammed into his mouth.

Of course, Harold could feel first in the places where his ears are supposed to be; but then he hates to do that, for in his half-conscious horror he fears that he might find the sides of his head as smooth as golf balls, except for the nicks where the ears used to be. So, instead, he feels for his ears in his mouth, the idea being, perhaps, that if he finds them there he can stick them back where they belong and thus be prepared to hear the radio programs as usual.

The State Department at Washington is investigating the statements made by Harold Ewing against certain agents, or alleged agents, of the Spanish Government. King Alfonso's spies are alleged to have kidnaped Harold, in Hamburg, and shanghaied him into the Spanish army, along with several other American youths who were over there in Europe seeing the world. But the State Department, for the time being, at least, is reticent on the subject. These things must be attended to diplomatically; and diplomacy, despite the commendable efforts of the late President Wilson, remains largely secret.

That Harold Ewing is a deserter from the army—the Spanish army—he admits without reservation. After you have read his story you will agree with him that desertion was the better part of discretion. You may recall, from youthful schoolbook reading, the sad story of the "soldier of the legion who lay dying in Algiers." If so, you can appreciate with proper feeling the case of this American soldier of the Spanish Legion, for it was in that unit of the service that Harold fought in Morocco. For more than a year he served in the war against the Moors, in Northwestern Africa, was wounded twice, imprisoned three times and came so close to having his head cut off and his ears amputated and stuck into his mouth that he still has nightmares about it all.

"I think now," says Harold, "that I'll never leave home again. This last experience has satisfied my lust for wandering and for adventure. I guess I always was adventurous. When I was only 14 I told a fib about my age and enlisted in the United States Army. I was big for my years and looked like 18, at least. I served one year in the army and was discharged.

"For two or three years I had various adventures, here, there and yonder, but I'll skip them and lead up at once to the main proposition. I had a craving to see a lot of the world. Nearly two years ago I went to New York City and shipped aboard the steamship Freifeld for Hamburg, Germany. Shortly after we arrived there I set out to see the city and was held up and robbed. The robbers did not get much money, but they took my passports.

"I stayed at the Y. M. C. A. in Hamburg for a time and later signed up on a boat for Buenos Aires. We were aboard when the Spanish Vice Consul and another man, posing at shipping agents for the Hamburg-American Steamship Co., came aboard and took us ashore. We were sent under guard to Gijon, Spain; from there to Alpiarca and later to Ceuta, Spanish Morocco. Later we were sent to Don Riffen, where the training camp was located. After we had spent 15 days there three of us attempted to escape across the Mediterranean in a rowboat. We were picked up next day by a Spanish cruiser, 57 kilometers from shore, and then taken back to Ceuta and thrown in prison.

"For 45 days we were forced to carry stones from one jail to another, and back again. They said it was for punishment, and I guess it was, for the guards called us at 4 o'clock every morning and kept us at work until night. We had no blankets and little to eat.

"We then were sent to Uad Lau and went under fire for the first time. That was on July 1, 1924. On July 4, at Koba Darsa, more than 3000 men were killed and wounded. Paul Forsha of New Orleans, who was shanghaied with me, fell in that battle.

"In the battle of Rio Martien, Aug. 21, my

The Former St. Louis Physician

A celebrated British novelist writes the fearful fact-story of Dr. Crippen, who was executed in England for killing the wife he had brought to the Missouri metropolis as a bride many years earlier—The tragic fate of "Belle Elmore" (Mrs. Crippen) after her husband fell in love with Ethel Le Neve, a pretty typist in his employ, and the world-wide hunt for the murderer, who fled with his "new love" :: :: :: :: :: :: ::

By WILLIAM LE QUEUX.

EARLY in 1889, Dr. Hawley Harvey Crippen met in New York a good-looking girl of 17, with whom he fell in love. He married her and went to live at St. Louis. He knew her as Cora Turner; later he discovered her real name to be Kunigunde Mackamotzi, her father being a Pole and her mother a German.

Crippen, who was a native of Coldwater, Mich., was then a little over 30 years of age. He had been in London about 10 years before and had studied medicine. On his return to America he had completed his studies at the Hospital College of Cleveland, O., and also at the Ophthalmic Hospital in New York. A quiet, studious, inoffensive man, he practiced at Philadelphia and Toronto, and now took his wife, Cora, to St. Louis, where he became well known and popular.

After about six months, his wife, who possessed quite a good voice, persuaded him to allow her to go to New York and have it trained, as it was her great ambition to sing in opera. She was extremely ambitious, very proud of her talent, and felt confident of success. Indeed, almost from her first meeting with Crippen she seemed to be fond of making pretense of being an artiste, and ere long adopted the stage name of "Belle Elmore," though she had never performed on the stage in her life.

"I then got a spade from the garden and dug the clay that was immediately under the bricks."

In 1900 Dr. Crippen entered the service of Munyon's advertising business in patent medicines and came to London as manager. The firm, at the time, occupied offices in Shaftsbury avenue. He was fully qualified for that post and his quiet, serious demeanor soon drew the friendship of many people who consulted him.

Four months later, his wife, having abandoned the idea of singing in grand opera, joined him in apartments at South Crescent, just off the Tottenham Court road. Afterwards they lived in Guilford street, Bloomsbury, and about five years before the crime they rented a house at 39 Hilldrop Crescent, a small semi-detached house in a quiet, leafy thoroughfare off the Camden road.

Before moving to the latter address, Crippen made a hurried journey to New York on business, leaving his wife in a boarding house in Guilford street. On his return several months later she told him that she had met a man named Bruce Miller, who had been attracted by her, and had often taken her out to dinner and theaters. Indeed, according to Crippen's story, his wife's manner had entirely changed and she told him frankly that she did not care for him any more. Bruce Miller, she explained, was a music-hall artist and was still in London. In consequence of this, there were frequent quarrels and estrangements between husband and wife, though they both hid the truth from their mutual friends.

Cora Crippen continued to call herself Belle Elmore, but found that to get on the London music-hall stage was impossible. However, she was very friendly with several people well known on the stage, including Mr. and Mrs. Paul Martinetti, Crippen's wife was rather stout, with large dark eyes, black hair and made-up cheeks, and always wearing bright colors. One woman who knew her called her "the bird of paradise."

At Hilldrop Crescent she was fond of entertaining her music-hall friends, but Crippen himself seemed to watch it all with inert carelessness. He was tired of his wife, of her showy dress, of her constant nagging, of her pronounced vanity; and he had fallen in love with a girl typist in his employ, Ethel Le Neve. So the household at Hilldrop Crescent did not run on happy lines, with the excitable Mrs. Crippen always irritable and chiding, and her husband always quiet and morose.

Mrs. Crippen in stage costume.

Belle Elmore, probably a very disappointed woman through the failure of her stage ambitions, was a woman of moods and superstitions. If she visited any friend or neighbor whose room had a green wallpaper, she would make excuse to leave it as "unlucky." She hated green. Pink was her "lucky color," hence she had pink walls in the house at Hilldrop Crescent, pink curtains, pink bedspreads and pink cushions. She was fond of noise and gaiety and excitement, and Crippen's tastes were always opposite to hers. They were an ill-matched pair.

She had to run the house without the assistance of a servant, and the evening parties she was fond of giving at Hilldrop Crescent must have been a trouble to her. Her music-hall friends were wealthy, while she had to scrape and save to make both ends meet, and at the same time (according to Crippen's story) she had lost all love for her husband. Recollect that we have never had the poor woman's own story of their relations.

The days must have grown more and more unpleasant in that unhappy household. Crippen was bored by his wife and his heart had turned to Miss Le Neve, whom he employed as a typist in his office. The two met constantly.

For Crippen, for his wife, the house in Hilldrop Crescent must have seemed a prison. These two were of very different types—the wife a painted and powdered woman, who decked herself out in many bright colors and tried to entertain people far above her station, and her husband, careless and unsmiling, concealing the fact he had no further trust in his wife because of her friend Mr. Bruce Miller, whom, by the way, he had never met.

Though Crippen never earned more than $15 or $20 a week, his commissions in the various posts he occupied sometimes were very small and at others amounted to some $50 to $75 weekly. He was successively manager of the Sovereign Remedy Co., which failed; then he became physician of the Drouet Institute, which also failed; after which he joined the Aural Clinic Co., which failed six months later. After these three failures he returned to the service of Munyon's in 1909, where he remained simply on commission, his agreement being dated to terminate on Jan. 31, 1910. He was then in partnership in a dental business with Dr. Rylance at Albion House, New Oxford street, and from this his income was derived.

His income was certainly not large enough to pay for the expensive jewelry, the fine clothes and the extravagances of his wife. Whence came the jewelry and fine clothes Belle Elmore had led a gay life in America, and was leading the same life in London. She had many male admirers, and it was proved that she had received many presents from them.

The drab existence at Hilldrop Crescent eventually became unbearable to a woman of her temperament. She was more sinned against than sinning, for Crippen was an insignificant, uninteresting, ugly little man, who never entered into her pleasures and cared nothing for her friends. He rose in the morning, took her tea to her room, ate his breakfast alone and went to business each day, seldom returning till 9 or 10 o'clock each night, and frequently uttering no word to her before retiring. He remained cold to her and contemptuously indifferent.

By her vanity, extravagance and shrewishness she had long worn out the devoted affection in which he had once held her. He met Ethel Le Neve every day, and his wife had now become only an encumbrance.

After her bitter disappointment regarding a stage career, Cora Crippen had become treasurer of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild, so held something of a position in the world of the variety stage. One night she declared herself tired of the dingy life they led, and after a quarrel openly told her husband of her intention of leaving him for a rich lover, whom, however, she did not name. It was one of those sordid quarrels which are so often the prelude to a great tragedy. The woman must have realised that at 35 her youth was over, and perhaps lovers had now become scarce. She had quantities of clothes, the jewelry given her as presents, and also some money, all of which she intended to take with her.

Such was Crippen's story. Whether it was the truth or not we have no means of ascertaining, save that certain of her female friends came forward and to a great extent corroborated his statement. Crippen's passion was centered in Miss Le Neve, who had no knowledge of what was occurring or what did afterwards occur at Hilldrop Crescent. But after his wife's hostile attitude that night and her threat to leave him and carry with her the whole of their possessions, it is certain that he gravely contemplated a way out.

He was a weak, puny person, without energy and without much moral courage. But he was, on the other hand, gifted with a subtle and cunning brain.

For days his wife's threats to leave him continued. Crippen must have now begun to entertain and to welcome the idea of her disappearance, which would mean his own release from the bondage of her pewenee and her nagging tongue. Why should not Ethel Le Neve enjoy the fine clothes, the jewelry and the money that were his wife's? His wife had told her friend that she was "fed up with him" and intended leaving him. Why, then, should she not leave him—never to return? Her words to her friends would provide him with an alibi.

It was in this mood that on Jan. 17, 1910, Crippen bought at the shop of Lewis & Burrows, 109 New Oxford street, five grains of hyoscin hydrobromide, a deadly poison in the form of small crystals, and signed the sale of poisons register of the firm:

"Name of purchaser: Munyon's, per H. H. Crippen.

"Address of purchaser: 57-61 Albion House.

"Name and quantity of poison sold: Five grains of hyoscin hydrobromide.

"Purposes for which it is required: Homeopathic preparation.

"Signature of purchaser: H. H. Crippen."

Crippen here made a mistake, and it is curious that one so well versed in toxicology as he should have done so. He declared that he required the hyoscin for some homeopathic preparation. But, according to the great poison expert, Dr. W. H. Wilcox, the senior scientific analyst of the Home Office, h was a drug never given by the mouth, the medical internal use of it being limited to hypodermic application. Dr. Bernard Spilsbury, the pathologist at St. Mary's Hospital, and other medical witnesses agreed that, as far as their knowledge went, they knew of no medicine in which hyoscin was used.

Who Was Hanged for Wife-Murder

From Jan. 17 till Jan. 31 Crippen, no doubt, remained in a state of hesitation. On the night of Jan. 17 Mr. and Mrs. Martinetti dined with them as usual, and it may then have suddenly occurred to the doctor that after an amicable evening, when he was known by his friends to be on excellent terms with his wife, would be a favorable and least-suspected opportunity for making the fatal coup.

He was much worried, first by his wife's constant nagging and, secondly, by the increasing claims being made upon him by the girl, Le Neve. Business, too, was going badly, for on that very day his engagement with Munyon's Remedies had ceased. Again, though he had other businesses, none of them was paying, and he certainly was pressed for money.

At noon on Feb. 1 Crippen, clever and cunning, called upon Mrs. Martinetti to inquire about her husband, who had not been very well on the previous night. Mr. Martinetti was in bed asleep, so Crippen did not see him. Mrs. Martinetti asked: "How is Belle?" whereupon the doctor answered: "Oh, she's quite all right!" Yet on the following day Crippen pawned a ring and a pair of earrings belonging to the missing woman, for $400.

Crippen now invented a story that his wife had left suddenly for America. Indeed, Miss Melinda May, secretary of the Music Hall Ladies' Guild of which the missing woman was treasurer, received a letter dated from 39 Hilldrop Crescent. The letter was brought to her by Miss Le Neve:

"Dear Miss May: Illness of a near relative has called me to America on only a few hours' notice, so I must ask you to bring my resignation as treasurer before the meeting today, so that a new treasurer can be elected at once. You will appreciate my haste when I tell you that I have not been to bed—packing all night and getting ready to go. I hope to see you again a few months later, but cannot spare a moment to call on you before I go. I wish you everything nice until I return to London again. Now, good-by, with love, hastily. Yours

"BELLE ELMORE, p.p. H. H. C."

This letter was apparently written by Crippen, and being shown later to the Martinettis, the latter quickly became inquisitive. To them Crippen stated that Belle had gone to join Mr. Bruce Miller, but this was a lie, for Mr. Miller eventually came to England and at the Old Bailey stated that he had not seen the lady for the past six years.

The clumsiness of some of Crippen's actions is inexplicable. A few days after writing the letter in question he pawned another brooch and a ring belonging to his wife for $575, while in the following week he had the audacity to take Miss Le Neve to the dinner and ball of the Music Hall Benevolent Fund, where the girl wore some of his wife's jewelry. This was noticed and commented upon by several of the missing woman's friends. Indeed, on March 12 the girl gave up her situation and was induced by Crippen to take up her abode at Hilldrop Crescent. Two days later Dr. Crippen gave his landlord three months' notice to terminate the tenancy of the house, which, in the light of eventual discoveries, must have been hateful to him. He then took Miss Le Neve across to Dieppe, where they spent Easter.

Apparently Crippen was growing more and more anxious because of the suspicions that had been aroused, for two days before leaving for Dieppe he wrote to Mr. and Mrs. Martinetti as follows:

"Dear Clara and Paul: Please forgive me for not running in during the week, but I have really been so upset by very bad news from Belle that I did not feel equal to talking about anything, and now I have just a cable saying she is so dangerously ill with double pleuro-pneumonia that I am considering if I had not better go over at once. I do not want to worry you with my troubles, but I felt I must explain why I had not been to see you. I will try and run in during the week and have a chat. Hope both of you are well. With love and best wishes. Yours sincerely, PETER."

"Peter" was the name by which the Martinettis knew him. Mrs. Martinetti saw Crippen again on the Wednesday before Easter, March 23, after a guild meeting. In company with Mrs. Eugene Stratton, she met Crippen at the door. Crippen said that he had a cable to say that Belle was very dangerously ill, and he expected another every minute to say that she was gone. Then he said if anything should happen to Belle he would go to France for a week, for he wanted some change of air.

Mrs. Martinetti got a telegram next morning, from Victoria Station: "Belle died yesterday at 5 o'clock. Please phone Annie will be away a week. Peter." "Annie" was a friend, Mrs. Stratton. Crippen announced his wife's death on the very eve of his holiday to Dieppe with the girl who had usurped her place. Not only that, but the murderer actually put an obituary notice in the Era and wrote to many of his friends, telling them how grief-stricken he was. But Belle Elmore's friends, including a Mr. Nash and a Mrs. Louise Smythson, prosecuted their inquiries, and asked Crippen some very awkward questions. Crippen could not even tell them the name of the liner on which Mrs. Crippen had sailed or the port she had sailed from, neither could he give them his late wife's address in America.

So confident, however, was the master poisoner that his crime was completely concealed and all trace of his wife effaced, that his next step was to announce that her remains had been cremated in America and the ashes sent to him.

This caused Mr. Nash, who knew Belle Elmore well and had interested himself in the affair, to question him concerning those ashes, but the replies he received were so unsatisfactory that on June 30 he went to New Scotland Yard and saw Chief Inspector Walter Dew, who, on July 8, called with Sergt. Mitchell at Hilldrop Crescent and there saw Miss Le Neve. The girl took him to Dr. Crippen's office in Albion House. The officer questioned him, and Crippen lost his nerve. Greatly agitated, he confessed to many lies. "I suppose I had better tell you the truth," he said. "The stories I have told about my wife's death are untrue. As far as I know, she may be still alive. It is not true that she went away on legal business for me. I did not receive any cable to say she was ill, and it is not true that she was cremated in San Francisco or that the ashes were sent to me."

The Crippen home in Hilldrop Crescent, London.

This, of course, placed another complexion upon the mystery. No doubt Crippen was terribly frightened, and his statement instantly quickened the suspicions of the police. He accompanied the inspector back to Hilldrop Crescent, where he showed him every room in the house and also showed him the clothes and jewelry his wife had left behind. The inspector seriously pointed out that Mrs. Crippen must be found, whereupon Crippen suggested an advertisement being put in several American papers, and they drafted one together.

Let Inspector Dew himself tell the story of his search of the house and its result. He says:

"On Tuesday, July 12, I made a further examination of the house, and also on the thirteenth, when, amongst other things, I again searched the coal cellar. The coal cellar had a brick floor. There was a very small quantity of coal there, and also a little rubbish, cuttings from small branches of trees, an old chandelier, and such things as that. I went down with Mitchell on to my knees, and probed about with a small poker which I had got out of the kitchen. I found that the poker went in somewhat easily between the crevices of the bricks, and I managed to get one or two up, and then several others came up pretty easily. I then got a spade from the garden and dug the clay that was immediately underneath the bricks. After digging down to about a depth of four spadefuls I came across what appeared to be human remains.

"After digging further I sent for Dr. Marshall, the divisional surgeon of police in that district, and Sir Melville Macnaghten, chief of the Criminal Investigation Department. Dr. Marshall came between 5 and 6 o'clock, and he saw a portion of what I had unearthed. After I had procured assistance, we dug further, and Dr. Marshall came back later on. We left the remains where they were that night, without moving them; we covered them up, locked up the house, and left it in charge of two police officers.

"On the next day, the fourteenth, Dr. Marshall again attended, along with Mr. Pepper, the Home Expert. Under their directions the remains were removed from the cellar and put into a coffin and removed to the mortuary. In addition to the remains which we put into the coffin were some articles which we put into a tray, one of these articles being a Hinde's curler. From that time, July 14, the remains were in charge of the doctors, so far as I know."

The game was up. The blundering lies had altogether failed—and Crippen was now a fugitive on the seas.

On the morning of July 9, after Inspector Dew had circulated the description of Mrs. Crippen, the doctor hurriedly entered his office at the Drouet Institute at 9:30. So flurried was he that William Long, a dental mechanic, asked if he was unwell.

"No," he replied. "Only a little scandal."

Crippen then gave Long a list of clothing which he said he wanted for a boy of 16—a suit of brown tweed, a felt hat 6 5-8 size, two collars, a tie, a pair of boots and a shirt. Long, as requested, purchased the things cheaply at shops in Oxford street and brought them to the back room of the office of the Yale Tooth Specialists, where he left them.

That was the last he saw of Crippen, who, as was subsequently proved, shaved off his mustache, left off wearing his glasses, wore a new suit and left London for Antwerp, taking with him the girl Le Neve dressed in boy's clothes and passing as his son. He assumed the name of Robinson, and after going to Antwerp went on to Brussels and then back to Antwerp. From there the pair succeeded in obtaining passage by the steamer Montrose bound for Quebec.

Crippen had blundered with the hyoscin, had blundered with the lies, and had now blundered in the preparations for his escape.

While the hue and cry was raised by Scotland Yard and imposing posters with the portraits of the pair of fugitives appeared outside every police station, they were on their way across the Atlantic, Ethel Le Neve in ignorance of the truth.

For the first time in history, wireless was destined to play its important part in the detection of crime.

Capt. Kendall of the steamer Montrose, a shrewd and acute officer, had his suspicions aroused two hours after leaving Antwerp. He saw the pair on deck. Le Neve squeezed Crippen's hand affectionately, and from that moment Capt. Kendall kept a very watchful eye on these two passengers. He was very quickly certain that Crippen was the wanted man.

In a wireless message he sent from his ship and subsequently published in the Daily Mail he said:

"I was well posted as to the crime, but I said nothing to the officers till the following morning, when I took my chief officer into my confidence. He then detected the same suspicious circumstances as myself. I warned him that it must be kept absolutely quiet, as it was too good a thing to lose, so we made a lot of them and kept them smiling. During lunch I examined both their hats.

Permalloy, a New Marvel, Speeds up Cable

Strip of it, 10,000 miles long and wrapped around copper wire recently laid on the ocean bed from New York to the Azores, will increase the traffic capacity five times, say company officials—It is an alloy of approximately 80 per cent nickel and 20 per cent iron, and marks the first important change in cable construction in 66 years—Something about the cable which, for first time, will give direct telegraphic communication between the United States and Southern Europe :: ::

A SINGLE continuous strip of "magic" metal, one-eighth of an inch wide, six-thousandths of an inch thick and 10,000 nautical miles long—this is the apparently simple but important feature of the newest deep-sea cable which has been laid across the bed of the Atlantic Ocean.

The strip of "magic" metal is an addition to the structure of deep-sea cables as they have been manufactured almost from the start. With radically new apparatus for sending and receiving signals, in devising which a leaf was borrowed from radio, the latest cable promises to revolutionize the sending of messages under water from continent to continent. Since the first line was laid from Ireland to Newfoundland, 66 years ago, there has been no significant change from the original pattern in cable construction except in the size of the copper conductor and in certain details of the "armor" wires surrounding it.

But the cable which the Western Union Telegraph Co. has been installing between New York City and the Azores, and which now is in successful operation, marks a new departure. Officials of the Western Union declare that it is the most important event in the history of international communication since human speech was transmitted from Arlington to Paris in 1915. In making this statement, the Western Union people bear in mind the achievements of the last decade in radio, a circumstance which rather whets one's interest in the recently installed cable—its novel features and the resulting advantages. Every newspaper reader benefits from better and cheaper cable service.

The new cable now stretches from New York to Horta, in the Azores, and is being extended to Malaga, on the western coast of Spain. Eventually it will continue on the bed of the Mediterranean to Rome. Still other connections will be made to utilize the new cable's surplus capacity. The first of these will be a line from Horta to Emden, in Germany.

It is the remarkable capacity of the new cable, said to be five times that of ordinary cables, which gives it importance in dollars and cents. And although the eighth of the Western Union's lines, it is the first cable ever laid which gives direct telegraphic communication between the United States and Southern Europe.

The tremendous increase in capacity of the new cable, as compared with the type in use for 66 years, is due to the long strip of "magic" metal in which the copper conductor, or core, is wrapped. Not only is the idea new, but so is the "magic" metal, consisting of an alloy of iron and nickel, called "permalloy."

Before describing the structure of deep-sea cables, how they work and the function of the wrapping of permalloy, it might be well to glance at the practical results of the improvement. There are only two or three deep-sea cables of the old type over which a speed of as high as 250 letters a minute can be maintained. The fastest cable now in operation has a speed of little more than 300 letters a minute, and the great majority of cables are operated at a speed of about 150 letters a minute.

During deep-sea tests, which were more severe than anything likely to be encountered in actual service, the new cable has maintained a continuous speed of more than 1500 letters a minute. And this may be exceeded as the electrical mechanism for sending and receiving messages is improved.

The importance of increasing a cable's capacity five-fold is obvious. Several times as much traffic can be handled at an investment cost which is only moderately greater than that of the standard type of cable. Already it is being predicted that some of the old, deteriorated cables will be abandoned.

The chief handicap to high-speed transmission of messages over submarine cables, as in overland telegraphy, is the attenuation and distortion of the electrical impulses or waves in their passage through the long conductor. As explained in a recent issue of Southwestern Telephone News, published by the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., the result is a crowding of the impulses upon each other's heels, with a consequent jumbling and confusion of signals.

In ordinary cable transmission the rule is that the faster the signals are sent the greater this confusion. Less and less easily decipherable are the resulting signals at the receiving end, until the point is reached where they become absolutely undecipherable. In overland telegraphy this difficulty is met by introducing relays at frequent intervals, which give fresh impulses to the waves as they travel along the circuit. Obviously, it is not practicable to place relays on the bed of the ocean, nor can a more powerful "kick" be administered to the initial impulses by increasing the voltage, without injury to the cable. The first Atlantic cable, laid in 1858, had carried but 732 messages before it failed entirely. The cable was in operation only from Aug. 17 to Oct. 20. Its failure is attributed to the ill-advised attempt to increase the speed and legibility of signaling by increasing the voltage. A pressure of 2500 volts was used in this first cable, which burned the insulation and rendered the cable useless. The money loss was upward of $1,500,000, equivalent to at least $5,000,000 at the present time.

The laying of this first Atlantic cable, by the way, was due to the initiative of Cyrus W. Field, wealthy American paper merchant, although most of the capital had been raised in England. Naturally, it was more difficult to obtain money for a second attempt, and the advent of the Civil War served to complicate the undertaking still further. After long negotiations, Field succeeded in financing the project, and placed the order for the second cable, which was completed in 1865.

The famous steamship, Great Eastern, was chartered to lay the cable, and 1200 miles of it had been paid out when, on Aug. 2, the cable parted and all efforts to recover it were in vain. At this critical time, when things looked blackest for Field and his friends, John Pender came to the rescue of transatlantic cable service. He was president of the company which afterwards became the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Co., and he offered to risk $1,250,000 of his own money in completing the project. Other subscribers brought the total up to about $3,000,000.

A new cable, the third, was made and enough additional to complete the cable of 1865. On July 13, 1866, the Great Eastern steamed into Trinity Bay, Newfoundland, trailing behind her a continuous line of cable which stretched back to the Irish coast. After the shore end of this cable had been safely landed, the Great Eastern steamed eastward again, grappled for the lost end of the 1865 cable, recovered it, spliced on the new section, and on Sept. 8 landed this also in Newfoundland. Instead of one Atlantic cable there were two! Field later became active in railroad development, but his last years were troubled by business reverses.

Since the disaster of 1858 nobody has cared to risk the price of an ocean cable in experimenting with high voltages. Cable operation over long distances is carried on by means of currents of low potential and minute amperage. The "power plant" of the recently laid New York-Azores line consists of a 50-volt battery sending a current of only one-tenth of an ampere into the cable. Batteries are used with cables, because of the necessity, when dealing with such minute currents, of maintaining exact evenness and steadiness.

Current does not flow continuously through a submarine cable but is sent through it in waves, which are started by the ending keys. The current starts off on its transoceanic travels in a wave which at first is sharply defined, but which flattens out and lags (from a combination of electrical and magnetic causes) until at the receiving end it has lost its strength and shape.

There the current requires an appreciable time, a period measurable by an ordinary stop watch, to register its effects upon even the most delicate recording instrument. Whenever a second wave follows the first through the cable conductor without an interval sufficient for the first wave to register on the receiving instruments, the front of the second wave overtakes the tail of the first wave and further changes its shape.

The second signal has begun to register before the first wave has completed its course. A third wave following may mingle its impulses with the first and second. transoceanic travels in a wave which, at first is sharply defined, but which flattens out and lags (from a combination of electrical and magnetic causes) until at the receiving end it has lost its strength and shape.

There the current requires an appreciable time, a period measurable by an ordinary stop watch, to register its effects upon even the most delicate recording instrument. Whenever a second wave follows the first through the cable conductor without an interval sufficient for the first wave to register on the receiving instruments, the front of the second wave overtakes the tail of the first wave and further changes its shape.

The second signal has begun to register before the first wave has completed its course. A third wave following may mingle its impulses with the first and second. The result is simply confusion—unintelligible signals which cannot be deciphered without using devices the delicacy and accuracy of which appear marvelous to the uninitiated.

In land telegraphy, the difference between dots and dashes is one of duration, the circuit being closed three times as long for a dash as for a dot. Submarine cables use the Morse code of dots and dashes, but distinguishes them by another method.

Early in the history of deep-sea cables the land system of dots and dashes was found to be impracticable electrically, as well as too slow. Moreover, a current so weak as that suitable for cables could not operate instruments of the type used in land telegraphy. So, instead of dots and dashes differing from each other in length of time, and read by the operator's ear, cable signals are made up of dots and dashes of equal length but produced by currents of opposite polarity, operating delicate devices whose record is read by the operator's eye.

Instead of a single lever, as in land telegraphy, the cable key is double. When neither lever of the cable key is depressed, there is no current flowing through the cable except stray earth currents set up by the varying potential of different earth areas. Each end of the cable is "earthed," and each of the two levers of the cable key, when depressed, breaks the earth connection and makes connection between the cable and the battery.

Depressing the left-hand key makes connection with the "positive" pole of the battery, and a positive impulse is sent through the cable. That signifies a dot. Depressing the right-hand key makes a connection with the "negative" pole, and a negative impulse is sent through the cable. That signifies a dash. Dot and dash are made in precisely the same length of time.

To read these signals at the other side of the ocean, Lord Kelvin devised instruments of amazing precision and delicacy. Up until the advent of the permalloy-loaded cable, those instruments, or modifications of them, had been utilized in all cable operation. And the underlying principle of them is that of the galvanometer, the instrument whose function it is to determine, first, whether an electric current is present in a given conductor; and, second, whether it is a "positive" or a "negative" current.

When the left-hand lever of the sending key, at one end of the cable, is depressed, making a connection between the cable and the "positive" pole of the battery, the operation sends a wave through the conductor which deflects the galvanometer indicator from its neutral, or "zero," position into the "positive" direction. The watcher at the receiving end records the signal as a dot.

Then, when the positive lever of the sending key is released the galvanometer indicator at the other end of the cable swings back to "zero." And when the negative lever of the sending key is depressed, making a connection between the cable and the "negative" pole of the battery, the operation sends a wave through the conductor which deflects the galvanometer from its neutral or "zero" position into the "negative" direction. The watcher at the receiving end records this signal as a dash.

Such is a highly skeletonized explanation of the way in which cable signals are translated into dots and dashes, combined into letters and words. In practice the work is not quite so simple. A galvanometer sensitive to the weak current of a cable is also sensitive enough to be affected by every stray earth current in its vicinity, as well as vibrating to every mechanical jar or shock in the neighborhood.

And, when the signals follow each other rapidly, they tread on each other's heels by reason of the lagging or retardation already mentioned. This means that instead of sharp swings to right or left, and sharply back to neutral, the indicator goes through a series of half-movements and jiggles, producing signals so vague that only an expert can read them.

Later inventions by Lord Kelvin included a mirror galvanometer, in which a tiny mirror was fastened upon a tightly stretched silk fiber, so that the mirror would rotate from right to left, or from left to right, under the slightest impulse. To the back of the mirror was affixed the needle of a sensitive galvanometer, which thus moved the mirror in accordance with the polarity of the impulse affecting the galvanometer. A ray of light was focused upon the mirror and reflected upon a white surface a few feet away. Thus were the incoming signals greatly magnified, and movements of the mirror which the eye could not have detected were translated into a wide fluctuation of the light beam.

But this method made no permanent record of cable messages, and in 1870 Lord Kelvin invented the sipron recorder, still in use. It also uses the galvanometer and silken fibers. The silken fibers sustain, not a mirror, but the weight of a very fine glass tube, the bent end of which is immersed in a vessel of extremely fluid ink. The other end of the tube rests with the lightest pressure imaginable on a strip of paper, passing from one roll to another.

As the paper moves under the little tube, a hair-line ink mark is made, the ink being drawn from the vessel through the tube by siphonic action. The middle line of the paper is the theoretical "zero" of the galvanometer. When the cable is earthed the line traced by the siphon is a straight one down the center of the paper, except for deflections due to earth currents, and other magnetic or electrical disturbances.

When the positive impulse swings the galvanometer to the left, the siphon traces a curve above the median, or "zero" line. When the negative, or "dash," wave comes through, the curve is traced below the median line. Here, too, is recorded graphically the phenomenon already mentioned, the effect of succeeding waves crowding upon their predecessors, so that the resulting curves traced upon the paper tend to flatten out and disappear as the sending speed is increased.

Meanwhile, the necessities of commerce and news gatherers and Governments, as well as the companies' own need of earnings, kept crying for greater speed in cable operation. The technical difficulties confronting the cable companies have been sketched. And for more than half a century some of the keenest minds in the scientific world have concentrated on the problems involved in sending and receiving signals over a copper wire laid on the bed of the ocean.

The "permalloy-loaded" cable between New York and the Azores is the latest answer to the problem.

Long ago in deep-sea cable history it was discovered that the phenomenon known as electro-magnetic inductance had a decided effect upon the quantity of the signals as received. One of the things which inductance does is to impede the passage of the first impulses or "front" of the current wave, so that the signal for a dot or a dash, instead of being long-drawn-out, arrives as a whole, so to speak, and is out of the way before the next impulse overtakes it.

By surrounding the receiving instruments with inductance coils, great improvement in the shape of received signals was achieved, and this is one way in which the old type of cable has been speeded up to its present traffic efficiency. Previous attempts to employ inductance in offsetting the electrostatic capacity of long cable conductors have included the wrapping of the cable conductor with a strip or tape of soft iron. But the magnetic permeability of iron is not sufficient to give the needed degree of inductance for long deep-sea cables.

Here, then, was a problem: how to apply the principle of inductance loading to submarine telegraphy in a large way.

Several years ago, in the great research laboratories of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. and the Western Electric Co., New York City, the quest began for substances other than iron which were magnetically permeable and which could be used instead of iron to produce the effect of inductance.

Experiments were numerous, intricate and costly, but they brought forth the new metal, permalloy. The name indicates its magnetic permeability, and the fact that it is an alloy, or compound of two metals—approximately 80 per cent nickel and 20 per cent iron, annealed and heat-treated in a particular way.

Following the World War, the demand for improved transatlantic cable service directed the attention of the Western Union towards means of improving the cable itself, since it appeared that everything possible had been done toward the improvement of the sending and receiving instruments. Then executives of the Bell system suggested to those of the Western Union that in the loading of the submarine cable with permalloy lay an avenue of advance in cable making.

That was the beginning of another three years of experimentation in the A. T. and T. Co. and Western Electric Co. laboratories. Tests duplicated every imaginable condition which might be expected in deep-sea service, including temperatures down to a point just above freezing, and pressures of 10,000 pounds to the square inch, equivalent to an ocean deapth of about 3500 fathoms, or three and one-half nautical miles of 6087 feet to the mile.

The final tests were conducted at Bermuda, where there was a convenient landing place for the cable ends, and where, close off shore, the bottom of the Atlantic drops sharply to a depth of 2500 fathoms. The test cable was 120 miles long, built by the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Co. of Greenwich, England. And this cable was precisely like the last cable which the same English firm had built for the Western Union, except that the copper core was wrapped with permalloy tape. After four months of suc-

WARRIOR • A True Tale of a Horse That • Heeded the Call of the Wild

By DAVID NEWELL.

MANY years ago Don Luis de Sandoval drove his lance through a Moorish chief and led a proud Arab stallion back to Spain. No doubt this spirited desert steed was Warrior's great-great-great-great-grandsire. Quien sabe? Some years later the descendants of old Don Luis rode from old Mexico against the wild tribes to the north—the Pueblos, the Moquis, the Cochitis, the Jemez, the Navajoes and that fiercest of fierce tribes, the Apaches. And many a Spanish corpse lay in the sun and many a Spanish horse was led to an Indian village, after those battles. Horses at that time were new to the American Indians, and consequently much in demand. As time went on, however, the number of horses belonging to the Indians increased, until today there are thousands of semi-wild "broomtails" running the Western range. And in these horses flows the blood of the ancient Arab barbs.

As a general rule, these "broomies," as the cowboys call them, do not make good ponies; not because they are not fast, nor because they do not have the stamina, but because they are too small. A real cow horse must be able to sit back and upend a big steer. The average Indian pony hasn't the weight for such work. There are, however, a few exceptions. Warrior was one of them.

I saw him first from a distance—in fact, few people had ever seen him except from a distance—as I was crawling over a little ridge in the hope of getting a shot at a flock of turkeys. There were perhaps 30 or 40 horses in the band, grazing on the flat below us, but Warrior immediately held my attention. At that distance it must have been his color that attracted me, for it was too far to distinguish much else. There were horses of all colors in the bunch—bays, sorrels, blacks, grays, and one beautifully marked pinto. Warrior stood out sharply among them—a rich, creamy buckskin, with black mane, tail and stockings. At that time he was nothing more nor less to me than another broomie, but I remarked on his color and markings. My companion, an old Mormon cowpuncher, laughed.

"Pretty devil, ain't he ? But wilder'n a deer. I been tryin' to catch him for over a year now. You see, he's my horse. Leastways I got title to him, an' that's about all. He got away from Blackjack Wilson up in the Mogollons an' come all the way back here. This is his home range. Blackjack come down here after him—said he had the makin's of a dern good cow horse—but couldn't catch him. The pony had been around men jes' long enough to learn a few tricks, an' he had a pair of shoes on. Blackjack run three good horses pretty near to death, an' then quit. The buckskin'd stay jes' as far ahead of 'em as he thought was out of rope-throwin' distance, an' he'd hold his gait all day. I don't believe there's a horse in this country that can wear him out in a long race, or walk up on him in a sprint. Blackjack finally left and sold me title to the pony for $15. Far as I can see I'm jes' out $15."

"Is the pony mean or just suffering from an overdose of the call of the wild?" I asked.

"There ain't a mean streak in him," replied my companion. "He ain't pitched a jump since the day he was broke. He jes' likes his liberty and his old bunch o' buddies. I'll bet if he was in a corral right now, an' seen he couldn't break away, you could walk right up to him, same as you can old Buck, there."

At this point, the wild horses winded us, and the whole band streaked across the flat at a gallop. Warrior led them easily, with a contemptuous toss of his head. I watched them until they had disappeared in a juniper thicket, and then turned to Sid.

"I sure like that pony's looks. If you ever catch him, let me know. I'll raise that 15 to 50."

"You'd have to," laughed Sid. "But I guess there ain't much danger."

Several mornings later, Sid, who is foreman of one of the ID ranches (as the Interior Department ranches are called), received notice from the Indian Superintendent to round up a bunch of broomies at once.

It may be well to explain briefly what the Government is doing in the line of supplying cattle and horses to the Indians. The wild horses on the reservation are the property of the Indians. No white man may take them without permission from the superintendent. As often as horses are needed by the Indians, cowboys from the ID ranches ride down a band of bronchos and a professional bronco buster undertakes their education. Of course, many of the Indians catch their own ponies and break them, but as a general rule they are not very successful. It takes big, stout, grain-fed horses to catch wild horses, and the average Indian is not possessed of such mounts. I had always wanted to be in a wild horse run, and so welcomed the news as thoroughly as Sid disliked it. But orders are orders and we prepared for the chase. There were five of us, all well mounted, and a sixth man to bring up fresh horses. After two or three hours' ride over the mesas along Tonto Creek we sighted an enormous bunch of broomies. There must have been 200 in the band. They saw us before we saw them, and the race was on.

Sid was riding a big bay called "Babe," and Babe could run. Sid whooped and spurred, flanking the broomies on the left, for we had to drive them southeast toward the trap. This trap was a long V that led into the ID pasture. Wild horses seldom were aware of the trap until almost in the point of the V—and then there was no escape. Once in the pasture, it was comparatively an easy job to herd them into the corral as they were wanted. As we galloped across the long prairie I suddenly saw a sight that sent a thrill up my spine. In the lead of the broomies ran a beautiful cream buckskin, with black mane flying proudly! I spurred alongside of Sid.

"Warrior's in the bunch!" I shouted.

"Seen him lots of times," answered Sid. "But I ain't never forked him. If I'd knowed he was leadin' this bunch, I never would have started 'em. There's a heap o' difference between seein' Warrior an' corralin' him!"

We rode hard, and by noon the broomies were tiring. Time and again Warrior attempted to lead them in a circle—away from the ID trap—and when he found this in vain he broke from the bunch and tried to cut back past us. His association with man had given him an uncanny wariness, very different from the blind panic of a bronc. By a superb piece of riding Sid headed him, and the buckskin again ran with the band. Near the head of Turkey Creek we stopped to change horses, and Sid grunted:

"That devil has pulled his shoes an' is runnin' barefoot. If it wasn't for that he'd have got by me back yonder. We'll git the whole bunch in another hour—Warrior, too."

Sid was right. By mid-afternoon we began to crowd the broomies, and at last turned them into the mouth of the trap. Twenty or 30 doubled back at the last minute and broke away from us, but Warrior was not among them, and so I did not care. Just at dusk, we threw the bars across the corral gate—behind some 17 bronchos, and among the snorting, plunging animals there trotted a complacent buckskin!

I climbed up on the side of the corral and spoke to him. He threw his ears forward and looked at me. As he came around again in the milling, jostling mass, I reached over and patted his neck. As Sid had said, he was gentle as a lamb when he found that he was caught. Next morning I saddled him, with not so much as a snort out of him, and rode over to the ranch house. Sid grinned:

"Put some shoes on that baby an' he'll make you think you're in a airyplane. He ought to make a crackin' good huntin' horse—which is what I reckon you want him for—an' if he don't put you up to a bear before the dogs git there, I'll eat him."

Warrior made a "crackin' good huntin' horse." I rode him for several months, and a better horse in the rocks, and on the level, I never saw. He learned to follow the hounds and came to love their music and the thrill of a bear chase as much as I. In time, he became attached to my other horses, but I never felt that I could trust him footloose. Occasionally we would run into a band of broomies, and Warrior invariably chafed and fretted, watching them out of sight with great interest. At night I hobbled him carefully, and as a rule kept a bell on him, in the fear that he might break free of his hobbles.

One spring night as my partner and I sat beside our fire frying a juicy bear steak over the coals, the clear, shrill neigh of a horse floated down from the mesa above. Far away came an answering neigh. Then all was still. Next morning when Sam went up to wrangle the horses, Warrior was gone!

We spent all day trying to trail him, and at last succeeded in following his tracks to where they joined hundreds of others. Warrior was back with his wild buddies!

"Saw a awful good-lookin' buckskin out on the mesa yesterday,' said Sid, about a week later, as we lounged in the door of the commissary. Several of the boys laughed, and Sid winked solemnly, adding:

"Sort o' looked like a horse we used to have out on the range, called Warrior. Couldn't hardly have been him, though, for they tell me some feller paid $50 for him and took him off huntin' bears."

While the Clock Ticked

By Rafael Sabatini

However, the agent paused to question him.

SO STEALTHILY did Duroc come down the Rue de la Harpe that his steps hardly made a sound. He moved like a shadow, and when at last he came to a halt before the house of the Citizen Representative Clairvaux it was as if he had totally effaced himself, as if he had become a part of the general gloom. It was in the time of the French Revolution.

There Duroc paused, considering, his chin in his hand, and perhaps because the ground-floor windows were equipped with bars, he moved on more stealthily than ever along the garden wall. Midway between two of the lanterns slung across the narrow street and shedding a feeble yellow light, he paused again.

He stood now at a point where the shadows were deepest. He listened intently for a moment, peered this way and that into the night, and then went over the wall with the swift, silent activity of an ape. He found the summit of that wall guarded by a row of iron spikes, and on one of these, for all his care, Duroc left a strip of his breeches.

The accident annoyed him. He berated all iron spikes, pronouncing them an execrable, aristocratic institution, to which no true patriot could be guilty of having recourse. Indeed, from the manner in which the Citizen Representative Clairvaux guarded his house it was plain that the fellow was a bad republican. What with bars on its windows and spikes on its walls, the place might have been a prison rather than the house of a representative of the august people.

Of course, Duroc well knew, the citizen representative had something to guard. It was notorious that this modest dwelling of his in the Rue de la Harpe was something of a treasure house, stored with the lootings of many a ci-devant nobleman's property, and it was being whispered that no true patriot—and a citizen representative into the bargain—could have suffered himself to amass such wealth in the hour of the nation's urgent need.

Duroc advanced furtively across the garden, scanning the silent, sleeping house. Emboldened by the fact that no light or the faintest sign of vigilance showed anywhere, he proceeded so adroitly that within five minutes he had opened a window and entered a room that was used by the deputy as his study.

Within that room he stood quite still and listened. Save for the muffled ticking of the clock, no sound disturbed the silence. He turned and softly drew the heavy curtains across the window. Then he sat down upon the floor, took a small lantern from his breast and a tinder box from his waistcoat pocket.

There was a sharp stroke of steel on a flint, and presently his little lantern was shedding a yellow disk of light upon the parquetry floor.

He rose softly, placed the light on a console, and crossed the room to the door, which stood half open. He listened again a moment, then closed the door and came back, his feet making no sound upon the thick and costly rugs that were flung here and there.

In midchamber he paused, looking about him and taking stock of his luxurious surroundings. He considered the painted panels, the inlaid woods, the gilded chairs and the ormolu-incrusted cabinets—all plundered from the palaces of ci-devants who were either guillotined or in flight, and he asked himself if it was in this sybaritic fashion that it became a true republican to equip his home.

He was a short, slender man, this Duroc, whose shabby brown garments looked the worse for the rent in the breeches. He wore a fur bonnet, and his lank black hair hung in wisps about his cheeks and neck. His face was white and wolfish, the jaw thrust forward and ending in a lean, square chin; his vigilant, quick-moving eyes were close set and beady as a rat's; his thin lips were curled now in a sneer as he considered the luxury about him.

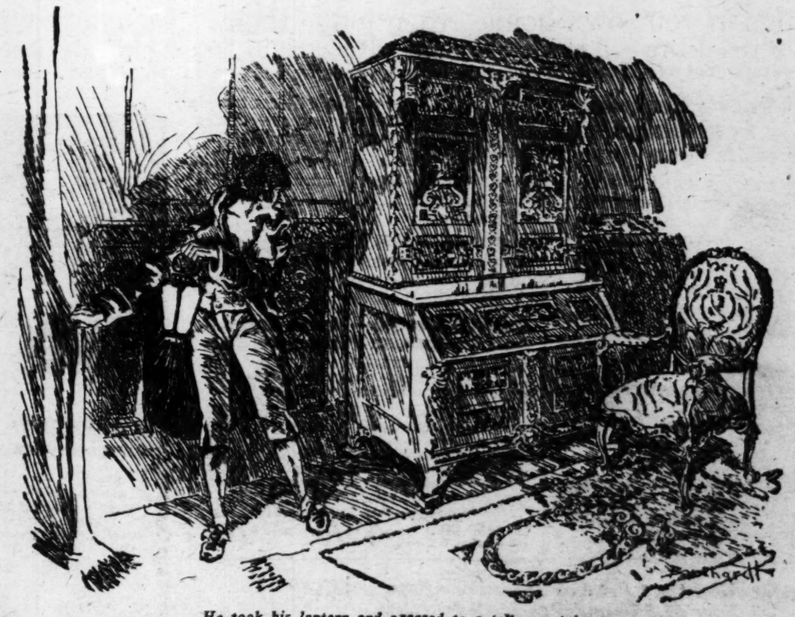
However, that attitude of his was momentary. Duroc had not come there to make philosophy, but to accomplish a purpose, and to this purpose he addressed himself forthwith. He took up his lantern and crossed to a tall secretaire that was a very gem of the court furnisher's art in the days of Louis XIV.

Setting the lantern on top of it, he drew from his pocket a bunch of skeleton keys, gripping them firmly so that they should not rattle. He stooped to examine the lock, and then on the instant came upright again, stiff and tense in his sudden alarm. A knock had fallen upon the street door, and the echo of it went reverberating through the silent house.

Duroc's lips writhed as he breathed an imprecation. The knock of a moment before was repeated, more insistent now. To the listening Duroc came the sound of a window being thrown up. He heard voices, one from above, the other replying from the street, and guessed that the awakened Clairvaux was challenging this midnight visitor before coming down to open.

Perhaps he would not come down. Perhaps he would dismiss the inopportune intruder. But that hope was soon quenched. The window went resingly down, and a moment later the flip-flop of slippered feet came shuffling on the stairs and along the passage to the door.

A key grated and a chain clanked—this Clairvaux made a Bastile of his dwelling—and then voices sounded in the passage. The door of the house closed with a soft thud. Steps and voices approached the room in which Duroc still stood, immovable, listening.



He took his lantern and crossed to a tall secretaire.

At last he stirred, realizing that he had not a moment to spare if he would escape detection. He turned, so that his back was to the door, snatched up his lantern and pressed it against his breast, so that while it might still light him forward its rays should not strike backward to betray him. Then in three strides he gained the shelter of the heavy velvet curtains that masked the window. Behind them, his back to the casement, he at last extinguished the light.

The door opened an instant later. Indeed, had Clairvaux, who entered, candle in hand, in nightcap and quilted dressing gown, bestowed an attentive look upon the curtains he would have detected the quiver that still agitated them.

After Clairvaux, came a tall young man in a long black riding coat and a conical hat that was decorated by a round tricolor cockade to advertise his patriotic sentiments. Under his arm he carried a riding whip, whose formidable quality as a weapon of offense was proclaimed by its round head in plaited leather with silver embellishments. He placed it upon a table beside his hat, and the thud with which it dropped to the wood further announced its quality.

The citizen representative, a short, stiffly built man, whose aquiline face was not without some resemblance to that of his visitor, flung himself into a gilt armchair upholstered in blue silk, near the secretaire that but a moment ago had been the object of Duroc's attention. He threw one knee over the other, and drew his quilted dressing gown about his legs.

"Well?" he demanded, his voice harsh. "What is this important communication that brings you here at such an hour as this?"

The man in the riding coat sauntered across to the fireplace. He set his back to the overmantel and the ormolu clock, with its cupids by Debureau, and faced the deputy with a smile that was almost a sneer.

"Confess, now," he said, "that but for your uneasy conscience, my cousin, you would have hesitated to admit me. But you live in the dread of your own misdeeds, with the blade of the guillotine like a sword of Damocles suspended above you, and you dare refuse no man—however unwelcome in himself—who may be the possible bearer of a warning." He laughed an irritating laugh of mockery.

"Name of a name," growled the deputy, "will you tell me what brings you here, without preamble?"

"You do not like preambles? And you a representative! Now that is odd! But there, Etienne, to put it shortly, I am thinking of emigrating."

It was the deputy's turn to become mocking: "It was worth while being roused at midnight to hear such excellent news. Emigrate, by all means, my dear Gustave. France will be well rid of you."

"And you?" Gustave asked.

"And I no less." The deputy grinned sardonically.

"Ah!" said his cousin. "That is excellent. In such a case, no doubt, you will be disposed to pay for the privilege. To carry out this plan of mine, I need your assistance, Etienne. I am practically penniless."

"Now that is a thousand pities." The deputy's voice became almost sympathetic, yet slurred by a certain note of sarcasm. "If you are penniless, so am I. What else did you expect in a member of the National Convention? Did you conceive that a representative of the sacred people—an apostle of liberty, equality and fraternity—could possibly have money at his disposal? Ah, my good cousin, I assure you that all that I possess has been offered up on the sacred altar of the nation!"

Gustave looked at him, and pursed his lips. "You had better reserve that for the National Assembly," he said. "It may sound convincing from the rostrum. Here"—he waved his hand about him at all the assembled splendors—"it sounds uncommonly like a barefaced lie."

The deputy rose with overwhelming dignity, his brows contracted. "This to me!" he asked, in a shocked tone.

"Why not? Come, come, Etienne, I am not a child, nor yet a fool. You are a man of wealth—all the world knows it, as you may discover to your cost one fine morning. These are the days of fraternity; I am your cousin, and"——

"Out of my house!" the deputy broke in, angrily. "Out of my house this instant!"

Gustave looked at him with calm eyes. "Shall I, then, go tell the National Assembly what I know of you? Must I denounce you to the Committee of Public Safety as a danger to the nation? Must I tell them that in secret you are acting as an agent of the emigres, that you plot the overthrow of the august republic?".

Clairvaux's face was livid, his eyes were bulging. He mastered himself by an effort. "Denounce all you please," he answered, in a suffocating voice. "You'll leave your own head in the basket. Sainte Guillotine! You fool! Am I a man of straw to be overthrown by the denunciation of such a thing as you? Do you think to frighten me with details of what you will do? Do you think that is the way to obtain assistance from me?"

"Seeing that no other way is possible," flashed Gustave.

"Out of my house! Go denounce me! Go to the devil! But out of here with you."

"Reflect a moment, Etienne!" The other was breathing hard, and his eyes flamed with anger—the anger of the baffled man. "I am face to face with ruin. I need but a thousand francs."

"Not a thousand sous, not a single sou from me. Be off!" Clairvaux advanced threateningly upon his cousin. "Be off!" He caught him by the lapels of his riding coat.

"Don't dare to touch me!" Gustave warned him, his voice shrilling suddenly.

However, the deputy, thoroughly enraged by now, tightened his grip, and began to thrust the other toward the door. Gustave put out a hand to the table, where his hat and whip were lying, and his fingers closed upon that ugly riding crop of his.

The rest had happened almost before he realized it; it was the blind action of suddenly overwhelming fury. He twisted out of his cousin's grasp, stepped back, holding that life preserver by its slender extremity, swung it aloft, and brought the loaded end down whistling upon the deputy's nightcapped head.

There was a horrible sound like the crunching of an eggshell, and the citizen representative dropped, crushed by the blow, and lay in a shuddering, twitching heap, while the color of his nightcap changed slowly from white to crimson under the murderer's staring eyes.

Gustave stood there, bending over the fallen man, motionless while one might count 10. His face was leaden, and his mouth foolishly open between surprise and horror at the thing he had done.

Not a sound disturbed the house; not a groan, not a movement from the fallen man. Nothing but the muffled ticking of the ormolu clock and the buzzing of a fly that had been disturbed. Still Gustave stood there in that half-crouching attitude, terror gaining upon him with every throb of his pulses.

And then suddenly a voice cut sharply upon the stillness. "Well," it asked, "and what do you propose to do now?"

Gustave came erect, stifling a scream, to confront the white face and beady eyes of Duroc, who stood considering him from between the parted curtains.

In a long silence Gustave stared, his wits working briskly the while. "Who are you?" he asked at last, his voice a hoarse whisper. "How came you here? What are you? Ah, a thief—a housebreaker!"

"At least," said Duroc, dryly, "I am not a murderer!"

"Great heaven!" said Gustave, and his wild eyes turned again upon that tragically grotesque mass that lay at his feet. "Is he—is he dead?"

"Unless his skull is made of iron," said Duroc. He came forward in that swift, noiseless fashion of his, and dropped on one knee beside the deputy. He made a brief examination. "The citizen representative represents a corpse," he said. "He is as dead as King Capet." He rose. "What are you going to do?" he asked again.

"To do?" said Gustave. "Mon Dieu! What is there to do? If he is dead"—— He checked. His knavish wits were racing now. He looked into the other's round black eyes. "You'll not betray me," he cried. "You dare not. You are in no better case than I. And there is no one else in the house. He lived all alone. He was a miserly dog, and the old woman who serves him will not be here until morning."

Duroc was watching him intently, almost without appearing to observe him. He saw the man's fingers suddenly tighten upon the life preserver with which he had already launched one man across the tide of Styx that night.

"Put that thing down," Duroc commanded sharply. "Put it down at once, or I'll send you after your cousin."

And Gustave found himself covered by a pistol. Instantly he loosed his grip of his murderous weapon. It fell with a crash beside the body of the man it had slain.

"I meant you no harm," Gustave said, panting. "Do you know what wealth he hoards in these consoles, in that secretaire? You do, for that is what you came for. Well, take it, take it all. But let me go, let me get away from this. I—I"—— He seemed to stifle in his terror.

Duroc's lipless mouth distended in a

Non-Poisonous

FREE TRIAL BOTTLE

Try Nelsine without spending a penny. We will gladly send you a trial bottle and you can put it to any test. Then, and only then, decide whether to use it or not. Don't send a penny for this bottle. Just the coupon.

This is to tell you about the recent scientific achievement which gives you an effective non-poisonous hair color restorative—a restorative which will not only bring back the natural shade to the hair, but one which you can use with absolute safety.

For years the scientists who have made this discovery, studied, worked and experimented to produce a preparation which would banish grayness and at the same time involve no risk to health or life.

Now—the work is done—the safe restorative for any gray hair is ready. Its name is Nelsine. There is nothing in it which, if absorbed by the pores of the skin or scalp, could do you the slightest harm.

Nelsine entirely eliminates the use of all ingredients which physicians or health authorities have pronounced risky or dangerous to use. It contains no salts of antimony, arsenic, barium, lead, silver, tin, copper, mercury, or any other poisonous metallic compound—no pyrogallic, picric or tannic acid, no para phenylenediamine, no anacardium, no alcohol—nor any chemicals of a similar character.

Experts who have analyzed and tested Nelsine verify these statements to the last word. They are backed by scientific testimony.

No preparation could be safer—none could give you more satisfactory results in restoring the natural shade to your hair and any physician can safely recommend this new and efficient preparation.

A Clear Liquid that Restores the Natural Shade to Any Gray Hair

Nelsine is just a clear liquid, containing harmless ingredients known to be beneficial to the hair.

Its action is not instantaneous—it is progressive, which means uniform results. You see the change coming with three applications. Soon your grayness is gone. You have regained your youthful appearance, and you have taken no risk in doing it.

It makes no difference what color your hair was before it changed; it makes no difference whether your grayness is due to age, illness, shock or any other reason. Nelsine will give your hair a youthful and perfectly natural appearance. It will not look "dyed," streaked or uneven. It will have no green, purple, reddish or metallic cast. It will be uniform throughout, brilliant and beautiful.

With Nelsine you have no experimenting, guessing or testing to do to get the preparation best suited to your shade. The one clear liquid is for every shade.

Important

Nelsine is guaranteed non-poisonous and to be safe to health and life. On each bottle you will find this statement—

Non-poisonous. Non-injurious.

We offer you Nelsine as the final scientific triumph in gray hair restoratives. We claim that it is the only non-poisonous preparation having an efficient, progressive action in giving color to the hair.

Authorities have certified to its safety and purity and any chemist can easily verify every statement we make about it. Not only has Nelsine the approval of scientific men—it has brought the most enthusiastic praise from users. Letters like the following tell what it has done:

"My hair was very gray. Nelsine restored the color and made it fluffy and full of life."

"Was gray for 25 years. Nelsine brought the former color back. Also relieved me of dandruff and stopped the hair from falling out."

We fully guarantee not only that Nelsine is absolutely non-poisonous and safe to use in restoring the natural shade, but that if it does not satisfy you for any reason whatever, it will cost you nothing.

Nelsine not only restores the natural shade to the hair—it has a beneficial tonic effect. It helps to prevent falling out, brittleness and dryness. It also banishes dandruff and gives the hair a soft, silky appearance.

Former St. Louis Physician Who was Hanged

Crippen's was stamped "Jackson, Boulevard le Nord." Le Neve's hat bore no name, but it was packed round the rim with paper to make it fit. Le Neve has the manner and appearance of a very refined, modest girl. She seems thoroughly under his thumb, and he will not leave her for a moment. Her suit is anything but a good fit. Her trousers are very tight about the hips, and are split a bit down the back and secured with a large safety-pin.

"I did not arrest them. The course I am pursuing is the best, as they have no suspicion, and, with so many passengers, it prevents any excitement. They have been under strict observation all the voyage, as if they smelt a rat he might do something rash. I have not noticed a revolver in his hip pocket. He continually shaves his upper lip, and his beard is growing nicely. I often see him stroking it and seeming pleased, looking more like a farmer every day. The mark on the nose caused through wearing spectacles has not worn off since coming on board.

"He sits about on the deck reading, or pretending to read, and both seem to be thoroughly enjoying all their meals. They have not been sea-sick, and I have discussed various parts of the world with him. He knows Toronto, Detroit, and California well and says he is going to take his boy to California for his health (meaning Miss Le Neve). Has in conversation used several medical terms. • • •

...at the crime committed, she appears to be a girl with a very weak will. She has to follow him everywhere. If he looks at her she gives him an endearing smile, as though she were under his hypnotic influence.

"Crippen was very restless on sighting Belle Isle, and asked where we stopped for the pilot, how he came off, how far from the pilot station to Quebec, and said he would be glad when we arrived, as he was anxious to get to Detroit. I had them both in my room talking over various things connected with the United States, mostly about San Francisco. Crippen says he does not suppose he would know it now, as he had not been there since he was 18 years of age, but how he loved California, and said he thought of settling down on a nice fruit farm there.

"(Signed) KENDALL, Commander."

Meanwhile, in London, patient and careful investigations and analysis of the human remains were being conducted by Dr. Augustus Pepper, Dr. Bernard Spilsbury, Dr. W. H. Willcox and Dr. A. P. Luff, in order to determine the sex of the dead person and the means of death. By a process of analysis lasting nearly three weeks with various tests for animal mydriatic alkaloids, it was at least agreed by all the great experts in poisons that the sex was female, and that the cause of death was hyoscin hydrobromide, the drug which Crippen had purchased on the eighteenth of January.

Further, by a scar upon the skin left by an old operation, the recovered remains were identified as part of the mutilated body of Belle Elmore. The head and bones were missing, but it is believed that Crippen had taken them in a bag when he went on his Easter trip with the girl to Dieppe, and in the night dropped them into the sea.

Crippen's guilt was now established, and at once Inspector Dew was dispatched in hot haste to get to Quebec before the arrival of the Montrose. He succeeded in arriving at Father Point on July 31, and in the guise of a pilot boarded the steamer and confronted the fugitive greatly to their consternation. Upon Crippen was a card bearing the word: "I cannot stand the horror I go through every night any longer, and as I see nothing bright ahead, and money has come to an end, I have made up my mind to jump overboard tonight."

So, in due course, Inspector Dew brought home the assassin and his mistress, and on Oct. 18, 1910, Crippen appeared at the Old Bailey before Lord Chief Justice.

The trial, one of the most sensational in the annals of the British courts, lasted four days.

Of all the persons in court, Crippen was the most unmoved, for his quiet coolness and imperturbability remained unruffled even during those hideous moments when portions of his wife's skin were handed in a soup plate to the jury for inspection.

Apparently after his sentence he had no thought for himself, but only for the girl Le Neve. He asked that two letters be received from her and her photograph should be buried with him, and this request was acceded to.

Four days after Crippen had been sentenced, the girl Le Neve was tried at the same court, charged before the Lord Chief Justice with being an accessory after the fact of Mrs. Crippen's murder, but after a hearing lasting a whole day was found not guilty and acquitted.

Two days prior to his execution, Crippen wrote a letter to Miss Le Neve, a copy of which was obtained by Mr. Filson Young.

"I feel sure my troubles and worries here soon will be ended, as I shall be tomorrow in God's hands, and I have perfect faith. He will let my spirit be with you always, and after this earthly separation is finished will join our souls forever."

This letter, awkward in its phrasing but very eloquent in its sincerity, brings home to us the power of the infatuation for Ethel Le Neve which was the motive for the crime. That infatuation was irresistible. It gave an obscure little middle-aged doctor, shrinking and nervous, the strength and the terrible courage to carry through his grim task of murder and mutilation in the house at Hilldrop Crescent.

Permalloy Speeds Up Cable Service

cessful tests, the Western Union placed its order for the 2400 miles of permalloy-loaded cable, which now has been successfully laid between New York City and Horta, in the Azores, and is in successful operation. The work was done by the steamship Colonia, owned by the Telegraph Construction and Maintenance Co. and the largest vessel in the world designed exclusively for submarine cable work. She is 487 feet long and carries a complement of 150 men.

As the Colonia steamed westward at a steady speed of something less than eight nautical miles an hour, she flew the cable sign, the internationally recognized signal that the ship which shows it is engaged in cable laying, and must be given a wide berth by all other vessels. This sign consists of two red canvas globes with a white canvas diamond between them, hung vertically in the rigging. They are about two feet in diameter, and are hung six feet apart. By night, the cable sign is lanterns arranged vertically, the top and bottom ones red and the middle lantern white.

The deep-sea section of the new cable is just an inch in diameter, or somewhat smaller than the diameter of a golf ball, and weighs 2.2 pounds to the foot in air. For the sections closer to shore the protective sheathing is thicker and thicker as the water gets shallower, since it is in the shallow water that there is danger of damage from stormy waters, shifting sands, abrasions of sharp rocks, icebergs which go ashore and grind the bottom, anchors of ships and nets of steam trawlers. Even in deep water, cables have been put out of commission by ships which sank athwart them. The portions of the cable for shallowest water receive successive casings of jute and wire reinforcements until they weigh as much as 34 pounds to the foot in the air.

The copper conductor consists of a round wire, 146-thousandths of an inch in diameter, around which are wound spirally six copper tapes with their edges in contact and their under surfaces touching the copper wire. Then comes the strip of permalloy, "bedded" in a special compound to distribute the pressure equally. The total diameter of the copper conductor and its wrapping of permalloy tape is just a fraction short of one-fifth of an inch—all the rest of the cable is for the insulation and protection of this little conductor.

Next comes the insulation, formed of three successive layers of guttapercha. Over it is placed the first layer of protective armor—jute yarn which has been steeped in a preservative liquid and which is wound tightly around the guttapercha, while outside of it are wound two whippings of hemp yarn, spiraling in the other direction. Next in the new cable are 18 armor, or sheathing, wires of galvanized steel, each wire wrapped with insulating tape and coated with a preservative.

Once more the cable is wrapped, this time with two servings of three-ply jute yarn, saturated in coal tar and wound spirally. Between the sheathing wires and the first layer of jute is applied a coating of preservative compound, laid on hot. Another coating is applied, between the two layers of jute and a third layer which completes the cable, over the outer coating of jute. For portions laid in shallow water, there are successive casings of jute and wire reinforcements, as explained above.

Only on a few cables, running to places where traffic is comparatively light, is hand-sending with a key employed today. The modern operator sits in front of a device which is operated just like a typewriter. When the operator presses the key for a certain letter, as "A," for example, the machine automatically punches the dots and dashes of the code upon a moving slip of paper. Then the tape is fed into an automatic sending machine, which puts the message on the cable.

The faster the sending speed the faster the receiving tape has to be drawn under the tiny glass ink-siphon at the other end, and the flatter and less distinct are the curves marked on the receiving tape. Only the most expert operators can read the tape of 250 letters a minute with sufficient accuracy to copy off on the typewriter and keep up with the messages as they come.

A new system will be followed with the "permalloy-loaded" cable, and it is interesting to note that many of the men who have had most to do with the development of the new cable and its accompanying apparatus are radio experts.

For the first time in submarine cable practice, the electron tubes which are familiar to every radio amateur will be used to amplify the signals received over the cable. The recording of messages will be done, too, by means not heretofore used in cable work.

Instead of being read from the tape by an operator, they will be automatically translated into letters and words by automatic typewriting machines which operate on the same principle as the familiar printing telegraph, now in such general use that more than 70 per cent of all telegrams handled by the Western Union are received in this manner.

whole section was captured. We were taken to the Moor prison at Beni Saida. The Moors lined us up and picked out every other man. They took the men on both sides of me, marched them out in front, severed their heads, then their ears, placing the ears in the mouths, and then forced the living to carry the heads to the burying grounds. After three days in the prison camp, Otto Schultz, a German lad who also had been shanghaied, and I escaped and returned to our organization.

"The commanding officer told us it was too bad the Moors didn't kill us and let some of the good men loose. After several more days at Uad Lau we went back to the front. In a skirmish I was shot in the right leg and went back to the first-aid station. The doctor ordered me back to the front. Returning, I picked up a wounded comrade, and as I started to carry him back to the first-aid station I was shot in the right ankle. I was then permitted to remain in the hospital for a few days. I still suffer from the wounds.

"I went back to the front in September and played like I had lost my mind. I was sent back to the hospital and ordered to the front again within a short time. At Gorgeous, George and Tom Wilson, brothers from Vivien, W. Va., were wounded in the legs, and George lost one leg by amputation.

"We got hold of a Spanish newspaper which reported four or five persons killed in the fighting and the Spanish rapidly gaining ground. The truth of the matter is that more than 5000 were killed or wounded and the Moors were advancing. I then contracted the fever and went back to the hospital. On Oct. 14 I started with a convoy to Xuaen. We were attacked on the way and had an awful time getting through. We were 19 days without food or water.

"On Armistice Day the Carenco, bound for Italy, whistled in the harbor. For several days I had been away from my organization, and the boat pulled out 20 minutes after I had found refuge in the tank room. We stopped one day at Melilla, a city in enemy territory, but the Moors did not search the boat. I arrived in Genoa four days later and related my experience to Mr. Osborne, the American Consul. He required me to make affidavits and he said an investigation would be held at Washington."

Harold states that the American Consul at Genoa, Italy, took his affidavit and then got him a job on the steamship Liberty Bell, which brought him to Galveston, Y. M. C. A. officials at Houston, Tex., supplied the young adventurer with transportation to his home.

The foregoing account of Harold Ewing's adventures is written from a personal interview with him, at Wichita. The Post-Dispatch Bureau at Washington, which investigated the story from the official standpoint, adds four years to the age of Harold, and alters the story slightly in some other respects. The rest of this article is wired from Washington:

Harold Ewing of Wichita, Kan., although only 23 years old, had enough adventures in Europe and Africa last year to satisfy him a lifetime, according to an affidavit he made in Genoa, which has just become available here.

Following is a brief list of the episodes of his Odyssey, which stretched from his home on Estelle avenue in Wichita, to Germany, Spain and the Barbary coast, back to Kansas: Shanghied, escaped, captured; captured, escaped; wounded, cared for; escaped, befriended and returned home.

According to his affidavit, which is on record, Ewing signed up on the German freighter Freifeld for a trip to Hamburg. Here he was paid off. Several weeks later he was approached by two Spaniards who induced him and six others, after several rounds of drinks in a Hamburg cabaret, to sign papers in German, which was explained as a necessary preliminary for jobs on the Spanish vessel Byron, due to sail the next day for South America.

As agreed, Ewing and his companions boarded the Byron the next day under the impression they would sail to South America. Two days later, however, the boat put in at the Spanish port Gijon on the Bay of Biscay and six Spanish soldiers with fixed bayonets took them to a barracks, where the party was placed under guard.

From Gijon the party was taken under armed escort to Alpiarca, then to Ceuta, where the men were given Spanish uniforms and rifles, yet kept under guard. Their real training began there, as they were enrolled in the Fifth "Banero" of the Spanish Foreign Legion and sent to Darrifin, preparatory to actual fighting against the Riffs, who were making it hot for the Spanish in that North African protectorate.

By this time, however, the Kansas boy decided he would rather be on his native prairies or on the sea than under Spanish discipline and Moorish fire. He and four other new members of the legion attempted to escape in a rowboat, using rough pieces of timber for oars. They started at 11 p. m., but after 13 hours of futile rowing they were picked up by a Spanish cruiser and returned to Cueta. For this offense they were put in separate towers on short rations for two months. Later they were transferred to a fortress in the mountains, where they were kept a week.

Again Ewing was put in the lines against the Riffs, and he and a German were captured. They escaped two days later to the Spanish lines. In a later engagement, Ewing was wounded twice in the right leg and sent to a hospital. Here he remained for only five days and then was sent back to the lines with his wounds still unhealed. Between Sept. 5 and the latter part of October he had two attacks of fever, but received no consideration from the Spanish, Ewing said in his deposition.

On or about Nov. 1, Ewing again escaped from Cueta. Two or three days later he met a messboy and a sailor from the American ship Clarence. The messboy lent him a coat to hide his Spanish uniform and he stowed himself away on the American boat, which took him to Genoa, where Ewing made the affidavit before Consul Osborn on Nov. 24, 1924.

The affidavit gave only a bare recital of facts and no descriptions of the horrors young Ewing must have encountered if his story is true. State Department officials will make no comment on the case, explaining that to do so might jeopardize negotiations now under way for release of several other Americans still serving in the Spanish army. At one time the department had record of 10 members of the Spanish Foreign Legion claiming American protection. Most of these have been released, officials said.

The State Department protested to Spain two years ago that Spanish agents were enlisting men in the United States to fight in the Spanish army. It was contended then that the agents were making false representations in their attempts to get men. Spain withdrew the agents. Since then the complaints have come from abroad.

What Did She Do To Win Him?

How a demure little wren of a girl was changed almost over-night into an attractive fluff-of-Parisian woman—how she who had been neglected by her young male acquaintances suddenly became a center of attraction, and within a few weeks the radiant bride of the man she had loved in vain for years—this is the theme of a letter received today. Hundreds of other letters just as wonderful have come to us voluntarily from readers of our new, revolutionary book dealing not with sex, but with psychology, "Fascinating Womanhood" shows how any woman who understands certain peculiarities about man's psychology can attract and win the love of practically any man she chooses.

While the Clock Ticked

smile. "Am I detaining you?" he asked. "You didn't suppose I was going to drag you to the nearest corps de garde, did you? Go, man, if you want to go. In your place, I should have gone already."

Gustave stared at him almost incredulously, as if doubting his own good fortune. Then suddenly perceiving the motives that swayed the other, and asking nothing better for himself than to be gone, he turned, and, without another word, fled from the room and the house, his one anxiety to put as great a distance between himself and his crime as possible.

Duroc watched that sudden scared flight, still smiling. Then he coolly crossed the room; took up the dead man's candle and placed it upon the secretaire. He pulled up a chair—there was no longer any need to proceed with caution—sat down and, producing his keys and a chisellike instrument, he went diligently to work to get at the contents of this secretaire.

Like a flash Gustave had gone the length of the Rue de la Harpe, driven ever by his terror of the consequences of his deed. But as he neared the corner of the Cordeliers, he was brought suddenly to a halt by the measured tread of approaching steps.

He knew it at once for the march of a patrol, and his consciousness of what he had done made him fearful of meeting these servants of the law, who might challenge him and demand to know whence he was and whither he went at such an hour—for the new reign of universal liberty had imposed stern limitations upon individual freedom.

He vanished into the darkness of a doorway, and crouched there to wait until these footsteps should have faded again into the distance. And it was in those moments as he leaned there, panting, that his fiendishly wicked notion first assailed him. He turned it over in his mind, and in the gloom one might have caught the gleam of his teeth as he smiled evilly to himself.

He was his cousin's heir. Could he but fasten the guilt of that murder upon the thief he had left so callously at work in the very room where the body lay, then never again need he know want. And the thief, being a thief, deserved no less.

He had no doubt at all that the fellow would never have hesitated to do the murder had it been forced upon him by circumstances. He reflected further, and realized how aptly set was the stage for such a comedy as he had in mind. Had not that fool compelled him to drop the very weapon with which the deputy's skull had been smashed?

No single link was missing in the main chain of complete evidence against the thief. Gustave realized that here was a chance sent him by friendly fortune. Tomorrow it would be too late. In seeking his cousin's murderer, the authorities would ascertain that he was the one man who stood to profit by the citizen representative's death, and, having discovered that, they would compel him to render an account of his movements that night. They would cross-question and confound him, seeing that he could give no such account as they would demand.

He was resolved. He would act at once. Not three minutes had sped since he had left that house, and it was impossible that in the meantime the thief could have done his work and taken his departure.

And so upon that fell resolve he flung out of his concealment and ran on up the street toward the Cordeliers to meet the advancing patrol, shouting as he went: "Stop, thief! Stop, thief!"

He heard the patrol quickening their steps in response to his cry, and presently he found himself face to face with four men of the National Guard, who, as it chanced, were accompanied by an agent of the section in civilian dress and a scarf of office.

"Down there," he cried, pointing back down the street, "a thief has broken into the house of my cousin—my cousin, the Citizen Representative Clairvaux." He gathered importance, he knew, from this proclamation of his relationship with one of the great ones of the convention.

However, the agent of the section paused to question him. "Why did you not follow him, citizen?"

"I am without weapons, and I bethought me he would probably be armed. Besides, I heard you approaching in the distance, and I thought it best to run to summon you, and thus we make sure of taking him."

The agent considered him, his white face—seen in the light of the lantern carried by the patrol—his shaking limbs and gasping speech, and concluded that he had to deal with an arrant coward, nor troubled to conceal his contempt.

"In the name of Jove!" he growled. "And meantime the citizen representative may have been murdered in his bed."

"I pray not! Oh, I pray not!" Gustave cried, pantingly. "Quickly, citizens, quickly! Terrible things may happen while we stand here."

They went down the street at a run to the house of Clairvaux, whose door they found open, as Gustave had left it when he departed.

"Where did he break in?" asked one of the guards.

"By the door," said Gustave. "He had keys, I think. Oh, quick!"

In the passage he perceived a faint gleam of light to assure him that the thief was still at work. He swung round to them and raised a hand. "Quietly!" he whispered. "Quietly, so that we do not disturb him."

The patrol thrust forward, and entered the house in his wake. He led them straight toward the half-open door of the study, from which the light was issuing, as if to guide them. He flung wide the door, and entered, while the men crowding after him came to a sudden halt upon the threshold in sheer amazement at what they beheld.

At their feet lay the body of the Citizen Representative Clairvaux in a raiment that in itself seemed to proclaim how hastily he had risen from his bed to deal with this midnight intruder; and there at the secretaire, now open, its drawers broken and their contents scattered all about the floor, sat Duroc, white-faced, his beady rat's eyes considering them.

Gustave broke into lamentations at sight of his cousin's body. "We are too late! Mon Dieu, we are too late! He is dead—dead. And, look! here is the weapon with which he was slain; And here sits the murderer—caught in the very act. Seize him! Ah, scoundrel!" he raged, shaking his fist in the thief's white, startled face. "You shall be made to pay for this!"

"Comedian!" said Duroc.

"Seize him; seize him!" cried Gustave, in a frenzy.

The guards sprang across the room, and laid hands upon Duroc to prevent his having recourse to any weapons.

Duroc looked up at them, blinking. Then his eyes shifted to Gustave, and suddenly he laughed. "Now see what a fool a man is who will not seize the chances that are offered him," he said. "After that villain had bludgeoned his cousin to death, I bade him go. He might have made good his escape, and I should have said no word to betray him. Instead, he thinks to make me his scapegoat."

Duroc shrugged and rose under the hands of his captors. Then he pulled his coat open and displayed a round, leaden disc the size of a five-franc piece, bearing in relief the arms of the republic.

At sight of it the hands that had been holding him instantly fell away.

The agent of the section stepped forward, frowning. "What does this mean?" he asked, but in a tone that was almost of respect, realizing he stood in the presence of an officer of the secret service of the republic, whom no man might detain save at his peril.

"I am Duroc of the Committee of Public Safety," was the quiet answer. "The executive had cause to think that the Citizen Representative Clairvaux was in correspondence with the enemies of France. I came secretly to examine his papers and to discover who are his correspondents. Here is what I sought." And he held up a little sheaf of documents, which he had separated from the rest. "I will wish you good night, citizens. I must report at once to the Citizen Deputy Robespierre. Since that fellow has come back, take him to the Luxembourg. Let the committee of the section deal with him tomorrow. I shall forward my report."

Gustave shook himself out of his sudden paralysis to make a dash for the door. But the guards closed with him, and held him fast, while Duroc of the Committee of Public Safety passed out with dignity, in spite of his torn breeches.

KARRYING KANSAS TO KOOLIDGE

This pretty farm girl will carry to the White House next Thursday a two-ounce sack of the Kansas wheat which was harvested by President Harding when he visited the Sunflower State in 1923, shortly before his death. She is Miss Vada Watson, and will tell President Coolidge that "Kansas Grows the Best Wheat in the World"—that being the slogan of The Kansans, an organization that staged a recent beauty contest in which Miss Watson won out over hundreds of girls. She is in college at Sterling, Kan., but lives on a farm near Turon, Kan.

These are blue-white Persians, named Icicle and Snowshine, owned by Mrs. I. Sharkey of Mays Landing, N. J., and posed for this picture at the recent Philadelphia Cat Show.

A HANDSOME GIRL SCOUT

This is Miss Evelina Gleaves (remember that old song, "Sweet Evalina?") She is a daughter of Rear Admiral Albert Gleaves of the U. S. Navy, lives in Washington, D. C., and is director of the Girl Scouts there. Last summer she represented her organization at the International Girl Scout Camp in Europe.

RICHEST INDIANS VISITING THE PRESIDENT

President Coolidge has been entertaining some really 100 per cent Americans—this group of Osage Indians from Osage County, Ok. They went to Washington to ask him just why it is that they are drawing only $4000 a year apiece as oil land royalties, when the lands are alleged to produce enough to give each of them $12,000 a year in royalties. This method of approach or appeal is lots nicer than to take the tomahawk to a fellow.

MARRIAGE IN MANY LANDS

HUSBAND BY PURCHASE

Among tribes of Central Africa the prospective bridegroom must bring a flock of goats or cattle and be prepared to purchase the girl of his choice.

AN ORNAMENTAL BRIDEGROOM

The wedding bouquet is worn by the bridegroom, in Saxony, while his bride goes rather quietly dressed. The flowers are fastened to the man's hat.

WHERE MARRIAGE DIGNIFIES

It is marriage, only, which gives civil rights to the people of Korea, who are regarded as children until they wed, no matter at what age.

ORNATE COSTUMES

The usual frugality of life in Hesse, Germany, is thrown to the winds on the occasion of a wedding. The costume of the bridegroom lags little behind that of the bride in ornateness.

MUSIC AND PROCESSION

A wedding in Sweden. The village fiddler leads the happy pair and their attendants to the church where the ceremony will be performed.

A BRIDAL CROWN

The richness of the bride's coronet, in Norway, depends solely on the prosperity of the families thus connected—perhaps a survival of an ancient pagan custom.

A SERIOUS EVENT

Solemnity characterizes the wedding in Japan, even extending to the feast. Here the bride, groom, family and friends are seated at individual tables. Along the side wall are ranged singing girls, hired for the occasion.

TWO AT A TIME

Two brides who were married on the same day to the chief of a village along the upper reaches of the Amazon, where polygamy is common in a very primitive part of South America.

FURS AS FINERY

Dainty finery has no place in life in the frozen North, but when two Eskimos get married they don their finest furs and go to the house of the village chief, who makes them man and wife.

GORGEOUS RAIMENT

Pomp and ceremony mark a wedding among well-to-do families in China. Dressed in their best, the happy pair are led to a temple, where they kneel and vow eternal devotion to each other.

The Town Club building is a colonial design, built of reinforced concrete, faced in brick and trimmed with Bedford stone. Seven stories high. The first and second stories are devoted to commercial purposes. The lounge occupies the entire third floor. The fourth floor comprises the cafeteria and short order kitchen. The sixth floor: office, committee rooms, and a series of private dining-rooms. The auditorium is on the seventh floor and the entire basement is devoted to a modern swimming pool.

The Town Club is composed exclusively of women—business, professional and home women. The main features of the club include programs to which prominent speakers from all over the country contribute. Cards, dances, theatricals, lectures, book reviews, musical programs, and art displays form other features.

The entire project was carried to fruition by the Town Club Investment Company of which Margaret Barry is president and Myrtle Wood is secretary. The financing is unique in that it was accomplished without an increase in dues or assessment against the membership.

The investment represents an expenditure of $400,000. The architects were Mauran, Russell and Crowell.

The Town Club

WHAT AND WHY IT IS

The Town Club is an organization of women—business, professional and homekeeping women—who are interested in the social, civic and economic advance of Saint Louis. The young mother, the young business woman, the young woman just out of college, is just beginning to realize the new responsibilities awaiting her—the new freedom thrust upon her. "We are tapping a reservoir of possibilities when women begin to use not only their generalized womanliness, but their special abilities."

The Town Club, through its program, endeavors to keep women in touch with the subjects of the hour which are receiving the thought of noted men and women throughout the world. It does not endorse any movement—its purpose being discussion and education—leaving conclusions to the individual.

Its purpose is serious—its method that of mutual helpfulness toward a distinct aim—the betterment of mankind—the advance of St. Louis.

REM stops cough of newspaper man

(Baltimore, Md., Special Dispatch to REM.)

Mr. John C. Meyers, Ad Foreman of the Composing Room of The Baltimore News, is now free of the cough he contracted some weeks ago.

He's all "set up" about the way in which he disposed of the cough and managed to stick to his job. It took just half a bottle of REM.

When interviewed by your correspondent, Mr. Meyers issued the following statement:

"I caught a bad cough while motoring a couple of weeks ago and it stuck to me for a long time.

"It's especially hard for me to get rid of a cough when I get one, for I work in the composing room and it's always pretty hot there. The molten metal in the linotype machines keeps the air very hot.

"When I get a cough the ordinary remedies aren't worth a cuss, but REM does the work for me and does it in short order. A half bottle is usually enough to knock out the worst cough I get.

"My wife and son, too, think there's nothing like REM for coughs."

So many who have tried REM speak of the quick relief it brings.

This quick action is largely due to a special ingredient — effective, harmless — not found in ordinary cough syrups. Clinging to your throat as it is swallowed, REM quickly begins its work of quieting your cough.

No Opiates in REM. And pleasant to take.

Ask your druggist for REM—the blue package with the round orange label. If it doesn't help you, you can have your money back. Fair enough!
